BOAT SINKS; 7 'SCOUTS' DIE

SWIFT JUSTICE PUTS CHECK ON DETROIT CRIME

Trial in Week Scares Crooks Away.

BY J. L. JENKINS.

Detroit, Mich., March 25.—[Special.]—"One Shot Jimmie" got himself assigned to the jail hospital today and scrawled a letter to a pal in Pittsburgh.

"Lay off Detroit," he advised. "It's copper. The job's off and I'm in. If you got to lam, take it east or lay up in Chicago."

"What's the idea of leaving Detroit fast?" Jimmie was asked.

"They are liable to pinch you any time."

"Y-e-es," he added, "that's right. Just look me over. One job with a gun. I'm pinched last night. This is today and I'm all through; no bail; trial over and me doin' my hitch already. They don't give you no chance at all in this town. I'm off it."

Trials Within a Week.

Some 400 others of Jimmie's criminal type agree with him perfectly. They are in jail after standing trial within one week after their arrest. Detroit's crime list has been reduced 58 per cent in the year 1921 simply through the reorganized court system which brings prisoners to trial immediately after their arrest, instead of keeping them dangling between freedom and justice for months, and which clears the court docket week by week.

This astonishing court record and its consequent reduction of all major crimes in Detroit is credited to three results of the court reorganization in April, 1920, according to criminal authorities. The reorganization reduced the delay in trying accused persons to an absolute minimum.

The present court organization is simple. It operates along lines somewhat similar to the Criminal court system in Chicago, but has been carried out to a much greater success. Under the old system two separate courts handled the crime budget—the police court, or lower court, and the recorder's court.

Courts Are Combined.

The reorganization combined both court branches under one head, known officially as the recorder's court and commonly called the Municipal court. It took for the first time in the history of criminal jurisprudence exclusive jurisdiction over all felonies, misdemeanors, and ordinances.

Seven judges are normally active in the court. They elected one of their members as presiding judge for the term of one year to direct all court work. Judge William Heston presides at present. In him is centralized authority which speeds the disposal of all trials and he is also charged with keeping in harmony all parts of the court's machinery.

Before the reorganization, many accused persons, innocent in the eyes of the law, were compelled to wait for months in the county jail before being granted a trial. Now an accused person can have trial within two or three days of his arrest.

Docket Cleared Daily.

When the court reorganized there were 2,000 untried felony cases on the docket. The latest report shows 32 felony cases to be tried. In addition to disposing of these old cases during 1921, the court kept pace with the 4,638 felony cases which appeared and also tried 18,000 misdemeanor cases. The leftover docket is clear and the slate is practically cleaned daily of all cases which come in.

The leftover docket was cleared in big time after the reorganization by the nolle prossing of a number of old cases.

Then the new system began to hum. Preference was first given to defendants confined in jail while awaiting trial, the older jail cases coming first. Then came the oldest bail cases, with preference given on the docket to the more serious crimes.

As a result, in less than a year after the system was started only 120 prisoners were in jail awaiting action in the seven courts, none of them having been confined more than a month.

Trial on Day of Arrest.

Today the average time required to pass through the court rests on the defendant. If he waives examination on a felony charge following arrest he is arraigned on information the same day. If a plea of guilty is entered, he is either sentenced or his case is referred to the probation department or the psychopathic clinic for investigation. Under the old system the prisoner might be bound over for two months awaiting trial.

The new court declared war at once

McCormick of Chicago, has sold his stable to a brother officer in the Swiss army and is preparing to leave Zurich within a few days, ostensibly to visit relatives in western Switzerland.

Oser personally refuses to give any further information concerning his movements, but neighbors said today that he would sail for the United States early in April to spend Easter with his bride-to-be and be presented to the McCormick and Rockefeller families.

The neighbors of Oser also said he would take with him a member of the Mangold family, one daughter of which is now Miss McCormick's companion.

STAGE WARNED BY RABBI TO REFORM

Wise Sees Drastic Censor Cure for Theater.

The theater in America will be subjected to the most rigid censorship, and that soon, unless it institutes immediate, drastic reforms, Rabbi Stephen S. Wise of New York declared in an interview at the Congress hotel last night.

RABBI STEPHEN S. WISE.

Rabbi Wise, who recently startled New York by saying that he would not even tar and feather some of the producers and actors appearing on Broadway, "for even the pitch would be defiled," declared that "either the theater will cleanse itself, and at the earliest possible moment, or we will rule it with the rod of censorship.

"This is true alike of the spoken drama and the motion picture play," he said.

Menace to Health.

"The theater, at its best, is one of the great institutions of society. At its worst, the theater is in danger of becoming such a menace to health as is the cesspool and its putrescent sewage, and that menace is now present in some of the vile things that are being perpetrated in New York.

"I repeat," Rabbi Wise said, "let the theater see to itself, or the public will insist on ironclad censorship, although censorship is always far from being an altogether beneficent institution.

"It must be done for the sake of the young, for unfortunately society is suffering today because of its acceptance of the maxim that youth must and will have its fling.

Gold Coast Sets Fashion.

"Some women have no sense of fitness and modesty, and only they can compete with her who are ready to be still more vulgar than she, and as a consequence so-called society comes to be in no small part a matter of competition in semi-nudity and all that this means.

"Packingtown does not set the fashion for the gold coast, but the gold coast does set the fashion for those back of the yards and others like them. Ineffable mischief is therefore wrought by those at the top of the social ladder; the evil does not come from the bottom."

JIM O'LEARY FINED AS GAMBLER—HIS FIRST OFFENSE, TOO

James O'Leary, in the eyes of the law, is a gambler. This stigma against his reputation became official yesterday, when, despite his thirty years' experience in the marts of change, during which time he has made books on anything from a presidential candidate's chances to the possibilities of the weather, he was fined $100 as a first offender.

JAMES O'LEARY.

The fine was levied by Judge Timothy D. Hurley in the Criminal court, who also assessed a similar fine against James Ledwell, O'Leary's brother-in-law, and Martin Berlin, an aid.

The charges against O'Leary, whose establishment at 4183 South Halsted street had been raided innumerable times by city, county, state and federal officials, is the outgrowth of a visit by officers from the state's attorney's office on Feb. 17, 1921.

Entrance was gained only after doors of steel and oak had been broken in and roulette tables, cards, slot machines and a large supply of other gambling paraphernalia was confiscated. It took a jury an hour to decide on O'Leary's guilt after it had seen all the evidence.

AVIATOR TELLS HOW FIVE DIED IN OCEAN TRAGEDY

Exhausted, Went to Death One by One.

Miami, Fla., March 25.—A tragedy of the sea, in which husbands and wives clung to the framework of a disabled seaplane drifting in the straits of Florida until one by one they died of exhaustion or slowly slipped into the water and were swallowed up by the waves, was brought to light here today.

Tormented by thirst, buffeted by waves, the five victims fought death for days. Crazed by suffering and by the horror of seeing their loved ones perish—powerless to aid—they all succumbed at last save Robert Moore, pilot of the plane, who was picked up by the tanker William Greene.

Moore Brought to Shore.

Moore mumbled his incoherent story to Capt. William Wachsmuth. Tonight Moore is lying half conscious and delirious in a hospital here. He was taken from the tanker by a United States submarine chaser a few miles from Miami and brought to shore.

Two women members of the seaplane party died from exposure and hunger after Moore, his own strength gradually growing weaker, had held them to the wreckage of the plane. The fifth passenger, a man, was able to cling to the wreckage until Friday afternoon, when he slipped off from exhaustion and drowned. Moore said he made frantic efforts to rescue him, but lacked the necessary strength.

The Five Victims.

The five passengers were Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence E. Smith and Mr. and Mrs. August Bulte, all of Kansas City, Mo., and Mrs. John S. Dickson of Memphis, Tenn.

Shortly after the boat left Miami Wednesday morning on the ill fated trip to Bimini island one of the propeller blades broke and it was forced down. The craft rode the waves in safety and without much difficulty, drifting northward in the Gulf stream. No trouble developed until Thursday morning, when something struck against the hull of the boat and it began to leak.

Men and women took turns at using the pump until all became too weak to keep it up. Thursday night Mrs. Smith became crazed and jumped overboard. Her husband jumped overboard after her and both disappeared beneath the waves.

Captain Tells of Rescue.

"It was only an act of Providence that Moore was rescued at all," said Capt. Wachsmuth.

"It was gathering dusk and I had just come out of my cabin for one last look before going below when far off I saw an object in the water, which, on using my glasses, I made out to be a man waving something."

The tanker was swung as close to the object as possible and although a high sea was running a small boat was lowered. As the sailors reached the overturned flying boat Moore collapsed into their arms and it was some time before he regained consciousness.

On board the tanker Moore was administered to by Mrs. J. Stewart Williams, wife of a consulting engineer. In his delirium Moore fancied that she was his mother.

"Mother, you made me give up the automobile racing game, please don't take my plane away," he repeated over and over again.

Cling to Crippled Plane.

Moore's almost incoherent story gave but a faint idea of the scene as, tortured by thirst, drenched with every wave, clinging with numbing fingers to the crippled flying boat, the husbands and wives watched each other fight off death hour after hour.

They frequently searched the sky line for some sign of a sail, but although they were only twenty-five or thirty miles from shore no vessel came near enough during the days of their distress to see their signals. One of the searching seaplanes passed directly overhead but failed to notice them.

After Mr. and Mrs. Smith were drowned, the four left on board had a mental pictures of that tragedy to add to their distress.

Women Grow Weaker.

The two women grew steadily weaker, until every wave threatened to wash them away from the flimsy wreckage to which they clung. Moore aided them to hold on, until finally one and then the other slipped into the sea.

The only passenger left—Mr. Bulte—managed to cling to the wreckage for many hours, but yesterday afternoon he weakened and followed his fellow passengers to death.

Capt. Wachsmuth said that at dawn

3 Masters and Boys Drowned at Dowagiac

South Bend, Ind., March 25.—Seven persons—four Boy Scouts, a Scout executive, and two scoutmasters—were drowned this afternoon in Magician lake, about ten miles northwest of Dowagiac, Mich., when a steel motor boat which they occupied foundered in the rough waters of the lake. The persons drowned, none of whose bodies have been recovered, all were residents of this city. They are:

Scout Executive Joseph Taylor.
James Taylor, 10, his son.
Vernon C. Murphy, Scoutmaster.
Judson Taylor, Scoutmaster.
Clinton Matthews.
Kenneth Burroughs.
William Kingsley.

Only Sixty Rods from Shore.

The fatality took place sixty rods from the shore after the party had left for an island in the center of the lake, on which the Boy Scouts were establishing a new camp for the summer.

Several trips had been made to the island earlier in the day, and on the last trip there were seven persons aboard. The coroner of Dowagiac gave it as his opinion that the boat was overloaded.

Scout Executive Taylor and his little son were the last to go down. Fifty feet of water separated them from rescue by W. C. Harper, who had driven one of the automobiles in which the scouts made the trip to the lake from South Bend.

Assistance Comes Too Late.

From the shore he saw the boat go down on an even keel, and saw the party floundering in the water. He procured a leaky rowboat and pulled frantically against the rough waters to the scene, only to arrive too late.

There were fifteen in the party from South Bend and eight have been accounted for. The party left Boy Scout headquarters in South Bend early this morning to prepare the camp site for the boys who were to use it during the summer.

CYCLOPS "NOTE" IN BOTTLE TELLS OF U-BOAT TRAP

Beaufort, N. C., March 25.—A bottle containing a note purporting to be signed by an engineer aboard the navy collier Cyclops, which disappeared at sea in 1917, was picked up today northeast of Cape Lookout lighthouse.

The note stated that a German submarine was close by, that all hands had been ordered on board the U-boat and that the ship was then to be torpedoed.

The Cyclops was bound from a Chilean port for the United States with a cargo of nitrates when it disappeared. An extensive search was conducted, but no trace ever was found.

Memphis, Tenn., March 25.—Revised figures on the stage of the Mississippi river at Memphis and points below will probably be issued tomorrow after the crest of the flood has passed Cairo, Ill., J. H. Scott, United States weather forecaster, announced today. The crest of the Ohio flood is now passing Shawneetown, Ill., with a stage of 47.6 and still rising slowly.

Marion, Ill., March 25.—[Special.]—Oak Grove Methodist church, near here, will be without music Sunday, and Loren and Corum McGee will spend Sunday in jail, because they are charged with stealing the organ from the church this week, carrying it outside, and burning it up.

SMALL'S "ROAD WORK" IS FIGHT FOR ASSEMBLY

All Efforts Turned to Rule Legislature.

This is the first of a series of articles detailing attempts by the Small-Thompson-Lundin machine to grab control of the next legislature. Various schemes for catching the voters are employed in different districts. Plain threats that road appropriations will not be forthcoming for counties that do not "get right" with Gov. Small on primary day are being made in the governor's downstate speeches. In many places open trading of support of candidates on county tickets for votes for Small legislative candidates is in progress. This and succeeding articles are designed to reveal conditions in all districts in the state.

BY E. O. PHILLIPS AND PARKE BROWN.

Gov. Len Small—awaiting trial in Waukegan under indictments dealing only with his term as state treasurer—is now scouring the state, attempting to nominate a Small-Thompson-Lundin legislative ticket for the November election.

Some politicians are uncharitable to the extent of saying that the governor is out "to fix the Springfield jury." The next house of representatives, by a majority vote, may bring impeachment proceedings against Gov. Small for actions committed since he was sworn in as governor in January, 1921. The senate, sitting as a court of impeachment, must register a two-thirds vote, or the votes of thirty-four senators, to sustain charges that may be preferred by the house. Under such circumstances, the house is the grand jury and the senate is the trial court.

Small and City Hall Busy.

Gov. Small is campaigning downstate, ahead of the April 11 primaries on time borrowed from Judge Edwards at Waukegan. The Chicago city hall machine is trading every job on the county ticket to any faction of any party that will turn in votes at Springfield next January and thereafter, for the Small-Thompson-Lundin program, that starts with a knockdown of threatened impeachment of the governor and winds up in June, 1923, at the end of the legislative session, with "getaway day" for the Small administration and all that goes with it. Meanwhile, in April, a four year mayor will have been elected in Chicago.

Three substantial factors now stick out in the legislative campaign that rapidly gets to its climax. They are: Control of the house and senate organizations, involving the threatened impeachment; construction of the state budget for 1923 and 1924; and the political "bunk" that will be played at Springfield under the direction of the Lundin-Thompson management, preliminary to the mayoralty election next spring.

Using Roads as Vote Lure.

Downstate Gov. Small is bidding for a friendly legislature, with an open offer of rapid construction of roads, already ordered by the general assembly and the referendum vote of the state under the $60,000,000 bond issue in 1918. In Chicago the city hall negotiates with Democrats who will agree to go along at the state capital. It has its own Republican candidate for senate and house planted in each senatorial district.

Last year Gov. Small and Mayor Thompson were enabled to elect their speaker of the house through the friendly assistance of the Anti-Saloon league of Illinois. There is reason to believe the combination made at that time still exists. Representative downstate legislators, however, who say that they were informed that Gov. Small would conduct an administration independent of the Lundin-Thompson dictation from Chicago, are now open antagonists of the governor, in view of developments that broke at Springfield after the defeat of the city hall's judicial ticket in Cook county last June.

Smash of Progam Recalled.

Revolt came in June in both senate and house, in the face of the most desperate personal efforts of Gov. Small, Mayor Thompson, and Fred Lundin—each very much on the job in the capitol, and the three pet measures of the machine were killed—the Wheeler bill to assassinate state civil service; the so-called "5 cent fare" bill that was to have formed the spinal column of a city hall county ticket platform for the coming election; and the tax commission bill that would have transferred absolute control of assessment of property throughout the state to a handpicked board of five to be named by

Gov. Small. All three were slaughtered in the legislative cleanup of the Small-Lundin-Thompson program.

"Road Work" Gets Trial Delay.

Following the incident of Gov. Small's road inspection trip after his indictment last July, there was little official publicity on the subject until March 6. That was the date set for the opening of his trial at Waukegan. Then he filed at Waukegan a long affidavit asserting that he must devote his time to road work that could not be delayed.

A four weeks' postponement on these grounds was granted, but there was another period of silence until ten days ago, when the highways division announced a series of "road hearings" to be held at Paris, La Salle, Dixon, and Freeport, terminating last Wednesday.

Gov. Small appeared in each one of these cities, and, without getting into the merits of the questions "before the court"—the merits of the route controversies—he delivered the same political speech he had made at Pana early in the month.

Climax Is "Road Promise."

Three-fourths of the text was devoted to a Thompsonesque martyrlike arraignment of his "powerful enemies," but the climax always came from the seventh paragraph from the end, in which the governor said:

"I promise you that on the night of election. . . I will know that if you have voted for men for the legislature who will stand with your governor. . . I will see to it that the roads are built in your county and in your districts."

Apparently these four meetings constitute the sum total of the governor's road activity, but much more of his time is said to have been taken up in meeting county delegations which have gone to Springfield to demand that their construction programs and estimates be approved and that they be paid the refunds authorized for them by the legislature in an emergency appropriation last June.

It is said the governor has been kept busy answering these demands, but the most optimistic of the delegations left with nothing better than an idea that its county may receive better treatment after the primaries if it "votes right."

JAPAN EMPRESS ON WARSHIP AS IT FIGHTS STORM

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

TOKIO, March 25.—A severe storm which swept southern Japan yesterday caught the battleship Settsu in the inland sea. Empress Sadako, who was aboard the Settsu, was returning to Kobe from a tour of the imperial shrines, where she went to pray for the recovery of the Emperor.

The battleship labored successfully through the storm, but the destroyer Arabi, acting as escort, was forced ashore on Shikou Island.

This is the last voyage the Settsu will make, it being doomed for the scrapheap by the Washington treaty, and its selection to carry the Empress was intended as a fitting final honor for this first all-Japanese-built battleship.

HERE ARE RECORDS OF RETIRING SENATORS ON SMALL MEASURES

FOUR roll calls at Springfield last winter had direct political significance, in view of the present bold attempt of the Small-Lundin-Thompson machine to control the next Illinois general assembly.

1. Joint resolution indorsing the Thompson-Lundin platform that had been repudiated by the Republican state convention of 1920 and by the Republican national convention of 1920. Following the latter action, Mayor Thompson bolted the national convention as a delegate. Adopted in the house, April 12, 77 to 56. Adopted in the senate, April 21, 27 to 10, with two recorded as "present."

2. Mayor Thompson's so-called "5 cent fare" bill that proposed to create a "local transportation district" out of Chicago and some of its suburbs, which the city hall now makes the chief feature of its present bipartisan legislative campaign. Passed in the house June 9, 87 to 31, with seven "present." Defeated in the senate, June 18, 22 to 18, with seven "present." The bill required four more affirmative votes.

3. Gov. Small's bill to raid the state civil service, introduced by Senator Wheeler, intended to remove 2,500 state employés from protection of the merit law. Passed in the senate, June 14, 28 to 16, and defeated in the house, June 18, 66 to 66. It needed the constitutional majority of 77 affirmative votes and was eleven votes "shy."

4. The machine's "tax commission" bill, intended to centralize in a state commission of five to be appointed by the governor actual control of all assessments of property in the state. Passed in the senate, June 8, 29 to 17. Killed in the house, June 17, 99 to 45.

The record of the retiring state senators who are candidates for renomination, on these four issues, by districts, follows:

SMALL'S PLEDGE ON ROAD BUILDING PUTS HIM IN HOLE

Must Raise Price for Cement or Halt Program.

Bids received by the Illinois highway department on Friday for cement necessary to construct the 1922 state road program put the highway issue squarely up to Gov. Small. They show that the only cement he can now purchase for the state will cost from $1.50 to $1.60 a barrel. There is no cement available anywhere in the country at $1.30, which the governor has set as the maximum price and the figure he has used throughout the primary campaign to excuse the state's two months' delay in launching highway construction work.

On the other hand, county officials point out that the governor has pledged himself in more than a dozen public speeches to build 1,000 miles of road this year. One of the two absolute administration pledges must be broken, they declare. They can see no escape from the political hole the executive has dug for himself in his campaign for legislative support.

Bids Are $1.50 to $1.60.

Seven cement companies submitted bids on a total of 2,507,000 barrels of cement, offering the road material at from $1.50 to $1.60 a barrel, f. o. b. the bidder's mill. If the state accepts the material and pays for it within ten days a discount of 10 cents per barrel will bring the price to $1.40 and $1.50, the lowest possible cost at which Illinois can buy its building quota.

Three months ago the greater part of the cement required for the entire 1922 program was offered to the state at $1.50 a barrel. Bids were all rejected. On Feb. 28 Gov. Small rejected all offers of cement at $1.50, mill price, but accepted 900,000 barrels offered by two companies at $1.40. The bids accepted, however, stipulated that the state must accept early delivery on the entire 900,000 barrels at an estimated extra cost of 15 cents a barrel storage. Cash payment brought this cost to $1.30 a barrel at the mills, but the extra cost of storage increased the figure to approximately $1.45 for contract deliveries in March and April.

Road Builders Expose Governor.

In every instance cement companies have offered the state their material at the mill price subject to a discount of 10 cents a barrel for payment within ten days.

This final exposure of Gov. Small's 1922 highway fiasco was clearly outlined yesterday by veteran Chicago road builders. They submit the following:

In December he could have bought material at from $1.40 to $1.50 for cash without storage reservation. This purchase would permit the opening of early bids to contractors and would permit each county to proceed normally with its important construction plans.

In February he could have purchased the quota at $1.40 for cash without storage reservation, but in fact did buy only 900,000 barrels, enough to build about 270 miles of road, at $1.30 for cash, at the same time binding the state to accept the supply early and to allow contractors 15 cents a barrel for its storage and possible damage by moisture.

Now, after two months' delay, in which every county program has been at a standstill, no contractors' bids opened, and the date of new work on such bids advanced to May 15 at the earliest, he can buy material at $1.40 to $1.50 for cash.

VOTE FOR MA OR DON'T COURT US, BACHELORS TOLD

Charlotte, Ia., March 25.—[By the Associated Press.]—Dan Cupid has taken a hand with vengeance in the political affairs of this Clinton county town.

Three women are candidates for office. Mrs. James McDermott is running for mayor and Mrs. Nick Steiner and Mrs. Martin Neilson are candidates for the city council. They are being opposed by men candidates.

More than a score of the town's fairest daughters have served notice to the bachelors of the town that if the women are not elected they need not bother about visiting them any more. Wednesday evening is known as beau's night in this town of 404 population.

Maids Follow Mothers.

Mothers of Charlotte were the first to issue the ultimatum to the bachelors. It was then taken up by the daughters.

Mrs. McDermott announced that she approves the action of the unmarried daughters. She expressed regret that the women candidates have no eligible daughters to join their supporters. "All our daughters are safely married, or are too young," she said.

If elected Mrs. McDermott promises to put a stop to the sale of illicit liquor. She says no attempts are now being made to stop the sale of bootleg whisky and that the town is overrun with a "riffraff" element.

"They" Rule in This Town.

Des Lacs, N. D., March 24.—[United Press.]—This village of 600 was in the political grasp of eight women today. They took over the reins of city government at a town meeting Friday night, and announced they would prove a "safe and sane government."

Mrs. F. P. Ward, who sported the town marshal's star, patroled the streets early today, with not a law violator in sight. Mrs. Rebecca Varnes, justice of the peace, allowed that she wouldn't have much work to do unless the town grew worse.

The women were chosen at a recent election. They organized a "booster club," lined up the votes and won by a big majority.

At their first meeting the women agreed they will call the men into consultation on every important step.

NEW GRAND JURY TO INVESTIGATE SCANLAN JURORS

Two of Discharged Panel Under Suspicion.

Investigation of two members of the special grand jury, which started an inquiry into the alleged miscarriages of justice in the recent trials of labor leaders in the Criminal courts only to be summarily dismissed, is to be begun by a new special grand jury early tomorrow.

State's Attorney Crowe is to ask Chief Justice Scanlan to impanel the new body at once, it was stated yesterday. The two members whose alleged character and activities were responsible for the sudden dismissal of the old grand jury will immediately be given attention by the new grand jury, it was said.

One of the two men, it was stated, is a "fixer" of twenty years' standing. The other is under suspicion simply because of his actions during the deliberations and presentation of evidence to the discharged grand jury.

A grand jury is composed of twenty-three members. It is stated that the authorities consider twenty-one members of the old grand jury as men of unquestionable integrity, but the character and activities of the two remaining ones forced the discharge of the body.

Operatives of three detective agencies were put to work yesterday on the past and present actions of the two men who are said to have come so near to wrecking the inquiry into the recent labor trials. It is stated that a well known business man will be asked by the state's attorney to go before the new grand jury to tell what he knows of the one whose record is an open book.

This business man, it is stated, is the member of Father P. J. D'Callaghan's Citizens' league, who came into contact with the alleged "fixer" in a case involving the death of a young girl in a northwest side saloon.

Inquiry Just Started.

It has come to light that the discharged grand jury had actually been pursuing its inquiry into the Walsh, O'Donnell, and Quesse trials for only two days when the untoward actions of the alleged "fixer" and friend of local labor leaders aroused suspicion in the minds of the state's attorney and the chief justice.

Evidence was submitted against Policeman Patrick Fee, who has since been indicted in connection with his alleged attempts to induce John B. Zetlmeier, a witness in the Walsh case, to change his testimony. Attorney Robert E. Hogan and Zetlmeier went before the grand jury and told how Fee came to both of them with offers of $6,000 and $10,000 for such a change in testimony.

When the time came to vote the indictment of the policeman, the alleged "fixer" on the grand jury balked. He attempted to exclude State's Attorney Crowe from the grand jury room, requested time to consider the testimony, and asked for a transcript of the testimony to "take home and read over."

Suspicion Is Aroused.

This action at once aroused suspicion. It was stated that such requests for transcripts of grand jury testimony have been made in other cases and it was later discovered that those transcripts found their way into the hands of the defense.

Inquiry into the actions, character, and habits of this member of the jury then were begun at once. And then came the information from the member of the Citizens' league confirming the suspicions. This also was investigated, with the result that the jury was summarily discharged.

CLINNIN HITS DRY LAW

COL. J. V. CLINNIN.

Crooked labor leaders, "blue sky" sharks, "weak" judges, the bootleggers and the profiteers, "who rob and gouge the public," all came in for a drubbing at the hands of Col. John V. Clinnin, first assistant United States district attorney, speaking before the Law Enforcement league at the Hotel Sherman yesterday.

Col. Clinnin also characterized the adoption of the eighteenth amendment as the creator of "more lawbreakers and outlaws than any other law ever enacted."

Enforcement of Law Is Solution.

Most of Col. Clinnin's address dealt with the "wet" and "dry" question, but he spoke also of the general crime situation in Chicago, and the attempts by the chief justice of the Criminal court, the state's attorney, and the chief of police to put an end to it.

"The solution of our problem," he said, "is enforcement of the law. We need no change in our court system to effect a remedy, but we do need some red blooded action by our judges and prosecutors or some forceful action in putting the weak ones out, and strong ones in.

"Investigation in Chicago discloses a disregard for law and disrespect for courts which is appalling. Labor is ruled by thugs and ex-convicts; capital by profiteers, equally lawless, who are not averse to forming a partnership with the vicious labor leaders.

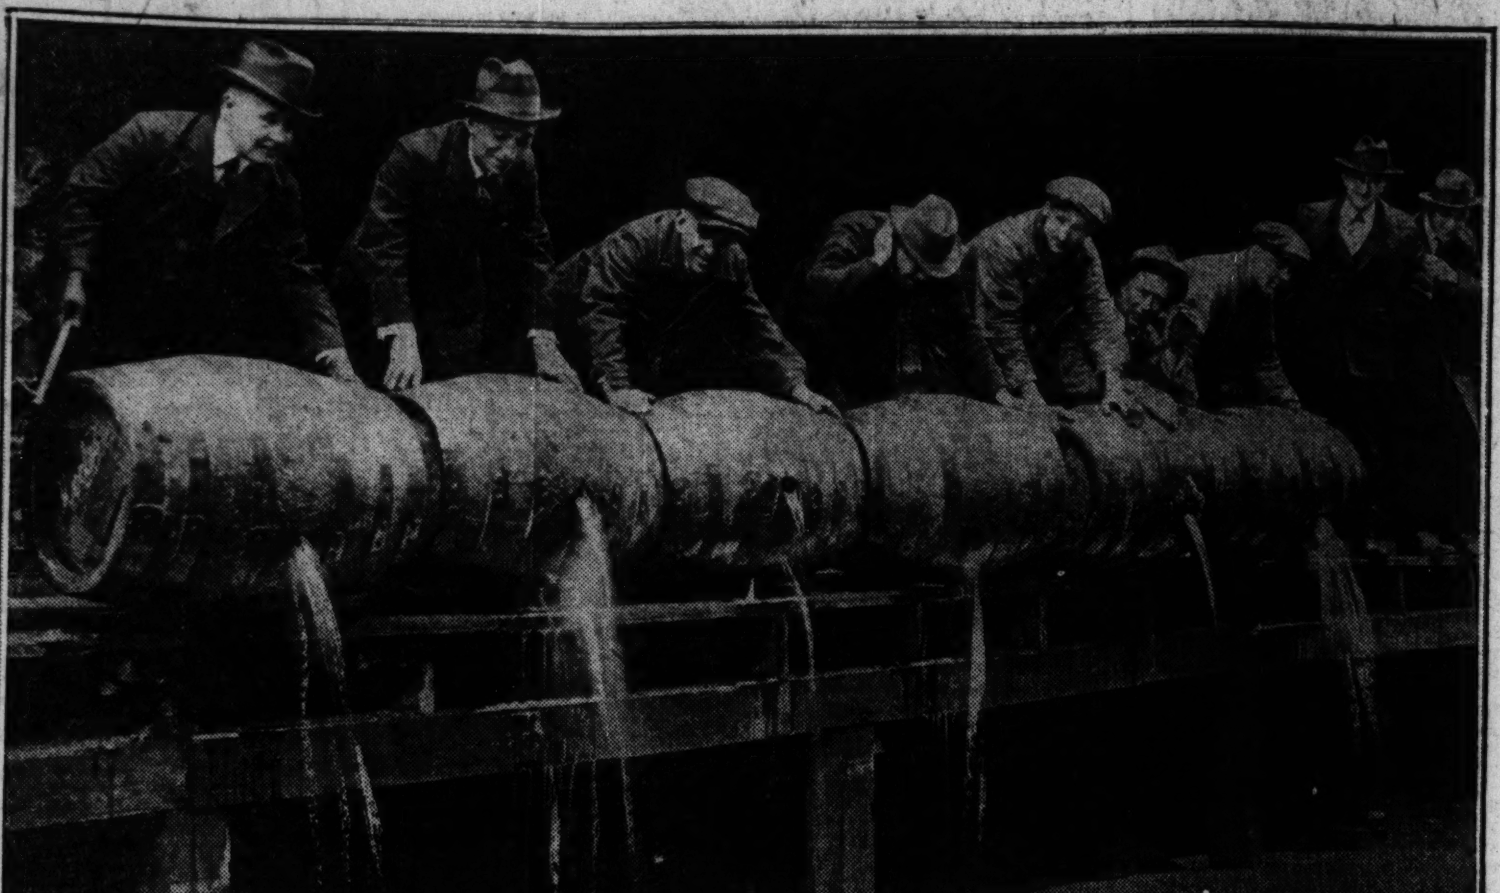
Sharks Beset Business.

"Business, commercial, and professional life in Chicago is beset with human sharks in the form of grafting bond and mortgage firms, blue sky investment brokers, and 'get rich quick' enterprises that would cause Wallingford to blush with shame.

"The slimy tentacles of the 'booze' octopus fastens themselves upon many of our public officials, law officers, and influential citizens, and reaches into places heretofore held sacred and unassailable.

"The nation is facing the most severe test it has ever had in the enforcement of its criminal laws. Therefore united action by all good citizens is required and public opinion must be aroused to the highest pitch."

PUTTING A KICK IN THE RIVER



Wine, beer, and whisky—350,000 gallons all told—were poured into the sewer yesterday as thousands lined the Clark street bridge to watch. Prohibition Director Charles A. Gregory had made arrangements for the destruction of the liquor when he received a wire from Federal Prohibition Commissioner Haynes stating the work of the prohibition officers should not be flouted in the face of the public by pouring the booze into the river in broad daylight. Later this order was countermanded.

BOOZE SEIZED BY DRY AGENTS POURED IN RIVER

350,000 Gals. Dumped Out Here.

While hundreds of spectators lined the Clark street bridge and the banks of the Chicago river yesterday, shouting orders, offering suggestions or with difficulty restraining their tears, federal agents, under the direction of Prohibition Director Charles A. Gregory, emptied 350,000 gallons of wine, beer, near beer, real 100 proof whisky and "moonshine" into sewers that led into the stream.

The disposal of the liquor, obtained in numerous raids by the prohibition agents, marks the first step in Mr. Gregory's program to destroy all contraband booze now on hand, and was proceeded by a confusion of orders and counter orders.

Haynes Calls "Party Off."

First Mr. Gregory ordered the booze destroyed. While crowds were congregating on the bridge to witness the destruction and more than a score of agents were preparing to move it, Federal Prohibition Commissioner Roy A. Haynes in Washington telephoned countermanding the orders.

"The work of the prohibition agents should not be flaunted before the public in such a manner," he directed. "There are other times than during broad daylight and other places besides the conspicuous Chicago river where the liquor can be destroyed. It is needless publicity and it might incite the onlookers to both regret and anger."

Later Withdraws First Orders.

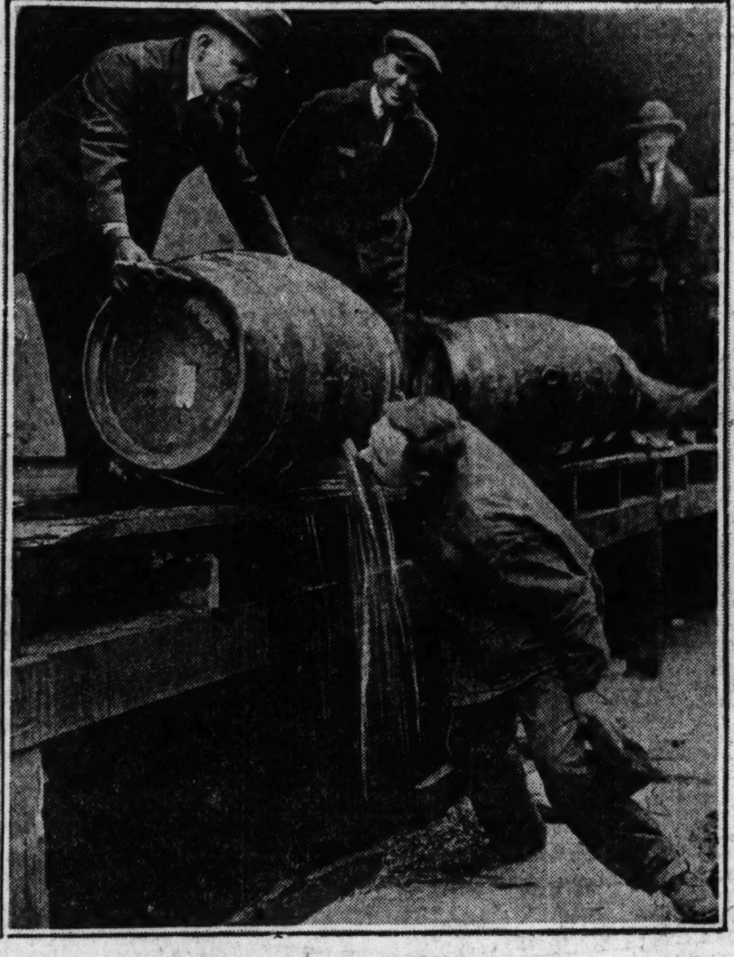
And so the first crowd dispensed. Then, a couple of hours later, Mr. Haynes withdrew his orders and the liquor was dumped into the sewers, according to the first schedule.

The disposal of the liquor wasn't the only blow received by numerous Chicagoans who recall with regret the days before prohibition. While the agents were working at the river Assistant States Prohibition Commissioner J. E. Jones, who is here from Washington, announced that 200 Chicago druggists are to permanently lose their licenses for the sale of whisky.

Change in Prescriptions.

Not only will these revocations be made, according to Mr. Jones, but plans are under way by the government to print prescription forms for whisky on government paper. In many instances, he said, druggists were printing their own prescriptions, and the revocations of the licenses of the worst violators and the printing of prescription blanks by the government will break up the last stronghold of the "wets" in Chicago.

Sergt. Harry Spoonholtz of the Oak Park police arrested John K. Wall and Lawrence Judas, both of Davenport, Ia., on charges of transporting grain alcohol yesterday. The two men were driving through the town at a high rate of speed, it was said. The two men are said to have confessed they were bringing alcohol to Chicago for sale to saloonkeepers.



Trying to salvage a little of the 350,000 gallons going to the fishes.

VOLSTEAD NAVY SETS SAIL FOR A BATTLE OF BOOZE

Washington, D. C., March 25.—[By the Associated Press.]—First units of the new prohibition navy are in actual operation somewhere along the Atlantic coast, it was learned today on high official authority.

Officials continue to withhold plans for the sea attack on booze smugglers by the submarine chasers operated by the prohibition bureau, but it was declared that several vessels are now on duty on Florida waters and that others were cruising farther north. As rapidly as additional sub chasers obtained from the coast guard can be put into commission they will slip out to sea under sealed orders to join in the proposed rum patrol.

13 Bodies Recovered in Wrecked Mine; 4 Missing

Trinidad, Colo., March 25.—The Sopris No. 2 mine of the Colorado Fuel and Iron company, which was wrecked by an explosion of undetermined origin Friday afternoon, has yielded up the bodies of thirteen of seventeen victims. Rescue crews expressed the hope that all bodies would be located and brought out tonight.

RAIL WORKERS MAKE PROTEST ON "FARMING OUT"

With 2,500 shopmen and maintenance of way men employed by contractors on the Western Maryland railway walking out yesterday as a protest of the "farming out" system under which some roads are alleged to be evading United States railroad labor board orders as to rules and working conditions, the question as to whether the board will take any action was sharply raised.

An unofficial answer called attention to the fact that several contract cases involving the Erie, the Indiana Harbor Belt, and other roads are now pending before the labor board. Members of the federal body declined to comment on the Maryland walkout.

Press dispatches indicate the principal shop and maintenance of way department of the Western Maryland were let to the Dickson Construction and Repair company of Youngstown, O. This concern is said to have reduced wages of machinists from 77 to 60 cents an hour and laborers from 39 to 25 cents. The ten hour day has supplanted the eight hour shift.

BRITISH PLAN TO DISARM ULSTER TO PREVENT WAR

Fear the Irish Army Will Avenge Murders.

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, March 25.—The outbreak of murder and anarchy in Belfast has induced Prime Minister Lloyd George to cut short his vacation, and he probably will take part in the proposed conference between Sir James Craig and Michael Collins on the Ulster-Irish situation.

The British government is much worried about the Belfast situation and is disposed to place most of the blame on the Ulster government for the failure to preserve order. Gen. MacReady, who has been in London, is said to have reported adversely on the Ulster measures to keep peace and favorably on the efforts of the Free State to avoid a collision.

Downing street fears the Ulster attacks on the Catholics may strengthen the republican party in the south, with the result that the Irish republican army will get out of hand and invade Ulster for the purpose of protecting its co-religionists. This would mean civil war. The "rebel convention" tomorrow in Dublin of the Irish republican army, called by followers of De Valera, is causing additional anxiety.

Griffith Goes to London.

Michael Collins immediately accepted the invitation to come to London. Arthur Griffith and E. J. Duggan will arrive in London Monday with full power to act for the provisional government, while Mr. Collins will be here later if needed. Sir James Craig replied that the invitation will receive the "earnest consideration of the Ulster government" and a reply will be sent later.

THE TRIBUNE's Belfast correspondent telegraphs that Sir James called a meeting of the Ulster cabinet Monday to consider the invitation. There is a disposition in London to resent the tone of Sir James' reply.

Gen. MacReady has been in consultation with Winston Churchill. They have under consideration a plan for largely increasing the force of the British troops in Ulster, placing Belfast under martial law and disarming the whole population regardless of religion. There are now fourteen British battalions in Ulster, but the force can be doubled if necessary. Gen. MacReady is said to have reported that the Ulster government has ample strength to restore order if it wished. It has enrolled thousands of special police.

Raid Irish Office in London.

An extraordinary raid was made last night on the publicity department of the Irish office in London. The Irish office, which has governed Ireland under British rule, is being disbanded.

When the officers arrived this morning they found their desks rifled and papers scattered about the floor. Irish revolutionaries, seeking information for a vengeance campaign, are suspected.

Border Sniping Keeps Up.

BELFAST, March 25.—[By Associated Press.]—Sniping activities south of Aughnacloy, on the border, were again reported today. While a number of special constables were motoring from Caledon to Aughnacloy a fusillade of rifle and machine gun fire was opened upon them. The firing was believed to have come from Sinn Feiners.

Col. Wickham, divisional commander at Belfast, today offered a $5,000 reward for information leading to the conviction of those responsible for the murder of Owen MacMahon and six members of his family yesterday.

Three men ambushed John Beresford, a Protestant and an employé of a Belfast morning newspaper. He was wounded twice. Several men burned the home of a coal hawker in Georges street, East Belfast. David Christie was stopped in the street by several men who interrogated him regarding his religion. He fled amid bullets.

EX-U. S. SENATOR HOLLIS GOT HIS DIVORCE IN SOFIA

ROME, March 25.—[By the Associated Press.]—Former United States Senator Henry F. Hollis of New Hampshire obtained a decree of divorce in Sofia, Bulgaria, before his recent marriage here to Miss Anne White Hobbs of Concord, N. H., according to Municipal Councillor Giovanni Andrea Serrao, who, acting as mayor of Rome, performed the ceremony.

Affidavits by United States Senator Owen of Oklahoma, former United States Senator James Hamilton Lewis of Illinois, Mrs. Rose H. Lewis, wife of the ex-senator, and others testified that Mr. Hollis was free to contract a second marriage.

"The municipality, before consenting to the performance of the marriage," said Sig. Serrao today, "ascertained that Mr. Hollis was free to marry, as prescribed by Italian law."

TIMPONI ASKS ANNULMENT ON TECHNICALITY

Wife Is Called "Queen of Bootleg Trust."

Suit for annulment of the marriage of Emilio Frank Timponi, conductor of the Illinois theater orchestra, and Catherine Timponi, recently described by Omaha's police at the "queen of America's bootleg trust," was filed in the Circuit court yesterday by Mr. Timponi's attorneys, Daniel W. Scanlan and Paul W. Pogue.

Failure of Mrs. Timponi, who is Mr. Timponi's second wife, to notify her husband at the time of her marriage of her divorce from her first husband within a year is given as the theatrical man's reason for the annulment.

Divorced Only Three Months.

Catherine Walsh, according to the bill, was married to Edward Staerke at Milwaukee Aug. 19, 1911 and divorced from him in the same city March 26, 1919. Less than three months later, June 5, 1919, she married Mr. Timponi at Crown Point and neglected to tell him details of her recent divorce, he claims. The bill further sets forth that she left him April 30, 1921, since which time they have not been living together.

Accused of rum running and of having forged government revenue stamps Mrs. Timponi, who is the stepmother of Rollo Timponi, manager of the Colonial theater, was arrested over a month ago in Omaha, where she was living as Miss Katherine Warner in an elaborately furnished fifteen room mansion in the smartest residential district. She was bound over to the federal grand jury in bonds of $1,000, which she furnished. She is now at liberty awaiting the action of the federal grand jury.

Home Veritable Distillery.

At the time Sergt. Frank Williams of the Omaha police testified her home "was a veritable distillery and liquor clearing house." A leaky trunk in a baggage car led to the arrest. It was found to be full of twenty year old bourbon. Mr. Timponi insisted yesterday that the suit for annulment had nothing whatever to do with the "so-called bootlegging escapade" of his wife.

According to the statement of her friends, Mrs. Timponi will not contest the suit, but expects to join her mother in Los Angeles when her legal affairs are adjusted.

League of Nations May Rule the Dardanelles

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS, March 25.—The control of the Dardanelles and Constantinople may be intrusted to the league of nations, according to information seeping from the conference of foreign ministers this afternoon.

The foreign ministers again "passed the buck" on Armenia to the league, intrusting to it the "realizing of the Armenians' aspirations."

PILOT TELLS OF WRECKED PLANE DEATH STRUGGLE

Friday morning Moore and Bulte were still clinging to the wreckage. Moore managed to fasten a rope around himself to avoid being washed off should he lose consciousness. By this time both men were suffering terribly for lack of food and water. Standing in water to his waist, Moore alternately waved a handkerchief and prayed, he told Capt. Wachsmuth.

Bulte, finally realizing from his weakened condition that the end was near, took a roll of money amounting to $2,000 from his pocket and offered it to Moore, saying:

"You are younger and may be able to come through; I cannot hold on any longer."

Then he slowly slid off the boat.

RESCUE OF MOORE

Miami, Fla., March 25.—[By the Associated Press.]—Nursed by a woman whom he believes in his delirium to be his mother, Robert Moore, pilot and only survivor of the six persons who left here for Bimini last Wednesday in the ill fated flying boat Miss Miami, was in a hospital tonight more dead than alive.

A submarine chaser took Moore off the tanker William Green early today as it passed here bound for Tampico. Picked up by the tanker late yesterday more than forty miles off the East Indian inlet as he clung to the wreckage of his flying boat, Moore was tenderly cared for all during last night by Mrs. J. Williams, wife of an official of the Pan-American Petroleum corporation, who was a passenger on the tanker. This morning when the relief boat pulled alongside the big tank ship Moore refused to go without her.

When reassured that she would be there he finally permitted himself to be transferred to the smaller craft and be brought to a hospital here, where another woman took up the task of trying to calm his wandering mind.

Captain Repeats Moore's Story

Moore's statements while aboard the tanker were retold today by Capt. Charles A. Wachsmuth of the William Green.

"I was about forty-one miles off the East Indian inlet," said Capt. Wachsmuth, "when just about dusk I sighted, far off, what appeared to be a human figure feebly waving his arms. We drew close until we could discern a man who appeared to be lashed to a spar. We hove to, launched a boat, and rowed out to the rescue. A heavy sea was running and it was no easy task, but after considerable difficulty we managed to get him aboard. He was lashed with a piece of rope about his neck and another piece about his waist and was totally exhausted.

"As we cut him loose he murmured, 'I'm sorry to put you fellows to so much trouble.' Then he became unconscious.

Was Tied to Wrecked Plane.

"We found that he had attached himself to an overturned flying boat. The exact location in which he was picked up was latitude 27.38 north, longitude 79.33 west. The time was 6:30 p. m.

"We undressed him and placed him in my cabin, where he was cared for through the night by Mrs. J. Williams, a passenger.

"We found that his entire body was blistered and burned, and that his lips were so badly swollen he could not open his mouth. His eyes, from the salt water and blazing sun, were in such condition that at first we thought he was blinded, but after Mrs. Williams had bathed his face he seemed to recover somewhat, though he appeared to be out of his mind.

"On his person we found three $1 bills in which he had torn holes in his delirium, a pair of glasses which had been smashed, and a woman's vanity case."

Describes Tragedy to Nurse.

Mrs. Williams told how Moore had described the accident and the first two days on the wreck as his companions died.

"In some manner," she said, "Moore said he managed to obtain a piece of rope, fastening one end around his waist and the other to the plane. This alone saved him from being washed into the ocean with the other five members of the party. On Friday morning the pilot, having been two days without food and water, was almost at the end of his resources.

"During his delirium he told me that nine ships had passed him while he was in the water, one of them being so slow that he could read the name. Though he waved frantically, no one apparently saw him and the boats passed."

"He kept telling me that he had done his utmost to save the women, and that he had held them above the water until they died in his arms."

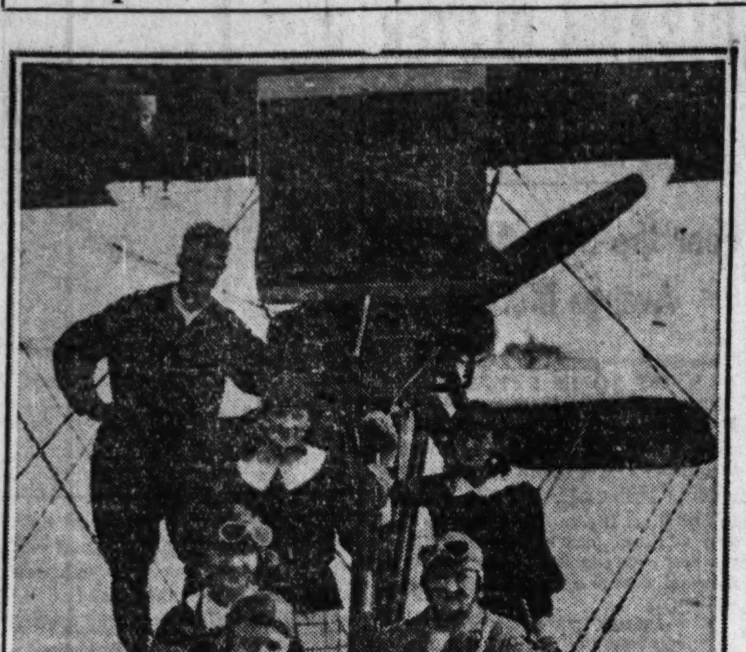
"Sub" Chaser Goes for Moore.

The decision to bring Moore back to Miami was reached early today after word had been received from the captain of the William Green by wireless that the tanker had picked up the lone survivor. The submarine chaser 154 left the municipal pier in search of the tanker.

A heavy sea was still running and the small boat was at times completely submerged by the waves. Every one aboard was seasick, including the two physicians who were going out to give first aid. In fact, so sick did the physicians become that when the tanker was finally located about twenty-four miles north of Miami and twelve miles out in the gulf stream, they were almost as badly in need of attention as the injured pilot.

The task of transferring the sick man from the tanker to the submarine chaser in a heavy sea with half a gale blowing presented difficulties, but after half an hour's work the little chaser was finally navigated into the lee of the tanker and made fast. Before this could be done, however, the chaser was badly smashed.

Seaplane Which Caused 5 Deaths



The above picture of the seaplane, Miss Miami, which was forced into the sea off the Florida coast, causing the death of five passengers, was taken three weeks ago. The Misses Lillian and Myrtle Hanke, 224 North Central avenue, Austin, from left to right in the picture, were in Florida and took a trip in the Miss Miami. The man standing is believed to be Robert Moore, the pilot, who was taken from the wreck of the seaplane by a passing tanker. Moore was the sole survivor of the tragedy.

August Bulte of Kansas City was one of five persons who died when the seaplane Miss Miami fell into the sea.

ARIDITY SPELLS RUIN FOR MUSIC CULT, 'TIS SAID

Number of Unemployed Artists Increases.

Unfeeling America, rallying about the standards of Mr. Volstead, has already given the air to Calliope, according to Sir Arthur Quiller-Couch. Now comes Ralph O'Hara, president of the Chicago Musician's club, with the gloomy prediction that Polymnia, a sister muse, is also a victim of the national drouth.

RALPH O'HARA.

"Since the passing of the 18th amendment," lamented Mr. O'Hara, speaking at a meeting of unemployed musicians at 184 West Washington street, "the number of artists out of work has increased until it's around 2,250. They are walking the streets, with no bed but the bass drum, and no pillow but a saxophone."

Only Work on Gold Coast.

"Prior to prohibition," Mr. O'Hara continued, "every musician, man or woman, was employed. Now, those who are working are playing at gold coast parties and in residences in north shore towns, where stocks of liquor still hold out."

When John Barleycorn passed out, with him went the people's love of music, declared O'Hara. At modest shindigs, where years ago five or six players were hired, the phonograph now serves.

Mardi Gras a Failure.

"There's no pep, no enthusiasm, any more," he groaned. "Beer and wine worked up a sentiment for tunes that near beer and buttermilk can't. Take the Mardi Gras in New Orleans, the first time after we went dry. It was a terrible fizzle."

4 PRISONERS IN ATTEMPTED JAIL BREAK CONFESS

Warden Wesley Westbrook yesterday made public the confessions of four of the five prisoners who last Sunday attempted to dig through the wall of the county jail and escape.

The five men implicated are: Philip F. Leslie, 6631 Union avenue, held on five charges of burglary; Joe Lacki, 1408 Elston avenue, held as accessory to a robbery; C. C. Norman, bacteriologist; Frank Wilson and Fred Walden.

Leslie admitted he had brought in a saw concealed in a two-ply leather belt, and that he had had it two weeks before the attempted break. Leslie said he gave the saw to Norman, and that Norman gave it to Walden.

COUNTRY'S FUEL BINS ARE READY FOR COAL STRIKE

No Shortage in Prospect for Four Months.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

With a coal strike that will call out some 600,000 anthracite and bituminous mine workers looming up only six days away, the fuel bins of the country are stocked with supplies sufficient to last at least eight weeks at the prevailing rate of consumption. Added to that, the nonunion fields, which turn out 40 per cent of the soft coal, have a capacity equal to about 75 per cent of present consumption, according to the trade experts.

All told, the general estimate in the trade seems to be that unless industry revives at an unexpected rate this summer and factories and mills increase greatly their needs for coal, a strike would not be followed by any particular fuel pinch until September or perhaps later. In other words, the miners would have to remain idle four or five months before the strike began to exert any real economic pressure.

Different Than in 1919.

This, it may be said, is realized by some of the union chiefs as well as by the operators. The situation is the reverse of that in the 1919 strike, when labor was "in the saddle" and the winter demand for coal was on.

One leading Illinois producer yesterday estimated that with large stocks on hand and with market demand languid, even if no strike came the Illinois and Indiana mines would have little reason for running more than ten days during the months of April and May.

One phase the trade comments on as quite remarkable is that the public in general is taking the impending strike with little or no concern. Ordinary industrial consumers are placing much smaller orders than looked for, and are not inclined to put much in storage, apparently on the theory that after the strike prices are coming down.

In the face of a threatened tieup of 60 per cent of the coal fields, the market has weakened. Ten of the fourteen coals in the Coal Age index have recently recorded decreases until now the index shows spot prices on soft coal are now lower than at any time since the middle of 1916. Again, while spot prices have fallen, production has gone up.

Utilities Stocking Up.

The gas and electric utilities and the railroads have been stocking up. They are reported to have sixty to ninety days' supplies on hand. Many of the smaller utilities, however, are reported by the geological survey to be running much shorter, gambling apparently on the movement from the nonunion fields.

In Chicago the Consumers' company estimates a thirty to sixty day stock is on hand. It says some large steam plants are gambling they will get coal, others are protecting themselves from sixty to ninety days, but there is no general disposition on the part of the buyer to store in his own bins coal for a strike of any length.

As to prices, the Consumers company says: "We will not raise the price of any coal on hand April a penny." This appears to be the general sentiment among the trade. After stocks are depleted, however, coal brought from outside will be bought from the mines at strike prices. Along about the middle of May, perhaps, supply and demand in the nonunion fields is expected by some experts to shove mine prices up. How far no one is guessing.

Despite urgings from Secretary Hoover that consumers would be wise to protect themselves against a prolonged tie-up, lack of demand caused an average loss of 36 per cent in full-time operation of soft coal mines during the week ended March 4. This is the figure of the geological survey based on reports from 2,819 mines producing 56 per cent of the country's soft coal.

Nonunion Mines Active.

The competition of the nonunion fields, on which operators in the union districts lay stress, is still reflected in relative operations. Many of the nonunion fields are working more days a week than the union sections. One compilation issued yesterday, based on reports of the geological survey, shows how this competition works in the Pittsburgh district, which is leading the movement to break up the central competition field basis—the four state wage agreement. In the last six months of 1921 all rail mines in the Pittsburgh district averaged sixty-three days work out of a possible 150. The adjacent nonunion Westmoreland district averaged 82.5 days. The union southern Ohio district averaged 34.5 days, while across the Ohio river in West Virginia the average was 83 days.

Among the trade the inside word is that the Pittsburgh district will go to an open shop basis when the strike goes on, and the nature of the controversy in this field is expected by many to result in the adoption of the single state wage settlement idea after the strike has been on a month or so.

Electrocuted When He Falls Against Heater

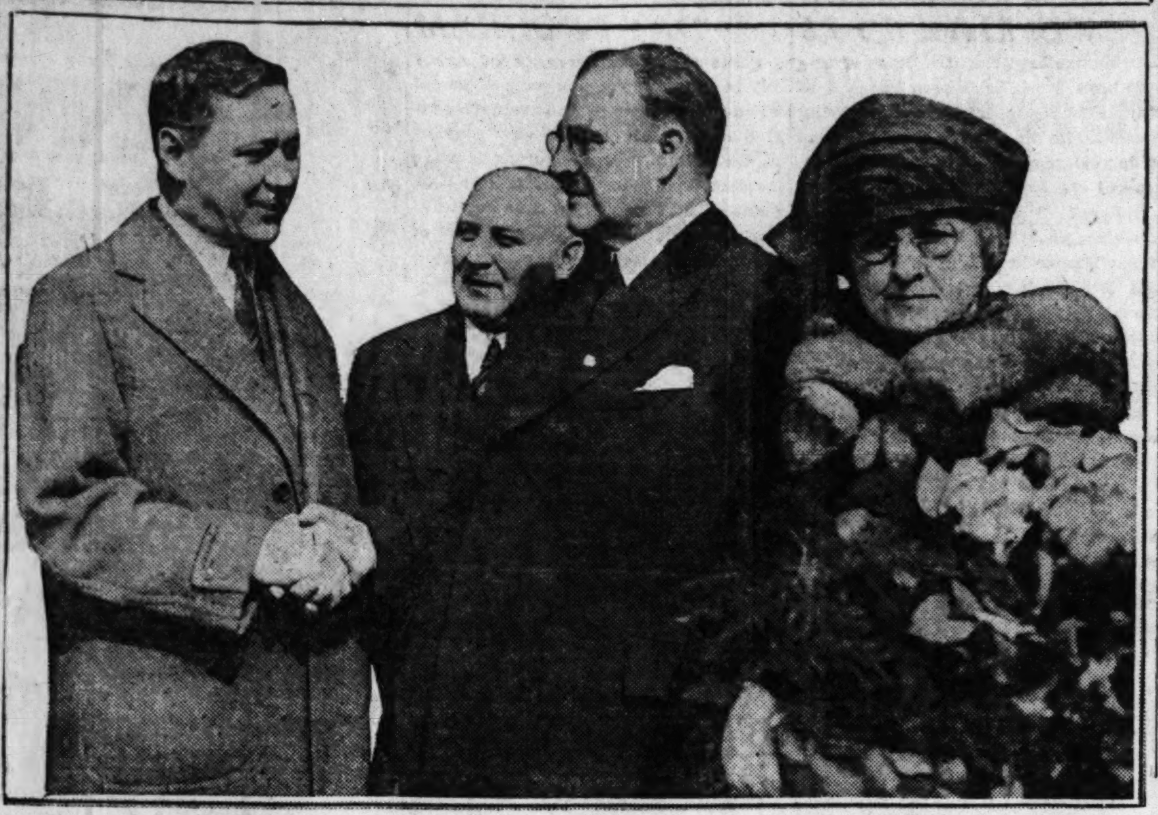
MAYOR HYLAN OF NEW YORK ARRIVES



When Mayor John F. Hylan of New York stepped from the Twentieth Century Limited with Mrs. Hylan at the La Salle street station yesterday he was greeted by a reception committee of members of the Knights of Columbus. Mayor Hylan will speak tonight at a fourth degree initiation banquet of the K. of C. in the Hotel La Salle. In the picture, from left to right, are: Chief Fitzmorris, Robert Sweitzer, Mayor Hylan, and Mrs. Hylan.

HYLAN PEEKS AT LOOP JAM, THEN URGES A SUBWAY

New York Mayor Here for Speech to K. C.

Conclusion of a stranger within the city's gates: Chicago should have a municipally owned and operated subway.

Identity of the stranger: John F. Hylan, mayor of New York, paying his first visit to Chicago.

Mayor Hylan, with Mrs. Hylan and a secretary or so, arrived yesterday. It is what he termed a "sort of unofficial visit, a rest for Mrs. Hylan and myself."

The New York mayor's idea of a rest: Handshaking with countless persons of a reception committee at the La Salle street station; making rapid fire reply to pointed questions—and even a pointless one or two—unleashed by newspaper men; luncheon at the Chicago Athletic club; an automobile tour of the city; informal dinner at the La Salle hotel, and, in the evening, an address to citizens of Portland, Me., Portland, Ore., and points in between—from the radio broadcasting station in the Edison building.

Talks to K. C. Tonight.

Tonight Mayor Hylan will address Knights of Columbus at the annual initiation banquet of the fourth degree in the Hotel La Salle. He will talk on the four power treaty and other topics of international interest.

Perhaps his tortuous drive through the traffic choked loop and other congested parts of the city had something to do with Mayor Hylan's avidity in commenting on Chicago's transportation problem.

"If Chicago is to have a subway—and I know there is considerable agitation for it—I hope it will be municipally operated," he said. "I understand the city has something more than $30,000,000 with which to make a start on the project.

Strong for Municipal Ownership.

"Fine! But my earnest advice to Chicago is to have control of the underground system from the outset. Keep it out of the hands of nickel-corralling, stock-watering financiers. Municipal operation is synonymous with service.

"We have subways in New York, but we haven't service, because service does not pay the dividends that Wall street demands."

Among those on the reception committee that greeted New York's mayor at the station, were Michael Faherty, representing Mayor Thompson, who was out of the city; Charles Fitzmorris, chief of police; James C. O'Brien, former state's attorney, who will direct the initiation of 600 Knights into the fourth degree this evening, and Theodore E. Cornell, Edward Kirchberg, and Jerome J. Crowley, officers of the Knights of Columbus.

Mrs. Hylan was a dinner guest at the Drake hotel last night.

STRUCK BY SWITCH ENGINE, DIES.

John Lynch, 65 years old, 1305 South 49th avenue, Cicero, was fatally injured yesterday when he was struck by a switch engine at West 31st street and the Chicago, Illinois and Western railroad tracks. He was employed by the railroad company as a section foreman.

SMULSKI HELPS BRUNDAGE; CITY TAKES $100,000

"No Politics in Action," Says Harding.

Sixteen days ago—on March 10—John F. Smulski, former state treasurer and president of the Northwestern Trust and Savings bank, 1201 Milwaukee avenue, was one of the guests and a speaker at a banquet given by Attorney General Brundage and his political adherents in the Hotel Morrison.

Three days later, on orders of Mayor Thompson and City Controller George F. Harding Jr., a sum of $100,000, representing the total amount of city funds deposited with the Northwestern bank, was withdrawn.

Loop Banks Offered Aid.

Last Thursday, eleven days after the withdrawal of city's funds, a record "freak run" began on Mr. Smulski's bank, which was stemmed only after big loop banks had offered unlimited funds to the institution and over $1,250,000 of deposits had actually been paid out to the bank's clientele.

Last night Mr. Harding declared no significance, political or otherwise, could be attached as a motive for the canceling of the city's account at the Northwestern. He characterized the severing of the relations between the city's financial department and the bank as coming merely in the routine course of handling the city's money.

"I didn't even know Mr. Smulski went to the Brundage banquet or spoke there," Mr. Harding said. "But if I had known it that fact could have had no influence in our action in closing the account. Mr. Smulski has a right to support whom he chooses for office. I value him as one of my best friends and I don't think there's a stronger bank in Chicago than the Northwestern."

Never Gave It Second Thought.

Mr. Smulski also refused to place significance of any kind upon the action of the mayor and the controller.

"The withdrawal at the time was called to my special attention, as any withdrawal of such size naturally would be, but I never gave it a second thought," he said.

Since he was state treasurer, about twelve years ago, it has been the custom of succeeding treasurers to keep state funds, usually amounting to about $100,000, on deposit with the Northwestern as a kind of courtesy to him, Mr. Smulski said.

Patrick J. Carr, county treasurer, who normally retains a deposit of about $25,000 with the Northwestern, swelled this amount to $100,000 after the run was under way, as a testimonial of his confidence in the institution.

Mr. Carr's action was duplicated by Andrew Russel, state auditor, who traveled from Springfield yesterday for the express purpose of opening a $5,000 personal account at the bank.

Seek Origin of Rumors.

Officials of the bank are attempting to trace the source of the "malicious rumors" which inspired the rush of depositors to get their money. The bank has offered a $5,000 reward for evidence as to the identity of the persons originating the false reports.

Mr. Smulski intimated yesterday he believes that a disgruntled customer—some one who sought a loan in vain—is most likely responsible.

Only one withdrawal was made when the bank opened yesterday morning. Throughout the day receiving tellers were swamped with patrons redepositing the savings they had been so frantic to take out on Friday morning. Such redepositors will lose no interest, it is announced.

BOY BURNED IN FIRE.

Paris, Ill., March 25.—[Special.]—John Fitzsimmons, young son of a Paris resident, attempted to kindle the kitchen fire with gasoline today and set fire to his clothes and the house. It is believed he will die.

COMPLETE PLANS FOR BOOTHS AT PAGEANT HERE

ASK E. J. WARNER TO MEDIATE IN BUILDING WAR

Two Union Chiefs Say He Can Bring Peace.

MICHAEL ARTERY.

Establishment of peace and harmony in the Chicago building trades industry is sought by Michael Artery, business agent of the Machinery Movers' union, and Michael Galvin of the Chicago Teamsters' union, through the appointment of E. J. Warner of the firm of Sprague, Warner & Co., as arbiter to settle the controversy now existing between ten building trade unions and the citizens' committee to enforce the Landis award.

The machinery movers' union was one of the first unions publicly to announce that it would accept and abide by the terms of the Landis award. Although subject to criticism Artery maintained that once the unions had agreed on the selection of Judge Landis as an abiter it was their duty to accept his decisions. Several times he was threatened with expulsion from the Building Trades council because of his attitude on the Landis award.

Move for Peace.

According to Artery, it was with the hope that building activities would be stimulated and peace restored among the thirty-two unions affiliated with the Building Trades council that the following letter was sent to Mr. Warner:

"You will recall our recent conversation regarding the possibility of a disinterested person intervening in the building trades controversy with a view to arranging a meeting to formulate a basis for arbitration.

"It seems to me we have progressed beyond argument as to the necessity for organized labor and the right of the workers to organize. Governments and industries alike recognize that right. The argument is now as to just what point either capital or labor has the right to refuse to arbitrate further and fight out an issue. The citizens' committee say they have reached that point and that mediation is useless.

Call Some Scales Unfair.

"On the other hand, some of the crafts feel that a great injustice has been done them, and regardless of any opinion as to the merits of the Landis award as a whole, it is evident that the decisions in at least some of the crafts are unfair. This is not intended as a criticism of the Landis award. Judge Landis handed down what is probably as impartial an award as could be drafted by any one not familiar with the technicalities of the building trades.

MICHAEL GALVIN.

"Nevertheless the award disregarded, innocently no doubt, certain well established wage relationships which are the growth of years. Such traditions prevail in all crafts and seem sentimental to an outsider, but these usages and traditions are very dear to the workers.

"They become privileges and when ignored cause more bitterness than active injustice, and in the heat of ill feeling it is difficult for any body of men to think coolly or act deliberately. Yet such issues are minor ones and easily adjusted.

Breaking a Union Futile.

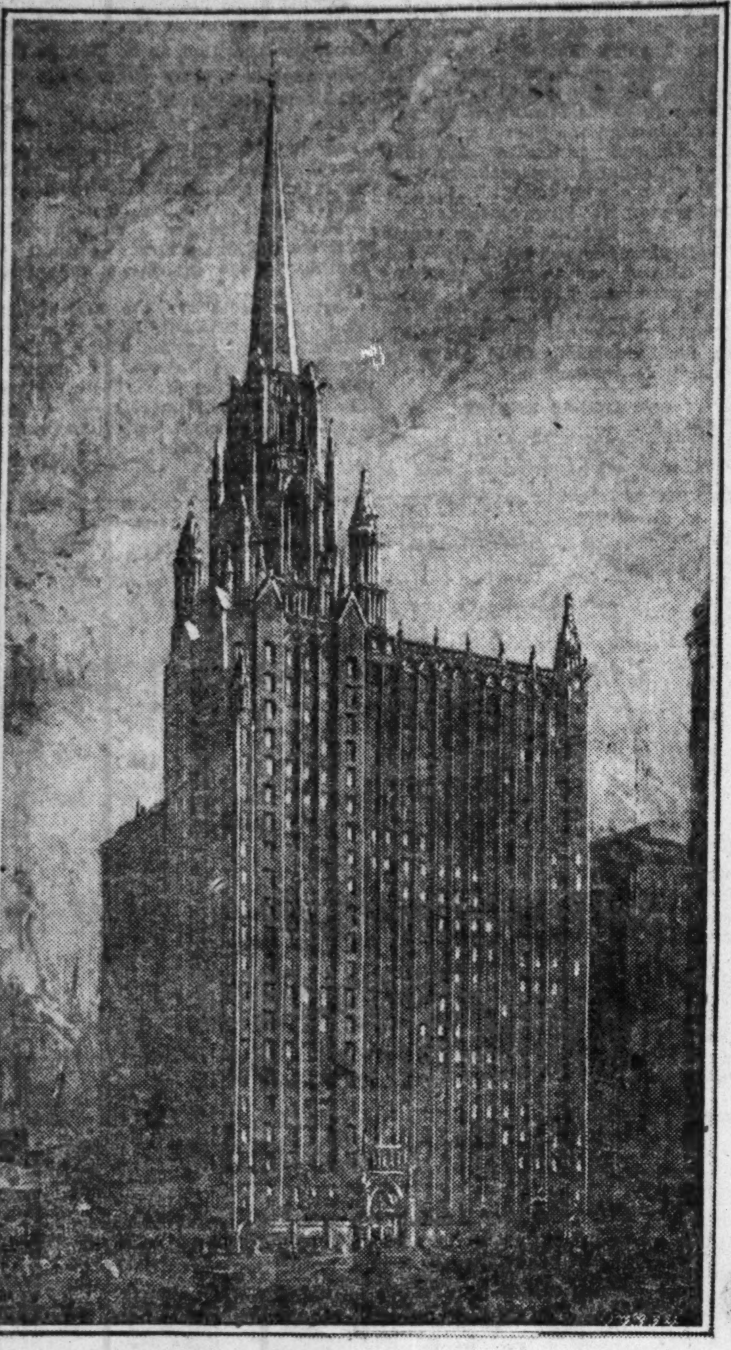
"Granted that the citizens' committee is successful in this effort to bring in outsiders to fill the places of strikers and are able to break any one building trade union. Such a victory, if won, would be costly, worthless, and transitory, productive of no final result. No progress would be made toward any permanent understanding and no foundation built for any lasting peace between the two sides—the builders who build with their money and the builders who build with their hands.

"I do not see why a peaceful adjustment cannot be reached if both sides ameliorate their demands and the matter is discussed across the table by impartial men selected by both sides.

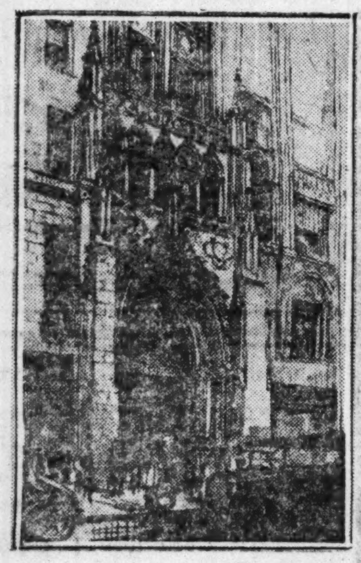
"With your prestige you can easily secure a hearing before the citizens' committee, and a plea on your part for a meeting between impartial spokesmen for the both factions.

"This, I know, is an unwelcome task, but men like yourself, who have built up a great and successful business enterprise, owe the city which has served them so well a certain service in return."

LOOP'S SPIRITUAL FORTRESS



The Chicago Temple, which will be built by the Methodist Episcopal denomination to replace the building now housing the First Methodist church, at the southeast corner of Washington and Clark streets.



How the main entrance to the Chicago Temple will appear.

METHODISTS SEE DREAM REALIZED IN LOOP TEMPLE

Old First Church Will Be Torn Down Soon.

BY THE REV. W. B. NORTON.

Fulfillment of a long cherished dream of Chicago Methodists will come May 1, when a start will be made on tearing down the First Methodist Episcopal church building at Clark and Washington streets. It will be wrecked to make way for the erection of the Chicago Temple.

The new building will occupy the old site and in addition will have 50 feet further frontage on Clark street. The structure will house the various activities of the Methodist church. "We will call the church the Chicago Temple to express our desire to maintain a downtown service in Chicago to administer to the civic, social, and church life of the city," explained the pastor, the Rev. John Thompson.

Will Have High Tower.

The Temple will be 260 feet high (twenty-one stories), with a main tower 140 feet higher. It will be built of Bedford stone and present a similarity of appearance to the University club building at Monroe and South Michigan avenue.

The temple will serve a double purpose. The tower and church entrance will be of ecclesiastical design, while the offices of the building will rival in modernness those of other business buildings.

The entrance to the auditorium will be on the first floor. The auditorium will seat 1,200, will have a splendid organ, and be free from noises of the street.

When the building is completed the total property value will be in excess of $5,000,000, according to a statement by George W. Dixon, president of the board of trustees.

Haven for Young People.

"While the church will be under the auspices of the Methodist denomination," the Rev. Mr. Thompson said, "we intend that its service will stand for a humane ministry without respect to creed, nationality or sex. We want it to be a haven for young people coming to the city from the country and place of helpfulness to all."

Methodists Hear Chinese Missionary Is Released

A cable received yesterday at Methodist headquarters, 740 Rush street, announced that the Rev. Sik I. Siong, a district superintendent of the Methodist mission of Foochow, China, who had been captured by Gen. Ma Puyun of Peking and held for ransom, had been released and the $8,000 ransom paid by the mission for his release had been returned by Gen. Ma, whose dismissal was likewise secured on the charge of extortion, fraud, and conspiracy.

CHICAGO BOYS' WEEK CHANGED TO MAY 19-25

Announcement that the dates of Chicago boys' week have been changed to May 19 to 25, to coincide with spring vacation in the public schools, was made yesterday by Dr. Milton H. Mack, general chairman.

Relieved of classroom work, more of Chicago's 325,000 boys will be free to participate in the week's exercises, said Dr. Mack. The committee will extend its plans to care for more participants in the games and exhibitions by which the youngsters will bid for adult interest.

There will be a parade of all Chicago boys' organizations in the loop the first day, games and field sports the second day, church exercises for boys by all creeds and denominations Sunday, May 21, and programs of health, public safety, industry and thrift on succeeding days.

RURAL SCHOOLS PLAN FOR ARBOR DAY PROGRAM

Plans for the observance of Arbor day in the rural schools were arranged when the officers of the Achievement club of each school met yesterday at Fullerton hall, Art institute, and were instructed in the proper method of planting and trimming trees in order that they will be able to take charge of the ceremony on Arbor day.

After the tree plan had been outlined by County Superintendent of Schools Edward J. Tobin a demonstration in tree pruning was given by County Adviser L. L. Heller of the county farm bureau and George Klehm, president of the Illinois Nurserymen's association. Trees for planting on Arbor day have been donated by the Nurserymen's association.

Each rural school will plant a tree which will be dedicated to the soldiers of the school district. Representatives of the American Legion will be present at each tree planting.

BUBBLING BROOK NOTHING IN YOUNG CHICAGO'S LIFE

Show Him Skunk in Movie and He's Thrilled.

BY GENEVIEVE FORBES.

Better one whizzing airplane than seven fluffy lambs gamboling on the colorless green of a moving picture screen. A skunk's better than a drove of elephants. And John Greenleaf Whittier could never have made his living writing film scripts in competition with Marconi, Edison, and the Wright brothers.

These are the deductions made by teachers and movie officials who yesterday tested 5,000 children from seven Chicago public schools in the second of the free admission programs at the Tivoli theater. The test was made to see if the modern boy is "canned" and interested only in apparatus in which "the wheels go round," or if he is still pastoral enough to enjoy a quiet field of sweet corn and a bubbling brook or two.

Bored by Maud Muller.

Maude Muller's rather safe adventures with the rake, the hay, and the judge frankly bored the children. But pictures of radio sets, automobiles steered by wireless, and other mechanical inventions of the day made them silent in rapt attention.

Whittier's whiskers drew a salvo of applause but the picturization of his "Barefoot Boy" stealing green apples and wading in shallow creeks put the children to sleep.

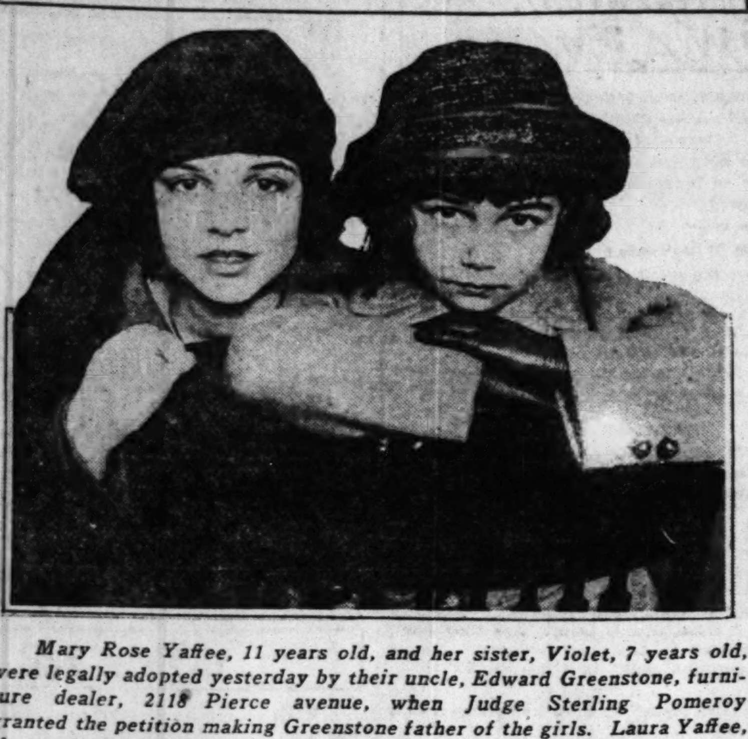
The skunk won first place as animal favorite on the screen. Elephants piling teakwood and obeying unimpressively dressed coolies did not fire the children's enthusiasm, but bison running across the prairie were popular. The elephants were working, the bison playing.

Like Their Animals Wild.

"Children of today like their animals wild and their own lives scientific and mechanistic," said Edmund B. Smith, principal of the Kozminski school. "Wild, free animals thrill them but rural life seems pretty slow to Chicago children. More wild animal pictures will draw the children away from wild man films. The experiments today proved that."

Pupils from the Kozminski, Bass, Shakespeare, Carter Practice, Burke, Kenwood, and Ray schools were admitted yesterday. Next Saturday pupils from seven other schools will be given free admission tickets. Reports on the findings of the teachers are being forwarded to film producers by Balaban & Katz, who are contributing the theater and films gratis to the schools.

THEY'VE FOUND A NEW DAD



Mary Rose Yaffee, 11 years old, and her sister, Violet, 7 years old, were legally adopted yesterday by their uncle, Edward Greenstone, furniture dealer, 2118 Pierce avenue, when Judge Sterling Pomeroy granted the petition making Greenstone father of the girls. Laura Yaffee, the mother, who is living at the Greenstone home, agreed to the adoption for the future of her children.

MRS. M'CORMICK'S ESTATE VALUED AT $989,840

The final accounting of the estate of the late Mrs. Harriet Hammond McCormick, wife of Cyrus H. McCormick, president of the International Harvester company, filed before Assistant Probate Judge Phillip J. Finnegan, yesterday, indicates that Mrs. McCormick left an estate valued at $989,840. Under the terms of the will, two sons, Cyrus McCormick Jr., and Gordon McCormick, are named as the chief beneficiaries to the estate.

The will provides for the payment of $100,000 to the Elizabeth McCormick memorial fund, $25,000 to the Visiting Nurses' association, and establishes two trust funds, one of $50,000 for the benefit of her brother, Edward A. Hammond, and another of $75,000 for the children of a deceased brother, James Hammond.

TARIFF BILL IS NEARLY READY, M'CUMBER SAYS

Washington, D. C., March 25.—[Special.]—That the writing of the tariff bill undoubtedly will be completed within a week was the promise today of Senator McCumber of North Dakota, chairman of the senate finance committee.

In the main, the important points of the bill are settled. The question of protection for the domestic dye industry is still to be determined, as is the basis of valuation, whether domestic or foreign. Among other matters yet to be settled are the duties on vegetable oils and the rate on magnesite.

Because of the absence from the city of Senator Frelinghuysen of New Jersey, it was agreed that settlement of the dye controversy should be allowed to go over until the first of the week.

On the subject of valuation, a member of the committee said on Saturday that the committee was no longer seriously considering any other valuation basis than foreign. Undoubtedly the senate will pass the bill on that principle.

TOWNLEY, HEAD OF NONPARTISAN, TO QUIT MARCH 31

Fargo, N. D., March 25.—Political harmony is present in the ranks of the North Dakota Nonpartisan league here tonight through the announcement of the impending resignation March 31 by A. C. Townley, president of the national organization, and the election of a new executive committee to take charge of the league affairs in North Dakota. The "clean sweep" element among the delegates achieved its desires.

Following this action, the convention indorsed congressional and state candidates and adjourned the longest convention in the history of the party in this state.

Lynn J. Frasier, former governor, was indorsed for United States senator and P. A. Moeller of Enderlin, John Sherman of Steele, and James Sinclair of Kenmare for congress in the First, Second, and Third North Dakota districts. Moeller was supported by the labor element in the convention. He is a railway conductor. Sherman is a farmer and a member of the state legislature, and Sinclair is the present congressman from the Third district.

B. F. Baker was nominated for governor; E. A. Bowman, lieutenant governor, and H. H. Aaker, secretary of state.

Three Men Are Held as Fake Solicitors

Three men, charged with soliciting funds for a dance given by the Chicago Fire Fans' association, were arrested yesterday on complaint of officials of the association, who notified the police the dance had been held some time ago. Those under arrest are Frank Heide, 1028 Sunyside avenue; Richard Hoffman, 64 East Van Buren street, and Benjamin F. Jacobs, 5019 Blackstone avenue.

TRIBUNE WANT AD RUSH 'TREMENDOUS,' SAYS PHONE CHIEF

BY ANNA GARROW.

[Tribune Chief Telephone Operator.]

The rush of traffic over TRIBUNE telephone lines yesterday by classified advertisers is best described by the word "tremendous." As early as 7:30 a. m., when more than half of the extra force of "ad takers" were at their posts ready for the first calls the flow of messages began to sweep into the switchboard. The demands on the telephone operators did not subside to normal until receipt of classified advertisements closed at 2 p. m.

A conservative estimate of the incoming calls handled by THE TRIBUNE between the hours of 7:30 a. m. and 2 p. m. places the figure in the neighborhood of 5,000. About 90 per cent of those calls went to the classified advertisement department.

Eight operators worked continuously and at the several peaks of business they were unable fully to handle the traffic. Those girls answered as many calls in six and one-half hours as one girl could answer in fifty-two hours, or seven normal working days. At the end of the day each operator felt that she had personally talked to half of the telephone subscribers of the city.

Woman Is Killed When Hit by Two Taxicabs

Injuries suffered when she was struck by two taxicabs early yesterday while crossing the street at Michigan avenue and 13th street resulted in the death of Miss Abbie Burkhaiter, 35 years old, a saleswoman from Frankfort, Ind. Miss Burkhaiter was struck by a Town cab driven by Frank Caravela, 4335 Lake Park avenue, and then was knocked into the path of a north bound Yellow cab driven by Max Zaklin.

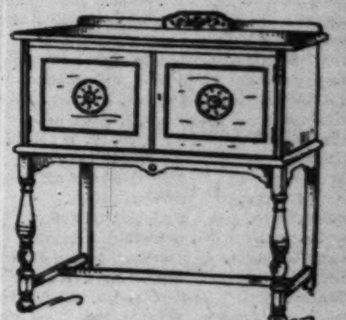
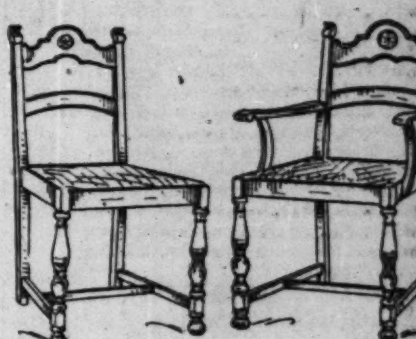
IF YOUR dining room can be improved in appearance by new furniture, this is the time to do it.



We are showing you here a dining room suite which for beauty of design, for quality of construction, and for very low price is a remarkable offering.

There seems to be just now a special interest in what is known as the Italian renaissance styles. They are certainly very choice; and most of those who see these pieces like them. We shall enjoy having you come and see them.



You know our general policy here; we want it known. First: That Scholle quality shall be maintained in everything we sell; there's no better quality to be had. Second: That whatever you buy here at whatever price you pay, is guaranteed to be satisfactory, or you needn't keep it. You may have had the experience of buying furniture, which for some reason or other—any reason—you didn't want to keep. You don't have to give a reason here, except that if there should be, by mistake, something wrong with the goods, we do want to know about it.

Otherwise, all you need to do is to say that you don't want it, or you wish you hadn't bought it, or whatever you say, we take it back and return your money.

That's what we mean by "satisfaction guaranteed."

1850, SAN FRANCISCO— CHICAGO, 1922

dministration of justice and operation of the inal law in San Francisco in 1850 was in a bad . The entire state of California was overrun criminals and irresponsible adventurers re- ited from all parts of the world, and especially the British penal colonies of Australia. Life property were in constant and increasing jeop- . A few excerpts from a history of those days, tten by Mary Floyd Williams from contempora- us documents and recently published by the versity of California Press, reveal a startling ilarity to conditions in Chicago today.

The gang organization quickly appeared among [the criminal element]. Instinctive obedience given to those who could decide which offices ht best be robbed and which should be avoided; could acceptably divide the spoils or provide and counsel for a hard pressed subordinate, ablish an alibi, or sit among the good men and to mete out justice to the prisoner at the bar."

The criminal courts were quickly at the mercy lever and well paid lawyers, who imposed upon every possible technical evasion until the ma- nery of the law became a shield for the criminal er than a safeguard to the community."

It proved to be impossible to keep witnesses ether for the slow progress of the law, and any oner was almost sure of discharge if his lawyer ld sufficiently retard the prosecution of the e."

o much for the situation in the courts. Every in these indictments of the California justice 1850 might have been taken from editorial ex- sions and the addresses of prominent citizens the Chicago situation in 1922. But history goes ther than that. It fixes responsibility, just as ponsibility has been fixed in Chicago.

The demands of commercial life were insistent exacting, and citizens devoted themselves to their private business, leaving public matters to the men they had placed in office. They did not spend their overcrowded days waiting in the criminal courts to serve as jurymen. . . . They did not devote themselves to the petty politics of their city wards. With the long desired franchise of the American citizen safely within their grasp, they forgot the dangers and clamors of the interregnum and neglected to defend the courts and the ballot box from the manipulation of unworthy hands."

Could any better arraignment of conditions and responsibilities in the 1922 crime wave of Chicago be offered than that of the 1850 crime wave of San Francisco? Conditions are almost identical.

In California they forced the organization of the committee of vigilance. The Tribune sincerely hopes that the marked similarity of conditions will not drive Chicago to adopt a similar remedy, even though that remedy was spectacularly effective in California. It will not if the authorities function as they are qualified to function and if citizens lend adequate support through the authorized agencies of the law.

THE COAL STRIKE.

Despite steadily accumulating indications and repeated warnings of the approach of a national coal strike on April 1, the actual issuance of a call for strike, addressed to 600,000 miners, comes as something of a shock. Such a shock may be of value in stimulating the public to attempt a little intelligent thought upon the subject.

Coal is a basic problem. The handling of the problem has a bearing upon the life, comfort and prosperity of almost every worker and householder in the country. A strike promises to give us trouble. We appear to be in for it. How are we to get through it, or out of it?

The situation seems to be this: Due to the extraordinary demand for steam coal in war days and early post-war days, the number of coal mines—real and so-called—and the number of miners in the United States were approximately doubled. In November, 1919, while demand for coal was still strong, the United Mine Workers, over the protest of President Wilson, who said they were breaking their war time agreement, struck for higher pay. They obtained heavy increases through the intervention of the government, with an agreement expiring March 31, 1922.

Since then industrial depression has reduced demand for steam coal to a minimum, and the price of coal, based in part upon the wage rate, has contributed to the industrial depression. It is a vicious circle. As a result large numbers of miners have been idle, while overhead expenses have piled up at the mines. Despite high wages the men have not earned a decent livelihood. Now the bituminous miners are demanding a new agreement at the present rate, with a six hour day and a five day week, and the anthracite miners are demanding a 20 per cent increase.

Obviously such a settlement would not help lower the price of coal, help reduce rail rates and costs, and help restore industrial activity with corresponding increase in the amount of work available for the miners. The central competitive district operators as a whole refuse even to discuss it. In that, we agree with the miners, they are wrong. But the problem is greater than that.

It is an accumulation of error in the management of the mines and of the miners' unions running over several years. It is an accumulation which has cost the country dearly. At times inordinate profits have been taken by operators and some others in the coal business. At times miners have made more than highly skilled trades. At times we have had a surplus and at times a shortage of coal. At times miners have broken their agreements as in 1920 when the strike caused great industrial loss in Illinois, and at times operators have disregarded theirs, as in the present refusal of the Pennsylvania and Ohio men to meet the miners. Everybody loses.

The approaching strike will merely bring on another crisis such as many which have marked the business in the past.

What good, then, can come of it? Probably none, unless it arouses the public sufficiently to demand and obtain a complete readjustment of the entire coal industry. We want a settlement which gives some promise of permanency, and will relieve us of this constantly recurring evil of coal troubles. That would require a reduction of the number of miners, and the closing of poor mines with high overhead costs. It would require reduction of the seasonal fluctuation in coal demand, for which the public is largely responsible. It would allow of lower wages by assuring more work per year to the miner. It would allow of lower prices by reducing overhead expense for the operator. But it requires vision, courage, wisdom, and unselfishness alike on the part of the operator, the miner, and the public.

We doubt that it can be accomplished. But until it is accomplished we will be subject to these constantly recurring troubles and losses. Appreciation of that fact is about the best the country will get out of the strike. Some day, some year, it will lead us to a sane settlement of the problem.

Editorial of the Day

THEY OUGHT TO CONFER.

[Detroit Free Press.]

Various reasons are given by the coal operators to explain why they do not conform to the spirit of the agreement of 1920 under which an interstate conference was to be held this year with the miners for the purpose of making a new agreement and avoiding a strike.

The Pittsburgh Coal Producers' association tells the secretary of labor that it will not take part in a conference because it has decided not to make an interstate agreement, but to make a separate agreement with its own men. The Pittsburgh operators argue, therefore, that a conference is useless. The southern Ohio coal operators say the miners by their own unauthorized action have disrupted the interstate movement, and, furthermore, that the methods used in making an interstate agreement have been challenged in the courts as contrary to the Sherman anti-trust act. The Indiana operators fall back on the argument that the conference would be futile. Certain Ohio operators and the Illinois operators are willing to go into conference if the holdouts will join, and thereby reject the arguments advanced by their brother operators as reasons for breaking the conference agreement.

With such a jangling of arguments and policies as is here revealed, the outsider is warranted in the conclusion that there is no real reason why the conference should not meet in accordance with the resolution of 1920. A genuine reason for breaking the understanding that was reached at that time would appeal to all of the operators and result in common action upon common ground.

It may be that there is good cause to believe a conference could not reach agreement. It may be that any agreement that the conference might conceivably reach would be illegal. But even if these things are true, the way to make a clear issue would be to convene and let the break come in the conference.

LIMBERLOST (EVENING).

The golden glow of sunset slowly fades,
And twilight trails her robes of somber hue
Over the fields and thru the leafy glades;
Departing day now bids the world adieu.

The darkness softly steals across the sky,
The crickets chirp their evening roundelay,
Anon the lonely night-owl's mournful cry
Weirdly resounds, now near, now far away.

High in the jewel-studded vault of blue
Serenely sails the argent moon, her beams,
Like shafts of silver, pierce the darkness thru,
Revealing earth a wonderland of dreams.
LASSIE.

WHAT! YOU, TOO!

As I lie at eve repining after I've been muchly dining, comes the thought that there's a lining, golden hued forevermore,

To my feelings as I fritter, speeding time with silver glitter and as I slyly litter ashes on the floor,

And I end my rosy day dreams that hurry by in endless streams and my mind with memory teems at end of day,

For my heart I try to cleave, though I know that I would grieve for my isle of make-believe so far away;

Yet always is the yearning, somewhere the fire is burning and I would be always turning to that day

When I will be up and going, like the wind willy nilly blowing, to the land where cows are lowing, far away,

For my heart is set on leaving, and so end this endless grieving, for I surely am believing, there's a way. ELF.

THE LION'S CUB!

[From yesterday's W. G. N.]

Kermit Roosevelt, son of the former President, was called as a character witness. Assistant District Attorney Pecora put many hypothetical questions to him, inquiring what he would think of a man's character if he knew his place at Goldfield made $20,000 the night it opened. To one of these questions Roosevelt made this reply:

"I would not think that a man who ran a gambling house was necessarily of bad character any more than I would consider that a man who ran a church was necessarily of good character."

THAT SLUGGISH FEELING.

THE symptoms of protein putrefaction in mildly constipated people who have no definite organic disease, according to Dr. A. F. Kraetzer, are as follows:

Sallowness. The victim, in addition to being yellowish in cast, shows a faint, yellow staining of the neck under the ears. He may have some form of eczema. His tongue is coated, but it is not especially enlarged or indented. He is subject to various kinds of rheumatoid or neuralgic pains.

At times he has flatulence and a heavy feeling in the abdomen, which he calls biliousness. It is quite possible that this uneasiness is in the liver.

Oftentimes there is an excessive amount of indican in the urine.

Every now and then the victim develops a state of mind—a sort of mental heaviness which he attributes to biliousness.

What does Dr. Kraetzer advise in the treatment of such cases?

Meat, fish, eggs, and cheese are excluded from the diet for the time being. Milk, cream, and cream cheese in moderation are allowed. Vegetables, potatoes, macaroni, cereals, bread, fruit, cream, and butter make up the diet.

Sugar is temporarily excluded.

The exclusion of meat, fish, eggs, and cheese lasts for four weeks, after which they are returned, at first in very small allowance, and after that a gradual increase.

Constipation is overcome by injections of oil or ichthyol water if either be necessary.

The discomforts of those with no organic diseases, but who have plenty of symptoms, may be due to constipation, with or without starch fermentation. Those due to constipation with protein putrefaction have the symptoms outlined above, and their dietary treatment is as given.

Other group causes, according to Dr. Kraetzer, are dental sepsis, chronic tonsillitis, chronic rhinitis, and chronic fibrositis.

The last group has the lot of miscellaneous pains which are commonly grouped together, under the head of pains due to muscular rheumatism.

A person subject to muscular rheumatism may be made worse by bad weather or by error in diet.

Dry, cold weather is less apt than cold, damp weather, to precipitate an attack. The pain and stiffness are worse in the morning and wear off as the day goes on.

Some are made worse by eating a heavy meat diet, some by eating sweets and starches to excess.

To make the people of this group right, all bad habits must be changed, such as constipation, too little sleep, late hours, wrong eating habits, improper diet.

In a very large proportion of such cases a persisting focus of mild infection can be found. The tonsils, teeth, sinuses, pelvic organs, gall bladder, appendix, and, above all, the colon, may be at fault.

If the focus can be found and cleaned up, the pains will often come to an end.

Locally, heat and massage are of value. Dr. Kraetzer says the massage must be a deep, firm rubbing of the muscles and tendinous insertions.

Light therapy is helpful. So are Turkish baths.

T. M. S. writes: "I have two fatty lumps on my head and one on my side about the size of half marbles.

"The one on the side has been there for years. Those on my head have appeared recently.

"They seem to be growing—are painless but unsightly—on a bald head. The barber calls them wens.

"What causes them? Are they likely to lead to anything dangerous? Is an operation safe? Is it advisable?"

REPLY.

In all probability these are lipomas or fatty tumors.

Lipomas are not malignant.

They grow slowly and rarely call for operation.

EVER TRY AN ICE MASSAGE!

B. D. P. writes: "Will you please advise what causes a puffed-up condition under a person's eyes?

"If this is caused by poisons in the system, how can it be eliminated?

"Have the tonsils anything to do with it?"

REPLY.

Are your kidneys sound?

Do you get enough sleep? In a well ventilated room?

Let us say you have found your organs sound and your habits good, and still the puffiness continues—what next?

Go over your face each morning with a lump of ice. A morning ice massage is the best of all complexion remedies. It likewise cures puffiness under the eyes and circles around the eyes not due to organic disease or bad habits.

SO IT MUST BE ALL RIGHT.

S. R. writes: "Kindly let me know if it is dangerous for children, ages 9 and 10 years, to wear woolen socks in the winter, the knees being exposed."

REPLY.

No. The Scotch dress that way and not even Scotch whisky feazes them.

END EPSOM SALTS ORGY.

E. T. writes: "What effect will Epsom salts have on the system if taken two teaspoonful at a time about four or five times each week?"

REPLY.

It will knock you out if you stick to it.

RICE IS GOOD FOR YOU.

Miss F. writes: "Is rice a healthy food, and is it fattening?"

REPLY.

It is.

That is my answer to both the front end and the hind end of your question.

IS NOT A MEDICINE.

Mrs. S. writes: "Will you kindly tell me about the use of agar-agar for constipation?

"How much is considered a dose? How often taken?"

REPLY:

It is not a medicine and need not be accurately measured. Some eat a tablespoonful a day and some a handful.

MICROSCOPES.

Chicago, March 19.—[Friend of the People.]—I am anxious to know something about when and by whom the first microscope was invented. I have looked everywhere and cannot get any information about it. S. L.

Magnifying glasses have been known from early antiquity, one being discovered in the ruins of Ninevah. In the strict sense of the word, however, Zacharias Janssen, a spectacle maker of Holland, constructed a compound microscope about the year 1590. He presented his instrument to Charles Albert, archduke of Austria. It was nearly six feet long and was supported upon brass dolphins on an ebony board. It contained two lenses.

Have you tried the encyclopedias for information on the microscope?

ABOUT DIVISION FENCES.

Chicago, March 19.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Can our next door neighbor be made to put up a fence? We should like to have a neat back yard, but it is impossible when their junk is always thrown over on our side. What are the laws about fences between lots? L. D.

Section 11 of the fence act as amended in 1917 provides:

"If any person who is liable to contribute to the erection or reparation of a division fence shall neglect or refuse to make or repair his proportion of such fence the party injured, after giving sixty days' notice, in writing, that a fence should be erected, or ten days' notice, in writing, that the reparation of a fence is necessary, may make or repair the same at the expense of the party so neglecting or refusing, to be recovered from him, with costs of suit, before a justice of the peace or any other court of competent jurisdiction, and the party so neglecting or refusing, after notice in writing, shall be liable to the party injured for all damages which shall thereby accrue."

Since the act is primarily directed at fences between agricultural properties, the wording of section 2 provides that a fence "sufficient to turn stock" shall be legal. Although the applicability of this wording to urban property is open to some question, there is no express exemption, and we regard the act as applying to division fences between city lots which are inclosed on their other boundaries. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

WHY WORRY!

Chicago, March 20.—[Friend of the People.]—Without thought of wrong doing I wrote a purely moral letter addressed to myself just to see if it was delivered. Is that violating the postal laws and will it cause me trouble? I fear I have done wrong and am worried. A. H.

You have not violated the postal laws, as long as the letter was "purely moral."

THE SCHOOL BUS.

Covington, Ind., March 17.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—I have a contract for hauling pupils in Indiana over a fifteen mile route. There is one party on my route that lives on a road that is impassible at present with a machine. However, he still insists that I haul his children. Am I compelled to do so as long as the roads are in that condition? W. M. S.

We could advise you to better advantage if the wording of your contract were before us. If you made no exception to your contract you probably will be liable if you do not carry it out.

WASHING THE DIRTY LINEN IN PUBLIC.

Chicago, March 20.—After reading your account of the proceedings of the Chicago Federation of Labor I began to wonder how long you and your kind will be able to distort news items and make them read to suit your purpose by discrediting honest people.

As one of the signers of the resolution in question I wish to inform you that you either lied deliberately or your reporter misinformed you; the latter I doubt. This resolution mention one big union nor anything advocated by the I. W. W. We simply asked for closer affiliation in the various industries the same as the employer have. The idea being that no industry would be permitted to either lockout or have a strike till it was settled by an arbitration board composed of the employers and representatives of the American Federation of Labor. Certainly we have a right to advocate with out you distorting the news to read just the opposite from what was really said. One of these days we are going to put the skids on you teach you the lesson that Honesty is the Best Policy. Maybe some of the distorted minds that read your sheet and have no more brains than to believe what you print will be able to listen to the talk of honest labor advocates but the time will come when the distorted brains of those who believe that the Citizens Committee is a benevolent society will be rudely awakened to the fact that it is a smoke screen for the crooked material men and crooked banker. All you who are honest in purpose and believe in honest labor organizations and would like some information that is not printed in the Daily Press can get it by applyng to the Chicago Federation of Labor, 166 West Washington street, sixth floor.

I suppose this will find its way to you waste basket. GLENN W. CAMPBELL,
Laundry Workers' Int. Union 278.

WHAT THE A. F. L. REPRESENTS.

Chicago, March 21.—Your editorial in today's TRIBUNE very erroneously assumes that all workers are in favor of the closed shop. This is very far from true. At no time in its history has the A. F. L. enrolled within its ranks 20 per cent of the American workers, and of the 20 per cent it is safe to assume half were foreign born. Conditions in the steel industry are no doubt not ideal, yet the workers who were most concerned preferred them to dictation from Foster and Fitzpatrick. The native born American, who I insist is most to be considered, and the American born employer can get on very well together if left to themselves. The trouble in industry today is the agitator, in mostly every case of foreign birth, and who never worked or never will. Mr. Gompers, an Englishman, assumes to speak for the entire body of American workers, whereas it is very much to be doubted if he represents 10 per cent of them.
FAIRPLAY.

WHO ARE AMERICANS!

Chicago, March 20.—Who are Americans? How many generations, United States born, does it take to produce an American? What branch of the human family did Mr. Frederic T. O. Wood spring from? Is he an Indian, a cliff dweller, or does he come from a remoter race?

Draw up a roll of honor of the men and women who have accomplished anything worth while in these our United States, and the majority of the names will be what these three initialed gentry are pleased to call foreign.

Ten generations of Chinamen born in the United States are nevertheless Chinamen. I was born in a nation which has lived in the land they still inhabit for a matter of four thousand years, and is of an origin far purer than any other at present existing, and that is Sweden. My father became a naturalized American citizen after he had been in this country six years, and I am just as good an American citizen as any man that breathes the air. An Irishman, Englishman, Scotchman or Welshman is just as much of a foreigner, and more, as a Swede, Russian, German, Pole or any other if they have not their citizenship papers. The fact that some of these howlers against those they call foreigners had the English language for a mother tongue does not make them a bit better as American citizens. Often the case is the reverse. There were just as many Swedes and Hollanders helped to settle this country, from its earliest history down to the present, as any other nationality. And they were Johnny on the job in a pinch.

What about the Paris edition of THE TRIBUNE? What is the "American Society"? Who gave them a license to set themselves apart as an American society? Pish-tosh and piffle!
S. E. GORDON,
President of Nothing.

GRATITUDE.

Chicago, March 20.—I want to express my gratitude to Mr. Frederic T. O. Wood for his fine sentiments in his article on "Our Attitude Toward Immigrants" in today's TRIBUNE.

I hope there are many more true Americans like him, who are not afraid to "speak up" for their country whenever occasion demands. We have had too much of the other kind of drivel and it does one's heart good to read an article like the one mentioned. More power to Mr. Wood and all who express themselves like him. J. R. S.

"THE SUGARED TONGUE."

Chicago, March 20.—The Milwaukee Journal in its editorial which you printed March 16 is building a straw man alongside the St. Lawrence waterway project to smash with one fell swoop. It editorially criticizes Herman H. Hettler, president of the Illinois Manufacturers' association, as too trusting because Mr. Hettler expressed the belief that Gov. Miller of New York and Gov. Allen of Kansas are not so far apart on the St. Lawrence waterway question as it may seem. The Milwaukee Journal takes things too seriously.

It would be asking too much of human credulity to expect Gov. Miller to join the middle western St. Lawrence waterway fans when so many of his constituents apprehend the waterway would reduce New York City to the minor importance of an eastern fur trading post such as Chicago was 100 years ago.

But, goodness gracious! Cannot Mr. Hettler be polite to New York's governor? He wants Gov. Miller to come to Chicago and discuss the question of the waterway's feasibility with Gov. Allen, who is a leading supporter of the project. Some people believe in going after things with an ax. Others use the sugared tongue, the soft pedal, and the inviting smile. Mr. Hettler is of the latter and frequently successful type.
JOHN M. GLENN,
Secretary, Illinois Manufacturers' Association.

IN REFERENCE TO THE REV. J. H. WILLIAMSON.

Chicago, March 20.—As to Mayor Thompson's law enforcement minister and others conspicuous by their voluntary activities, the following editorial from the Washington Post of Jan. 8, 1921, is commended:

"When a minister of the gospel enters the arena of politics and arrogates to himself the powers and privileges of a boss, he must expect to be the target for attack.

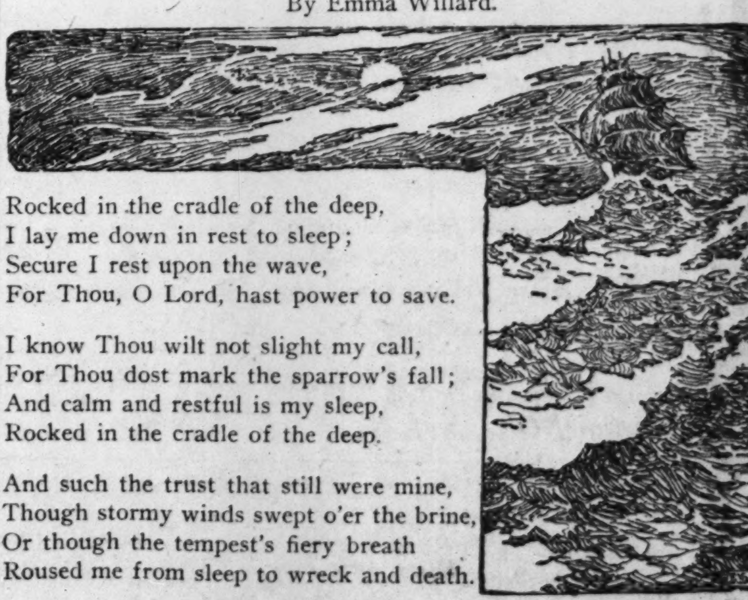
"There are many highly paid professional reformers in Washington and in other cities of the country who have been tempted from their legitimate fields of labor by the lush grass of specialized activities. They have deserted the drudgeries of parish work, with its penury, its sick calls, its funerals, etc., to become censors of public conduct. They toil not, neither do they spin, but they hold conventions, collect funds, issue impressive manifestoes, and browbeat congress. Yet they demand for themselves the same public respect that is willingly and spontaneously vouchsafed to the humblest priest of religion who trudges in the path of the lowly Nazarene.

"It is they, not the clergy, who are made the butt of jokes and the target of the artist's humor. They should not complain, for the remedy is in their hands. Let them return to the duties for which they were ordained."
RUTH PETERSON.

POEMS YOU OUGHT TO KNOW

ROCKED IN THE CRADLE OF THE DEEP.

By Emma Willard.



Rocked in the cradle of the deep,
I lay me down in rest to sleep;
Secure I rest upon the wave,
For Thou, O Lord, hast power to save.

I know Thou wilt not slight my call,
For Thou dost mark the sparrow's fall;
And calm and restful is my sleep,
Rocked in the cradle of the deep.

And such the trust that still were mine,
Though stormy winds swept o'er the brine,
Or though the tempest's fiery breath
Roused me from sleep to wreck and death.

In ocean's caves still safe with Thee,
The germ of immortality;
And calm and peaceful is my sleep,
Rocked in the cradle of the deep.

MILLER IS DENIED PARTICIPATION IN MEDICAL 'EXAMS'

Precautions Taken to Keep Questions Secret.

As a result of the disclosures regarding traffic in state licenses which led to the present investigation being conducted by State's Attorney Crowe, William Henry Harrison Miller, director of public registration and education, it is understood, has been divorced from all connection with the state medical examinations to be held in Chicago tomorrow, Tuesday, and Wednesday.

Every possible safeguard has been thrown about these examinations, and full responsibility for any possible leaks have been placed on the shoulders of each of the five members of the board of medical examiners. The examinations will be held under the direction of V. C. Michel, superintendent of registration, who, declaring he was acting directly under Gov. Small's orders, suddenly appeared at the pharmacy examination here two weeks ago and supplanted Director Miller's son-in-law, K. A. Fries, as the man actively in charge.

Miller Loses Control.

Ever since Miller has been in office it has been the custom for the examiners to forward the sets of written examination questions to the department of registration and education at Springfield in advance. All examinations were held under the personal direction of Mr. Miller or of his son-in-law, Mr. Fries, contrary to the procedure formerly followed of having the superintendent of registration and the board of examiners in full charge.

Director Miller attempted to take charge of the recent pharmacy examinations held here, but desisted when Isaac Platt, a Chicago druggist and chairman of the pharmacy board, threatened to use physical force if necessary to see that Michel remained in charge.

This time no examination questions have been sent in advance to Director Miller's department. They will be brought to the examination rooms by each member of the medical board, which consist of Dr. L. C. Taylor of Springfield, chairman; Dr. H. P. Bierne of Quincy, Dr. E. L. Damron of Effingham, and Drs. J. Rawson Penning and Gilbert Fitz-Patrick of Chicago.

Michel to Be in Charge.

"Mr. Michel has notified me that he will be in direct charge of the examination," said Dr. Taylor yesterday. "I have not seen or talked to Director Miller concerning the examination for several days. Full responsibility has been placed upon the shoulders of each individual member of the board regarding the questions. I have the questions which I prepared in my pocket now and no one has seen them except myself and my stenographer.

"The other members of the board have been instructed to hold their questions and not to show them to any one until they are placed on the desks in the examination rooms in the county building at the beginning of the written tests. Each physician will stay in the room during the writing of the answers to his special set of questions."

Letters from all over the state continue to pour into the office of Assistant State's Attorney Samuel M. Hamilton, who has charge of the investigation under Mr. Crowe. Many persons have offered to come from downstate points to furnish information, one witness sending word that he was going to arrive by airplane with some important data.

CHARLES POPE, SUGAR REFINER, PASSES AWAY

Charles Pope, once known as the "glucose king," died yesterday morning at his home at 1040 Lake Shore drive, after an illness of two weeks with pneumonia. He was 79 years of age.

CHARLES POPE.
[Matzene Photo.]

Mr. Pope attracted wide attention in 1914 when he sold his beet sugar plants at Geneva, Ill., and Venice, Ill., to the Corn Products company for $3,000,000, said at the time to be ten times the actual value of the properties. Later as head of the Pope Sugar Refining company, he was charged with sugar profiteering, but the case was dismissed. In 1921 he was involved in a dispute over a will disposing of the $60,000 estate of his nephew, the late John Wilson of Geneva.

Mr. Pope was born in England in March, 1843, and came to Chicago when he was a small boy. His first permanent employment here was as a lighthouse keeper. From this he went into the glucose, and then into the beet sugar industry. His hobby in recent years was floriculture and at his summer home, "Grassmere," at Geneva, Ill., he had extensive greenhouses where he spent much of his time in growing and grafting tropical plants.

His widow, Lucy B. Pope, survives, with five sons, J. William, Richard D., Arthur W., Charles E., and Benjamin B. Pope. Funeral services will take place tomorrow morning at 10:30 o'clock from the home, with interment at Graceland.

Mrs. Sarah Brown Ramsey Dies in Cleveland, Ohio

Mrs. Sarah Brown Ramsey, wife of the Rev. D. Alfred Ramsey, who was professor of historical theology in the Lutheran Theological seminary from 1904 to 1917, died yesterday at the home of her son in Cleveland. She was well known in Lutheran church work during her residence here. She is survived by her husband, who is now pastor of St. John's Lutheran church at Stacy, Minn., and their three sons, the Rev. James W. Ramsey and the Rev. Joseph M. Ramsey, both of Cleveland, and Alfred P. Ramsey, a senior in the law school at Yale university. Interment will be held Monday at Greenville, Pa.

FATTY'S NEMISES

Mrs. Maud Bambina Delmont.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

THE elation of Roscoe (Fatty) Arbuckle's defense over the depositions taken here a short time ago will be short lived, according to Mrs. Maude Bambina Delmont, who is the chief accuser of the obese comedian.

Mrs. Delmont, who departed last night for Cleveland, "to visit friends and to get a rest," has been in a hospital here since Monday. With her yesterday was Frank Peska, assistant state's attorney, the San Francisco prosecutor's representative.

"Every one of the depositions trying to blacken Virginia Rappe's character was false," she asserted.

"A great opportunity was lost in making a wonderful example of Arbuckle's case. It's not the first time he has done a thing like this, either. It makes me boil to see these attempts to defame Virginia's character and none whatever of Arbuckle's past brought up."

The present trial, Fatty's nemesis is convinced, will be the last, and the result will be a verdict of guilty. She desires to see justice done, to see him receive punishment to fit his crime.

J. OGDEN ARMOUR WILL GET $1.50 A DAY AS WITNESS

J. Ogden Armour is going to collect $1.50 for a day's work. The collection, it is expected, will take place Monday. The money will be paid by the government. Mr. Armour was served yesterday with a subpœna requesting his presence before Chester Morrell, examiner for the stockyards administration, at Kansas City tomorrow to testify in the case of members of the Kansas City live stock exchange vs. Armour & Co. The witness fee will be $1.50. Mileage of $45.10 can also be collected.

HUNGRY RUSSIANS WORSHIP YANKEE RELIEF'S AGENT

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

LONDON, March 25.—To be worshiped as a god, before whom old men fell on their knees in adoration, was the experience of Henry C. Wolfe of Coshocton, O., an American relief administration worker in the Samara district, according to a report received by the administration's headquarters here. While Mr. Wolfe was inspecting the home of a member of the local child kitchen committee at Kureodova a number of old men forced their way into the room, where they knelt before him, weeping, making the sign of the cross, and touching their foreheads to the floor.

The men explained that they wanted to worship the representative of the American relief administration and that they now go to the American relief kitchens to worship America just as they go to the churches to worship Christ, their other Savior.

Mr. Wolfe found typhus prevalent in the Samara district, where the people are entirely without medical aid.

SPANISH PICADOR SAYS SPIRIT OF BULL WAS COWED

The reason why the bull at the International amphitheater at 42d and Halsted streets Friday night was too proud to fight, even when taunted with jazz music and red cloths, was explained yesterday by Señor Charlot Molina, Spain's champion toreador.

"I understand," said the athlete, still badly shaken from the nudge received from his reluctant antagonist's horn, "that the bull had been cowed."

He explained that for two days the animals had been abused, slugged, beaten, even lacerated, in the bull pen. Instead of arousing their fighting blood, it merely broke their spirits. Señor Molina promised three new bulls of peevish disposition and perfect eyesight for the rest of his battles. Today's matinée begins at 2:30 o'clock.

UNCLE SAM DIPS PEN IN INK AGAIN ON RHINE DEBTS

Suspected Evasion Draws New Note to Allies.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., March 25.—[Special.]—Identic notes supplementary to the notes delivered March 22 by the American ambassadors in London, Paris, Brussels, Rome and Tokio, to the five principal allied governments regarding American rights to payment for the costs of the American army of occupation in Germany, were given to the same governments today.

It was stated that the original notes delivered by the United States to the allies showed that information in possession of this government indicated that France, Belgium and Italy had been paid in full for the costs of their armies of occupation in the Rhineland.

New Information Received.

Recent Paris dispatches had indicated a disposition to question the authenticity of the American government's statement, and the supplementary notes delivered today, it was said, were to inform the allied governments that the United States was fully acquainted with the situation, and considered its rights to payment of the actual costs of its army of occupation upon an equal footing with the allied powers could not be affected by any readjustment of accounts.

The text of the note follows:

"In its note of March 22, 1922, the government of the United States stated that according to the information and accounts in the possession of the allied governments, it appeared that the amount due to France for its army costs to May 1, 1921, had been paid in full, chiefly through deliveries of property.

"The government of the United States is now informed that it is proposed to postpone the debit to France for the value of the Saar mines as though delivery were made in kind during the year 1922.

Not Disposed to Quibble.

"This government does not deem it necessary at this time to enter into questions relating to debits or credits in the account or to consider the effect of the postponement of the debit for the value of the Saar mines, and all questions of this character are fully reserved.

"It is deemed to be sufficient to say that it is the view of this government that the question whether or not there would be a deficit in the French account for army costs as of May 1, 1921, upon a final agreed statement of that account, is a matter which does not affect the position of this government with respect to its right to receive the payment of the actual cost of its army of occupation upon an equal footing with the allied powers."

WANT U. S. TO STAY

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS, March 25.—The British intend to request the United States to reconsider the decision to withdraw the American troops on the Rhine, according to a reliable source of information. The allies realize the powerful moral effect the American flag has on the Rhine and the influence its presence wields on Germany. The withdrawal of the Yanks will produce a bad reaction, it is feared.

The British will ask the United States to maintain a small contingent equal in number to the English troops who will remain in Cologne, that Belgium reduce its force, and that France cut its army of occupation from 70,000 to 30,000 men. This, it is contended, will silence Germany's complaints of a heavy military burden.

The British believe the French will consent to a reduction of their troops on the Rhine in order to retain American coöperation, and will also agree to terms for settlement of the costs of the Yankee army of occupation.

FUNERAL SERVICE FOR J. P. AGNEW HELD TUESDAY

Funeral services for John P. Agnew, 61 year old, who was a contractor for many years in Chicago, will be held Tuesday at the residence, 5409 Calumet avenue. Burial will be in Calvary cemetery.

Mr. Agnew came into the public limelight early in 1902 when he refused to take "extras" for the completion of the 39th street intercepting sewer system, of which he was in charge. Mr. Agnew undertook the completion of the improvement after another construction company had given up the job. He was also in charge of the construction of the Lawrence avenue pumping station and the Springfield avenue and Central avenue pumping stations, besides other city contracts.

In 1908, after attempting the construction of the Lawrence avenue intercepting sewer, Mr. Agnew filed a petition in bankruptcy, listing among his assets several suits he had against the city for work completed.

ASSISTANT FIRE CHIEF TELLS OF DEPARTMENT ROW

Cullerton Is Blamed for Friction.

Animosity of years' standing between John C. McDonnell, chief of the fire prevention bureau of the fire department, and John F. Cullerton, its business manager, flared into public charges at yesterday's meeting of the aldermanic committees investigating the recent west side fire.

JOHN F. CULLERTON.

McDonnell charged that there is friction among the nine assistant marshals and the fifty-odd battalion chiefs in the fire department.

Directly Blames Cullerton.

"Who is responsible for this friction?" asked Ald. Armitage, acting chairman of the joint fire and building committees.

"John F. Cullerton, business manager of the fire department," said McDonnell, second assistant chief.

JOHN C. McDONNELL.

McDonnell's statements were somewhat in contrast to his statements on Friday that politics has not hampered the operation of the fire prevention bureau, of which he is the head, and the committee decided to demand his correspondence with Chief O'Connor concerning conditions in his department.

These letters, it is declared, are filled with indirect attacks on Business Manager Cullerton, who is not a member of the uniform rank of the department and is looked upon by McDonnell and his bankers as an interloper who has taken advantage of Chief O'Connor's partial disability at certain times to "run" the fire department.

Nephew of Late Alderman.

Cullerton is a close friend of Ald. John A. Richert, chairman of the council finance committee, and is a nephew of Edward F. Cullerton, former alderman, now dead.

"I expect to be summoned as a witness before the joint committees and I will make my reply to McDonnell when I appear before the committee," Mr. Cullerton said when he heard of McDonnell's charges.

"Who cares how many pieces of automobile apparatus, brooms, coal, or what not that Cullerton may buy for the department?" Chief McDonnell asked. "That is his business. The ordinance creating his position defines his duties as that of business manager, but it does not give him authority to direct the personnel of the department."

McDonnell charged that he has received only twenty-four inspection reports from battalion marshals since last December and that the number should have been much larger.

"Who is to blame for that?" asked Chairman Armitage.

McDonnell refused to answer.

Cites Various Incidents.

McDonnell then said he had attempted to have two firemen in his department transferred for petty grafting. Not only was he unable to do so, he asserted, but when he suspended one of the men for a second offense the suspension order was rescinded. Another fireman attached to the fire prevention department, McDonnell said, was selling fire apparatus instead of inspecting buildings. Chief McDonnell tried to get him transferred. Instead he was promoted to a lieutenancy.

That the Austin building, in which the recent fire started, was a fire trap and was known to be such by the fire department for the last thirty years was the statement of Fourth Assistant Fire Marshal Egan. He intimated that many of the big buildings along State street in the loop were also fire traps and that any day a similar fire might break out in one of them.

REVISION CUTS THOUSANDS FROM REGISTRY LISTS

As a result of the revision of the registration lists after the hearings last night it is believed that more names were erased than were added at the registration last Tuesday.

Immediately after the registration the 5,000 judges and clerks of the various precincts got busy on their books and as a result 165,000 suspect notices were sent out—more than were ever sent out before at one time in the history of the board of election commissioners.

The suspect notices required the voter to appear at his polling place between 6 and 10 p. m. and show cause why his name should not be removed from the polling lists. If the suspect doesn't show up he is automatically removed and it is expected that thousands of voters will not respond.

Until last Tuesday there had been no registration since the "moving days" of last May and September. This is given as the main reason for the large number of suspect notices. In addition, in some sections there were rumors of "padding."

Ad Men to Give Dance for "Off the Street Club"

A charity dance for the benefit of the Off the Street club, the pet charity of Chicago's advertising men, will be held April 21 in the First Regiment armory, according to plans formulated yesterday. The Off the Street club was conceived twenty-three years ago, when a number of advertising men organized a little club for poor children on the west side. Now the organization has more than 1,000 boys and girls who are being developed mentally, morally, and physically.

POLITICAL NOTES

Deneen Republicans will hold a reception for candidates at the Morrison hotel tomorrow afternoon at 5:30 o'clock. Ex-Gov. Deneen is billed to speak. At a meeting in the North Shore hotel, Evanston, in the evening, Mr. Deneen and Wallace G. Clark, candidate for county treasurer, will be the speakers.

Attorney General Brundage will deliver the only speech he will make during the primary campaign at a mass-meeting under auspices of the Dovre club on next Friday evening. Borger O. Borgerson, candidate for county commissioner, is a member of the club and the meeting is in behalf of him and those on his ticket.

Charles Ringer, Brundage candidate for county treasurer, in a statement last night, denied that Ex-Gov. Deneen was responsible for placing him on the list of candidates for assessor in 1916. "On the contrary," Mr. Ringer said, "I was one of the three placed on the ticket to represent the old Roosevelt forces, with which Mr. Deneen never had any connection. I owe him nothing, either personally or politically."

JUDGE JOHNSTON POINTS OUT PERIL OF BUREAUCRACY

Fears Deluge of U. S. Laws and Spies.

Charging that individual, city, and state rights are being usurped by congressional legislation until they are no longer secure, Judge Frank Johnston Jr., speaking yesterday before the German Club of Chicago at a meeting in the Morrison hotel, urged the development of a strong, self-reliant people to defend those rights.

JUDGE FRANK JOHNSTON, JR.

"If the present course is continued," he said, "it is only a question of time until congress will wipe out state boundaries and will control directly all powers of the states.

"The people of the states will be governed by bureaucrats at Washington and not by station officials elected by the people. These bureaucrats will not be responsible to the people of the states, but will be wholly independent of state control.

"Overzealous people have found that it is easier to pass one law for all the states through congress than to enact that law in each of the different states and there is a headlong rush to pass every conceivable kind of a bill through congress.

"The country is to be deluged with all manner of congressional legislation. There will be federal supervision and federal inspection of everything and this evil of overregulation by law is threatening the safety of our government."

Judge Johnston called the persons who are pushing the bills through congress "self-appointed guardians," who, he said, are willing to wreck the republic to accomplish their purpose.

"They care nothing for individual rights or freedom," he declared, "and if they are given full sway every way we turn we will run into a federal agent or a federal inspector."

One "Siamese Twin" Ill; Other Is Improving

Although Rosa Blazek, one of the "Siamese twins," is seriously ill with catarrhal inflammation of the gall bladder, and her sister, Josefa, is improving from the same illness, physicians who examined them yesterday at the West End hospital declared that to attempt to separate their bodies would prove fatal. The twin will likely be confined to the hospital for two weeks.

WOMAN HELD UP IN HOME; LOSES $680 IN JEWELRY

Mrs. Mabel Steiner, 4709 North Campbell avenue, wife of Louis Steiner, owner of the Park Furniture company, 4742 North Lincoln avenue, was held up in the hallway of her home, knocked senseless with a revolver, and robbed of jewelry valued at $680 and her sealskin coat. The bandits escaped.

Mrs. Steiner was just leaving home to go to a store when the robbers—there were two—accosted her. Her home is just across the street from the building in which Carl Wanderer murdered his wife and the "ragged stranger."

Police announced the capture of a gang of six men who have confessed one murder, are suspected of another, and who committed more than a dozen holdups and burglaries. They are James Corrigan, 1418 West Congress street; Leo Balcerowski, 3033 South Loomis street; Frank Lyduch, 2842 Quinn street; John Krygowski, 2856 Hillock avenue, and Felix Folta and Thomas Fabiano, 16 South Aberdeen street.

Five bandits last night robbed the grocery store of Mrs. Elizabeth Malizeba, 4248 South Artesian avenue, of $25. Safeblowers broke into four places in the loop yesterday. The loot totaled more than $1,000.

William Webb, colored, 3807 Vincennes avenue, an escaped convict, was captured yesterday after a revolver battle in a saloon at 31st street and Cottage Grove avenue. He was held for authorities at Pontiac.

"Own Your Own Home" Exhibit at Coliseum Opens

The Own Your Own Home exposition was opened yesterday in the Coliseum. The art of making a home a spot like the one which inspired "Home, Sweet Home," is taken up in minute detail from miniature views of completed buildings and grounds, to plumbing, wall paper, and lectures on foods.

Exhibits of a variety of building types are displayed by various companies. Tomorrow is mayors' day, and mayors from a hundred adjacent towns are expected at the exposition.

DETROIT'S CRIME LIST CUT 58% BY SPEEDY JUSTICE

on crooked bondsmen and "fixers." The judges refused consistently to accept bondsmen known to be guilty of unscrupulous practices and refused to accept a single bondsman on more than one bond. Persons offering themselves as sureties on bonds were made to present deeds to property named.

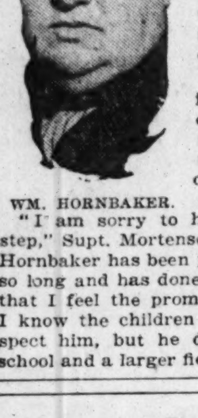
Best Citizens on Juries.

Under the new jury law which went into effect recently, the term a juror may serve in the recorder's court has been cut down from two months to two weeks, followed by an exemption of one year instead of the old three year exemption. This has made it possible to secure the service of many of Detroit's most prominent men.

The average of robbery with gun cases of 744 for five previous years was reduced in 1921 to 404. Four hundred and twenty-four business houses were broken into last year, as compared to 1,216 in the five year average. Only 380 dwellings were "quacked," as compared to 1,473, and 870 holdups were reduced to 357. The grand total of the four major crimes was actually reduced from 3.735 in 1920 to 1,565, a decrease of 58 per cent.

"When criminals know that they are going to get swift and sure justice they are inclined to go straight or operate in distant fields," remarked Deputy Commissioner George A. Walters of the police department. "Long term sentences given to all gun cases has had an astonishing effect on crime reduction in Detroit."

CHILDREN LOSE THEIR PRINCIPAL DESPITE BIG DEMONSTRATION



WM. HORNBAKER.

Despite a demonstration by pupils and students of the John Smyth school, Blue Island avenue and 13th street, protesting against the removal of Principal William Hornbaker, Supt. Mortenson announced that a transfer to the McCormick school would be effected.

Mrs. Marie Livingston, principal of the John Crerar school, was named to take charge of the John Smyth school.

"I am sorry to have to take the step," Supt. Mortenson said, "but Mr. Hornbaker has been principal there for so long and has done his work so well that I feel the promotion is due him. I know the children love him and respect him, but he deserves a newer school and a larger field."

AS SOON AS YOU register as our guest at the McAlpin, we begin to register as your host.

THE HOTEL McALPIN is large not merely to serve a large number of guests, but to give a large service to the guests we do serve.

THREE WORDS WERE PUT into the corner stone of our plans, "comfort," "convenience" and "economy." It is not enough to give you "food and lodging"—all hotels do that—so we have made our twenty-four stories tell of a variety of service to suit your every need.

YOU CAN HAVE YOUR morning shower, or tub, in your own bathroom, or take a plunge in the pool on the twenty-fourth floor.

YOU MAY EAT WELL on the "club" plan or dine a la carte, in the breakfast room, the grill, the roof—or in your own room.

THE THINGS YOU FORGOT to put in your luggage can be purchased in the shops of the hotel; and from interpreter to Russian baths; from Notary Public to children's playground, broker's office to drug store, McAlpin service is many-sided.

IN FAIR WEATHER, it is a block to the top of the Fifth Avenue bus; in bad weather a step right from the hotel to the underground railways—the subways and the "Tube."

MIDWAY BETWEEN THE TWO great railroad terminals—the Grand Central and the Pennsylvania—you are still adjacent to the great commercial and theatrical districts. With tickets bought at our stands, you may go to the theatre in five minutes and return for a midnight supper to enjoy the music and the dance or, with a book from our library and the light just above your head, indulge in the old-fashioned luxury of reading in bed.

WITH IT ALL, we haven't forgotten economy, and recently, in the spirit of the times, we further reduced our rates here, as well as at the Martinique, the McAlpin Annex across the street.

CLUBWOMEN TO ASK LAWS TO PROTECT GIRLS

Clubwomen of Chicago yesterday were asked to unite in an effort to obtain special protective legislation for working girls in Illinois by Miss Agnes Foreman, chairman of the Women's auxiliary of the Salvation Army. Miss Foreman stated that in Salvation Army rescue homes and maternity hospitals the number of girls who seek to hide their shame from the world has grown to startling proportions and that in the last two years illegitimate births have increased alarmingly.

"There is need for immediate action by the women voters of the state," said Miss Foreman, "if this condition is to be checked. We must see that girls who work for a living have special protection by law."

Miss Harriet Vittum will be one of the principal speakers at a massmeeting next Thursday at which it is hoped every woman's club and organization will be represented. The meeting will take place in the Fine Arts building at 2 p. m.

Police Permits for Voters Only, Aldermen Ask

Amendments to require that special police permits be issued only to men who have been residents of Chicago for at least one year and who are registered voters were ordered drawn up by the special council committee on the building trades controversy.

Prices no higher than they were ten years ago

It is a fact that when you dine at the North American Restaurant you do get food which can't be beaten anywhere at any price and yet you will not pay any more than you did for good food ten or even fifteen and twenty years ago.

That is possible because of our Common Sense plan by which you serve yourself and are charged only for the actual food you eat—and because our tremendous volume (the greatest ever achieved by any high-class Chicago dining place) further reduces our operating costs.

Our prices tell their own story (a few are listed below). But unless you dine here you can't possibly know how good our food is nor what a comfortable dining place this is.

Individual Apple, Prune or Raisin Pie—A big, delicious individual pie, baked in our own kitchen	10c
Bacon and Eggs—(for breakfast.) 2 fresh eggs fried in butter and 4 strips of bacon	30c

LYON & HEALY Complimentary Concerts Main floor from 11 till 5.

When You Place OUR PIANO PATTERNS On Your Floor

YOU see at once just how much space is taken up by a Lyon & Healy piano. These exclusive patterns are so practical that they enable you to visualize how an upright piano, player piano, or dainty Lyon & Healy Apartment Grand would fit in with the other furnishings in your home. They are the actual sizes of upright and grand pianos with facsimile keyboards in natural colors. It is but the work of a minute to lay them where you wish to place your piano.

You will be surprised to see how little space is required by the Apartment Grand and yet this piano possesses sufficient string length to make the tone rich and satisfying. In fact it has acquired a foremost position through its depth of tone and architectural beauty.

Fundamental improvements give the Apartment Grand its leadership. Among these are the Candelectra, the Silento and the Junior Pedal—all exclusive Lyon & Healy features.

Lyon & Healy Apartment Grand Pianos from $900

The Candelectra

THE Candelectra is a dainty arrangement consisting of twin electric lamps which light the desk and keyboard with a soft, restful glow. These candles are wired through the body of the piano and need not be detached when closing piano lid.

The Silento

THE Silento is in effect a practice clavier. It permits one to practice in comfort. Through its use one may play vigorously and yet the tone will be scarcely audible. It is controlled by means of a simple lever. Such innovations as these make Lyon & Healy pianos worth your trial. Let us send you the floor patterns. Mail the coupon today.

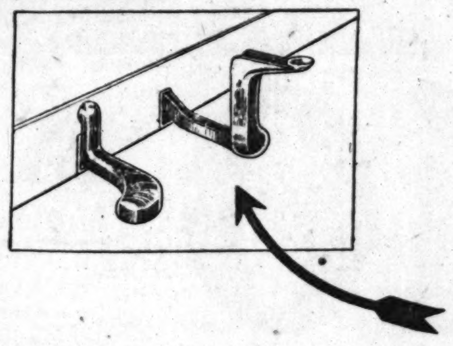
About Our Terms

Monthly Payments

Our purchase plan is most unusual. Come in and choose your instrument. The only down payment is a small sum. Monthly payments may be arranged to suit your convenience. Musical instruments of all kinds taken in exchange. This liberal plan brings a piano within reach of all. An early visit will afford a wider selection.

The Junior Unfolding Pedal

EVERY musical phrase calls for its own individual pedal effect and with the Junior Pedals all this becomes second nature to the child. In appearance the same as the usual pedals, the Junior Pedals present two levels. They unfold upwards and outwards so that a child may reach the pedals and learn the art of pedaling with the first lessons. Such a fundamental improvement is a great advance in piano construction. Send for descriptive folder illustrated by photographs of the pedals in actual use.



What Great Authorities Say

HAROLD BAUER: I have examined the Junior Unfolding Pedal and consider it a very ingenious and useful invention. I would be glad to see such a Pedal adopted by all piano makers and placed in every instrument.

SERGEI RACHMANINOFF: Children should learn to use the pedals as early as possible.

FANNIE BLOOMFIELD-ZEISLER: Every piano, without exception, should be equipped with it.

PERCY GRAINGER: Every child should begin to use the pedals as soon as it begins to play, and your invention now makes this simple and easy.

HITCHCOCK LEADS ANOTHER ATTACK ON 4 PLY PACT

Interpretative Addendum Target of Drive.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., March 25.—[Special.]—Opposition to the four power treaty, ratified by the senate yesterday, flared up again today in a new form.

An attack, led by Senator Hitchcock (Neb.), ranking Democratic member of the foreign relations committee, was centered upon the declaration of intention and meaning which is attached to the treaty, upon which no action was taken yesterday. He advanced the surprising claim that failure to ratify the declaration attached to the treaty nullified the ratification of yesterday and made it necessary to take new action upon the entire pact.

This claim was not regarded seriously by the Republican majority or by the Democratic treaty supporters, but to clarify the situation it may be necessary to introduce a separate resolution of ratification of the declaration, which Senator Lodge (Mass.) was preparing today, to be introduced Monday.

Signed by All Delegates.

It appears the declaration concerning the meaning and scope of the treaty was drawn up before the treaty was signed by the delegates to the conference, because, as Senator Lodge explained, there was no other way for them to sign. This declaration concerning the treaty reads:

"In signing the treaty, this day, between the United States of America, the British Empire, France, and Japan, it is declared to be the understanding and intent of the signatory powers:

"1. That the treaty shall apply to the mandated islands in the Pacific ocean; provided, however, that the making of the treaty shall not be deemed to be an assent on the part of America to the mandates and shall not preclude agreements between America and the mandatory powers in relation thereto.

"2. That the controversies to which the second paragraph of article 1 refers shall not be taken to embrace questions which, according to principles of international law, lie exclusively within the domestic jurisdiction of the respective powers."

Safeguards U. S. on Yap.

This interpretation was adopted to safeguard the position which the United States had taken relative to Yap in its controversy over the island with Japan, and to make it clear that domestic questions, such as the immigration problem of California or of Australia, shall not come within the purview of the treaty.

In answer to a question by Senator Hitchcock, Senator Lodge today insisted the declaration is not part of the treaty, and, therefore, the resolution of ratification had nothing to do with it.

Senator Lenroot [Wis.] interrupted Senator Hitchcock with the suggestion that if the declaration is part of the treaty, which had been ratified, then the declaration itself had been ratified.

Robinson Leads New Attack.

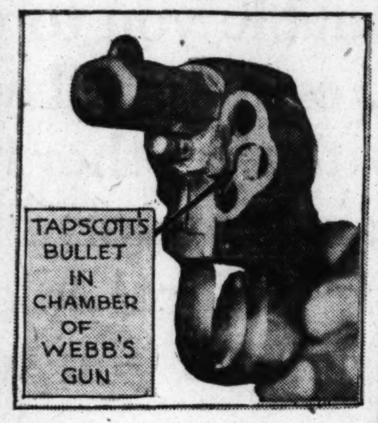
The supplemental treaty to the four power pact, which eliminates the mainland of Japan from its provisions, was placed before the senate today and was immediately attacked by Senator Robinson [Ark.], who proposed an amendment aiming to eliminate Krafuto, the southern portion of the island of Sakhalin, from the operations of the treaty.

A THRILL FROM REAL LIFE

SERGT. FRED TAPSCOTT.

SERGT. JAMES M'CARTHY.

WILLIAM WEBB.



Sergt. James McCarthy entered Dan Morrison's saloon at Cottage Grove avenue and 31st street yesterday. He saw William Webb, colored, an ex-convict, and ordered Webb to throw up his hands. Webb turned with a revolver in his hand and fired four shots at McCarthy. As Webb aimed point blank at McCarthy for a fifth shot Sergt. Fred Tapscott, who had heard the shooting, entered. He fired at Webb. The bullet entered a chamber in Webb's gun, lodging there and knocking the gun from the bandit's hand. The hammer on Webb's gun was found drawn back after he was captured.

SCOUT MEETING TO BRING NOTED MEN TO CHICAGO

The twelfth annual meeting of the Boy Scouts of America, to be held here next Wednesday and Thursday, March 29 and 30, at Hotel La Salle, will bring together the largest number of business men interested in the development of the youth of America that has yet convened in this country. There will not be less than 500 of the leaders of thought and effort of the nation in attendance. The meeting will be preceded by several important conferences.

JAMES WEST.
[Apeda Photo.]

The first of these will be held tomorrow at the Chicago Beach hotel, when the twelve regional directors of the movement will discuss activities for the year. James E. West of New York, chief scout executive, and Dr. George J. Fisher of New York, national field director, will be in charge. On Wednesday evening the annual dinner will be held at the La Salle.

At the dinner ministers representing Catholics, Protestants and Jews, represented respectively by the Rev. Fr. John Cavanaugh of Notre Dame university; the Rev. C. B. McAfee of the McCormick Theological seminary, and Rabbi Emil G. Hirsch, will speak. A feature of the dinner will be a demonstration of scout activities by picked troops of scouts.

Business Offices of Orpheum Coming Here

The business offices of the Orpheum circuit, a $50,000,000 vaudeville concern, are to be moved from New York to Chicago by April 1, according to Marcus Heiman, a local official of the concern. The move is made, it is said, because all the theaters of the circuit lie in Chicago or west and because business interests are centered in this territory.

Japan Pleased with U. S. Ratification of Treaty

TOKIO, March 25.—[United Press.]—Japanese officials expressed themselves today as highly gratified over the action of the United States senate in ratifying the four power Pacific treaty. They declared there was no objection on the part of Japan to the Brandegee reservation.

NAVY WORTHLESS WITHOUT TRADE SHIP AID, CLAIM

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., March 25.—[Special.]—The actual naval strength of the United States in case of war would be greatly inferior to that of Great Britain, notwithstanding that the American and British navies are placed on a practically equal basis by the naval treaty agreement, declared Senator Ransdell [La.] in a speech today.

Speaking on the naval disarmament treaty and the legislation designed to extend government aid to American shipping, Senator Ransdell, who is president of the National Merchant Marine association, pointed out that a navy, without adequate support from its national trade fleet, is practically powerless.

Tells of Needed Auxiliaries.

"There is only one way for naval equality to be realized," he said, "and that is for America to make material additions to its commercial fleet. Swift vessels of commerce, carrying both freight and passengers, having a speed in excess of 15 to 20 knots—preferably 20 knots and over—and from 10,000 to 15,000 tons are most effective as auxiliaries to the navy in time of war."

How Great Britain stands in relation to the United States on the basis of such ships is shown on the following table, adapted from figures presented by Senator Ransdell, giving the number and tonnage of vessels of 10,000 gross tons and over, and having speeds of twelve to twenty knots and over:

America—Number, 44; tonnage, 384,247.
Britain—146; tonnage, 1,870,147.

Britain Leads the Way.

"In other words," Mr. Ransdell said, "Great Britain has about three times as many ships capable of being used as high grade naval auxiliaries as the United States has. If our commercial marine is to remain at its present level, so far as these fast ships are concerned, then Great Britain, with her large fleet of potential naval auxiliaries, would, beyond question, continue as she is today, very much more powerful on the seas, even though our naval vessels—our fighting ships—are considered on terms of actual parity.

"Any limitation, through international agreement, in the future construction of naval vessels, will render the necessity of a merchant marine and its personnel of even greater importance than it has been in the past; and without an adequate merchant marine the safety of our country might easily be imperiled."

YANKEE MAY SIT ON REPARATIONS BOARD, FORECAST

BY GRAFTON WILCOX.

Washington, D. C., March 25.—[Special.]—The United States may yet be represented upon the interallied reparations commission despite President Harding's decision to refrain from asking congress formally for authority for such participation.

This view has been conveyed to congress in an informal manner, but owing to the peculiar political situation the President has determined that it would not be becoming of the executive to ask for such authorization.

See Precedent in Treaty.

To suggestions coming from congress that the initiative in the matter should be taken by the executive and not by congress, state department officials replied that the basis for the executive reluctance to take the iniative is the reservations "agreement" incorporated in the senate resolution of Oct. 18, 1921, by which the senate ratified the separate treaty between the United States and Germany.

This reservation, which was later included in the President's proclamation, provided "that the United States shall not be represented or participate in any body, agency or commission, nor shall any person represent the United States as a member of any body, agency or commission in which the United States is authorized to participate by this treaty unless and until an act of the congress of the United States shall provide for such representation or participation."

Up to the Congress.

Thus, the administration holds that under the specific language of the senate's ratification resolution the initiative is clearly left with congress and it is argued, suggestions from senators or congressmen that the President should go ahead and name a representative and transmit the name to the senate for ratification are clearly beside the point.

JUDGE SABATH GETS BOWER OF ROSES ON HIS 52D BIRTHDAY

Judge Joseph Sabath's Superior court chambers blossomed forth as a rival to a florist's place of business yesterday, when attachés of the court decorated it with fifty-two American Beauty roses. The judge has a year to go with every flower, and the occasion was his birthday.

Judge Sabath, whose specialty is in reconciling couples who had their minds made up for divorce, was wished "many happy returns of the day" by fellow judges, attorneys, and litigants.

LLOYD GEORGE ASKS FREE HAND IN RUSSIA DEAL

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, March 25.—In demanding a vote of confidence in the house of commons on April 3, Premier Lloyd George intends to give his motion a much wider scope than the mere indorsement of his leadership. He will demand what practically amounts to a free hand to recognize the Russian soviet government.

This is certain to provoke bitter opposition among the Conservatives and may even lead to a split and formation of a center party, on which Mr. Lloyd George, as it is known, has set his heart.

Allies Split on Russia.

There were indications at yesterday's meeting of Genoa experts of a sharp division of opinion between Great Britain and France in this regard. The Belgians, who are under French influence, have been pressing for the presentation at the Genoa conference of a resolution calling for something resembling a capitulation of the Russians and for the protection of foreigners and foreign property in Russia.

Italy, which is under the leadership of the British, is opposed strongly to any effort to interfere with the internal government of any country. The Italians also insist that the business expert conference is only to make practical suggestions for the revival of Russian trade and the development of Russian resources.

A new subcommittee to deal with Russia's debts was appointed.

Refuses Tax Demand.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

BERLIN, March 25.—The German answer to the reparations commission's note was prepared today, but may be revised between now and Tuesday when the secretary of state will take it to Paris.

From diplomatic sources THE TRIBUNE has been informed that the note flatly denies the right of the entente commission to tell Germany what laws it may pass. It insists it is impossible for Germany to raise an additional sum of 60,000,000,000 paper marks (roughly $180,000,000) by taxation. The note gives the allies a detailed outline of what Germany is capable of doing to fulfill the reparations terms.

While the various movements directed against the cabinet have been temporarily checked, it is believed that its fall will follow the slightest move from a coalition of its enemies.

An important political development was the establishing of an accord between the Independent Socialist party and the Communist Workingmen's union, which foresook the Communist party rather than adhere to Moscow's dictates.

France Would Send Wines.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS, March 25.—The United States may be paid the cost of the army of occupation on the Rhine in German dyes and French wines and champagne, according to a project which may be discussed at a conference on reparations.

The plan provides that Germany shall supply France with additional building materials for the reconstruction of the devastated areas, and that France in payment thereof will export to America wines for medicinal purposes. Large quantities of booze are now being shipped to the United States under government licenses.

The United States, it is understood, does not want quantities of cheap German manufactures dumped into the American markets, and the new plan obviates this through the substitution of French products.

JUGO-SLAVS BEAT BACK ALBANIAN BORDER ATTACK

PARIS, March 25.—Groups of insurgent Albanians succeeded in crossing the River Drin into Jugo-Slavian territory near Kranovnik, says a Belgrade dispatch to the Havas agency today. Jugo-Slavian gendarmes drove the Albanians back across the frontier. The encounter resulted in several killed and wounded on each side.

Withdraw Allied Troops.

PARIS, March 25.—[By the Associated Press.]—The allied council of ambassadors today decided that the international troops occupying Scutari, Albania, should be withdrawn. These forces are entirely Italian, although they are occupying the town in the name of the allies. The decision to withdraw the troops is understood to be due to civil strife existing in Albania.

YOUTH MARRIED TO STEPMOTHER SEEKS HIS CASH

New York, March 25.—[Special.]—The marital troubles of a youth who, at 22, married his stepmother, 34, six months after his father's death, were revealed in the Supreme court today. John M. Vandergrift, grandson of Jacob J. Vandergrift, who amassed a fortune in the oil business in Pittsburgh and was one of the founders of the Standard Oil company in the Pittsburgh district, got a temporary injunction restraining his wife, Mrs. Sybil M. Vandergrift, from disposing of property worth $125,000 pending the trial of a suit for possession of the property.

Vandergrift alleged that his wife left him last November, when they agreed to live apart after a series of quarrels, and is now making her home with Miss Bonnie Maginn, former dancer. He said the injunction was necessary because he had been informed that his wife planned to leave soon for a trip abroad, to be gone several years.

Two Rioters to Hang for Killing Yankee in India

U. S. RAILROADS FACING A CRISIS; UNITY IS NEEDED

Cummins Talks of Pending Action.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., March 25.—[Special.]—With Senator Cummins of Iowa asserting that the consolidation of the railroads into a few great systems is all that can avert eventual government ownership and operation of the transportation lines, unusual importance attaches to the proceedings pertaining to this question which will begin before the interstate commerce commission next month.

The commission will hear the views of railroad officials and others on the various consolidation schemes which have been proposed to carry out the following provision of the transportation act of 1920:

"A commission shall, as soon as practicable, prepare and adopt a plan for the consolidation of the railway properties of the continental United States into a limited number of systems.

Competition Must Remain.

"In the division of such railways into such systems under such plan, competition shall be preserved as fully as possible and wherever practicable the existing routes and channels of trade and commerce shall be maintained.

"Subject to the foregoing requirements, the several systems shall be so arranged that the cost of transportation as between competitive systems and as related to the values of the properties through which the service is rendered shall be the same, so far as practicable, so that the systems can employ uniform rates in the movement of competitive traffic and under efficient management earn substantially the same rate of return upon the value of their respective railway properties."

Senator Cummins, one of the authors of the transportation act and an acknowledged authority on railroad questions, said there are some railroad companies that never can be maintained until the process of consolidation is consummated.

"I predict," said the senator, "that if we do not succeed in carrying out the principle of consolidation, which has already gone forward in a satisfactory way, it will presently begin to appear to all the people of the country that there is just one other solution—that is, government ownership and operation.

Opposes Government Ownership.

"If we do not consolidate the lines government ownership and operation is the only recourse open to the American people. And I want it to be understood that I am unalterably opposed to government ownership and operation of our railroads.

"The American railroad problem will never be finally solved unless all the railroads are consolidated into comparatively few systems, say fifteen or twenty, and competitive in their character. I might add that there is no competition in the railroad world, and ought to be none except the competition of good service, the competition which renders one railway property more attractive to a shipper than another or one railway passenger train more attractive to a traveler than another.

"When that is done we can fix rates so that the lowest schedules that will sustain these properties as a whole may be established.

Farmers Fight One Bill.

"There are now pending before congress, and especially in the senate, a great many bills which have for their purpose the modification of the transportation act of 1920 in vital respects. The farm organizations—and the farmers have my deepest sympathy because I know the hardships through which they are passing—demand the repeal of what is known as section 15-A.

"This section provides that the interstate commerce commission shall consider transportation from a national standpoint; that we shall no longer attempt to regulate our common carriers by reference to the particular condition of any specific carrier. It tells the interstate commerce commission to look at all the railways of the United States, and to see that they are maintained to serve the people; to do what it can to maintain not one of them, but all of them.

"This section says to the interstate commerce commission: 'Take all the railways, little and big, prosperous and otherwise, and ascertain as nearly as you can the value of all of this property.'

Instructions to Commission.

"We told the commission: 'Dismiss the bonds and stocks from your consideration. Find out what all this property is worth under the rules which have been established by the Supreme court of the United States. Do it as nearly as you can for the present. Ultimately, do it conclusively, and when you have done so, fix your rates so that they will make a fair return upon this property as a whole, or, in such districts or territories as you may see fit to divide the United States.'

"Some of the best people of the country have reached a state of mind where this section of the transportation act is a sort of bogey. They impute to it all the ills which can flow from the most vicious legislation. They want that section repealed and want the interstate commerce commission committed to the administration of a law that will deal not with the transportation system of the United States as a whole but with particular systems or particular companies engaged in transportation.

"We are holding hearings on those bills now. We have taken many hundreds of pages of testimony upon this contention. But if I can prevent it, section 15-A will not be repealed."

"Burglar's Loot"

Mrs. Helen Szarka Okokis, 4606 South Paulina street, was stolen by a "skylight burglar," Tony Kumza, according to a bill for divorce filed by her husband. It is alleged in the bill that immediately following the husband's departure Tony would climb to the roof of the Okokis home and enter through the skylight to pay clandestine visits to Mrs. Okokis.

WIFE FAINTS AS GIRL, 12, ACCUSES MAN IN COURT

For an alleged serious offense against a 12 year old girl, Harry Campbell, 27 years old, 2342 West 24th street, was ordered held in bonds of $15,000 by Judge John A. Bugee in the Maxwell street court yesterday until March 31, when his attorney promised witnesses would be produced to show the falsity of the charge.

Mrs. Marie Campbell, wife of the defendant, with her 2 year old baby daughter in her arms, stood by her husband during the hearing. She fainted when Mrs. Harriet Rhody, mother of Dorothy Rhody, the complaining witness, told the child's story.

Mrs. Rhody charged the child reported to her Friday she had been lured frequently by Campbell to his flat on the second floor of the house where both families live.

ARMED GIRL BANDIT GETS $30.

Lynn, Mass., March 25.—A girl bandit, masked and armed, stepped through a window into the bedroom where Mrs. Arthur Metrena lay sick early today, bound the woman with the bedclothes, and ransacked the bureau drawers. She escaped with $30.

ARMY OFFICERS' LIVES WILL BE MUCH PROLONGED

Gen. Ireland Tells of Physical Examination.

Washington, D. C., March 25.—[By the Associated Press.]—Army doctors are hopeful that a "very appreciable prolongation of life" among regular army officers will result from steps now being taken as a result of the annual physical examination of the commissioned personnel.

Under special instructions issued to army doctors by Surgeon General Ireland when the January physcial examinations began efforts are being made to locate "definitely any focal infections (abscessed teeth, diseased tonsils, infected sinuses, etc.) or other conditions which may be responsible for chronic degenerative changes."

"The removal of such underlying causes," Gen. Ireland said in a memorandum to Maj. Gen. Harbord, deputy chief of staff, "may result in return to a normal condition and very appreciable prolongation of life."

Influence of the War.

The memorandum pointed out that the annual examinations were undertaken fourteen years ago primarily with a view to eliminating those officers "found incapacitated," but that of recent years the value of the work toward "health preservation" had been stressed. Determination of "the influence of the world war on physique," and also the effect of tropical service in the army on health, would be a part of this study.

"Among the results to be anticipated," Gen. Ireland said, "from the practical use of the information so obtained would be: An actual prolongation of life expectancy for officers of the army; correction of many physical defects with resulting increase in efficiency, and demonstration of the fact that the average age at death among officers of the army exceeds that in civil life, notwithstanding wars, accidents, service in the tropics. If the later point be demonstrated it should result in placing army officers in a preferred class for life insurance with lower premium rates."

Extension to Civilian Camps.

Gen. Ireland urged thorough extension of the physical survey work to the reserve officers' corps and to the civilian military training camps personnel each year was an important function of the medical corps. It would lead, he said, to "promulgation throughout the nation of the principles concerned in disease prevention and health preservation." As to the means of carrying the work on through the civilians turning out for military training, he added:

"In the case of those having correctible abnormalities, the parents would be advised as to the nature of the defects and the steps necessary for their correction.

GRAIN GROWERS HALT DRIVE FOR NEW MEMBERS

Solicitors for membership in the U. S. Grain Growers, Inc., in all Illinois received directions yesterday to cease activities. This was the move made by the anti-administration faction after its defeat in the election of the board of directors of the farmer owned grain marketing organization at the first annual convention, which closed Friday.

"As we have more grain under contract in Illinois than it seems possible to handle by July 1 we are discontinuing organization work in Illinois until sales agencies are opened at our principal markets." This was the statement sent out by Robert N. Clark, director of the organization work in this state.

Before leaving Chicago minority delegates from Illinois, North Dakota, Kansas, Oklahoma, Texas, Minnesota, and Michigan, representing 46 per cent of the voting strength at the convention, made provisions for a committee to take any necessary action that may arise in the controversy with the new board.

"TEX" RICKARD ON STAND TOMORROW IN OWN DEFENSE

New York, March 25.—[Special.]—Tex Rickard, whose trial on serious charges involving a 15 year old girl will be resumed in the Criminal branch of the Supreme court on Monday, was taken from the Tombs today by Deputy Sheriff Brown to the sheriff's room in the Criminal Courts building for a conference with his counsel.

This was permitted under an order signed by Justice Wasservogel stipulating that Rickard be given all the freedom necessary to a lengthy conference. The usual procedure is for a person under trial to talk with his attorney in the prison.

It is expected that Rickard will take the stand in his own defense late Monday and the conference today had to do with plans for his appearance, it was believed.

In the sheriff's room Rickard met Max D. Steuer and Hyman Bushel, his attorneys.

It was announced that Rickard had thirty-five character witnesses.

years ago, in Oklahoma City, parated from her boy, Sidney, who is two years older than Gordon. The lad drifted up to the wheat belt and his mother to New York.

Seated in her dingy tenement, up three flights of stairs, she told a newspaper man that when she drives out of New York Tuesday, with just a few gallons of gasoline in the tank of her car, she first is going to strike out for Kansas City, for it was from Kansas City that Mrs. Whittaker last heard from her son.

Magnet of Her Heart.

Later she received word from an employment agency in Sapulpa, Okla., that a boy resembling her son had signed from there for work in the Kansas and Missouri wheat fields. So, after Kansas City, Sapulpa.

"I can find him," she said. "I know I can because I know it in my mother's mind. You see this picture? It is the last one I ever had of him. I am taking it with me. Somehow when I see it, I feel more certain he is going to be waiting for me."

The heart of Henry street goes with her. More than that, a small purse will be given her, for although the neighbors can afford only a few pennies, they are gathering those that can be spared.

JAMES CONICK, 'HONEST COPPER,' TO QUIT FORCE

Called by Chief "Noblest Work of God."

BY JOHN KELLY.

SERGT. JAMES. CONICK.

Patrol Sergeant James Conick, a veteran of the police department, will retire April 1. He joined the force Dec. 15, 1884, with the "famous 300," which was the largest number of men ever appointed to the department up to that time.

Conick put in twenty years between the detective bureau and the "front office," a term used by policemen when the office of the chief is meant. With his partner, John Culhane, he was in the "front office" under Chiefs Kipley, O'Neill, Collins, and Shippey.

Chief's Confidential Men.

"Front office" detectives are the confidential men of the chief. In former years their duties consisted chiefly of raiding gambling houses, clairvoyants, and promoters of get rich quick schemes.

It used to be said that Conick would pull down the Board of Trade if the chief ordered him.

Soon after Frances O'Neill took charge of the police department, a hand book maker, who could not "handle" Conick, called upon the new chief.

"Are you going to keep that fellow Conick on gambling?" asked the hand book man. "Yes," the chief replied. "What's the matter with him?"

"Why, he's a rummy," said the gambler. "He don't know he's alive."

"He may be a rummy, as you call it," was O'Neill's rejoinder, "but he's honest. And an honest policeman is the noblest work of God."

Arrests Bank Robber.

One of Conick's most notable exploits was the arrest of Jimmy Dunlap, a notorious safe robber. Dunlap was at the head of a gang that operated out of Chicago in the late '90s. Country banks were their particular prey. One night they robbed the Pate bank at Hoopeston, Ill. Conick and Culhane saw Dunlap on his return to this city carrying a satchel which contained his part of the loot. They arrested him, as he was entering the Follansbee flats, where he was living as a "retired capitalist."

The original packages of small coins stolen from the bank were found in the satchel with the initials of the cashier on the wrappers. This led to the identity of the bank that was robbed.

Pending Dunlap's trial, the packages of money were in the custody of the chief of detectives. At the trial it was discovered that the cashier's initials had been erased.

Chief Is Ousted.

Dunlap was convicted just the same and the erasures caused a scandal in the detective bureau. The chief and one lieutenant were dismissed from the force.

A few years ago Conick and ninety others were transferred from the bureau and put in uniform as patrol sergeants. He resigned, but was off only ten days, when he returned to duty at the urgent request of Percy Coffin, president of the civil service commission. This time, he says, the resignation sticks.

SIXTY REINDEER REACH U. S. FOR UPPER MICHIGAN

New York, March 25.—Sixty reindeer today began the last lap of their journey from far off Norway to a new home in the upper Michigan peninsula, in care of David R. Jones, chief deputy of the Michigan game, fish, and forest fire department. They were released from quarantine, where they had been held for treatment to rid them of an insect pest.

Should the animals thrive in the country to which they are being taken for breeding purposes, a great step would be taken toward solving the nation's problem of a dwindling meat supply, according to Mr. Jones.

(A Business Editorial)

OWN YOUR HOME!

Owning one's home is life extension insurance. It strengthens in the man what is always in the heart of a woman—desire for a real home.

Owning one's home compels thrift in a pleasurable way. There is no necessity of always discussing that subject.

It is a good thing to see materials of which a home is made. It is a better thing to see the home itself. Both are important and may be seen at the Coliseum. A Real Home may also be seen at this store.

The "OWN YOUR OWN HOME" idea, if taken advantage of, makes for a larger measure of contentment, a better productive capacity. Improvement is immediate. It brings a higher quality of law-respecting citizenship into a community.

Doing the wise thing as it comes along makes for other than money dividends in life—satisfaction—sentiment that is rich in treasure. Only a fortunate few seem to appreciate this.

If one may be shown a way to accomplish this, one at least has a strong impulse towards success.

It would be helpful if every man, woman, youth, and girl would visit the exhibition at the Coliseum this week.

72 ASSESSORS LAYING BASIS FOR '23 TAXES

Told to Expect a Rough Reception.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

With less than $25,000,000 of Chicago's $127,000,000 tax bill collected, seventy-two field assessors will start out tomorrow morning to lay the foundation for next year's taxes. They, too, may be $127,000,000—or more.

"Before you receive detailed instructions, I want you to get three or four general ideas of importance in your minds," said Charles Ringer, member of the board of assessors, to the seventy-two subordinates.

"First, taxes are too high, and the people know it. They appreciate that taxes are 42 per cent higher this year than last.

"Sore Clear Through."

"Second, the public resents the tax boost. They have been hit hard in a tender spot—their pocketbooks. They are sore clear through, and they have reason to be.

"Third, never forget you are meeting the people who pay the bills, and that you are representing the board of assessors. The people are entitled to every consideration. They pay you as well as others in public service.

"Fourth, remember that you are not being paid to get sassy or smart. Don't get arrogant, curt or coarse, either. Be a gentleman. Treat every one with consideration and courtesy. Treat every person right. Be fair and just and polite.

Expect Rough Reception.

"Many persons do not know that the board of assessors have not increased their taxes, and undoubtedly they will treat you rough. That is no excuse whatsoever for you to talk back. Courteously explain, in such a case, that the valuations were made in 1919, have not been increased since, and that the cause of the increase in taxes is the increase in rates with which the assessors have had nothing to do.

"Do not harrass poor people about personal property, when you are dead certain they have nothing worth taxing. Use your head. Be reasonable and considerate—and remember you are dealing with the people who pay the bills."

Then followed the detailed instructions regarding the way to do the work. These field assessors are concerned with schedules of personal property for taxing purposes.

205,599 Persons Listed.

There is not one family out of every four in Chicago who pay personal property taxes. Less than one family out of every three is assessed.

On the books last year there were 200,749 persons listed with taxable personal property. This year the total is 205,599.

County Treasurer P. J. Carr, who is exofficio county tax collector, is receiving 400 letters a day asking for tax bills.

"The newspapers have gotten the public wild about the increase in taxes," explained Assistant Treasurer Lindheimer. "Every one wants his bill. We are flooded with written requests.

Blames State Commission.

"We cannot give them their bills, because the state tax commission delayed its work. The result is that we haven't the tax warrants and cannot make out the bills until we get them.

"It is only fair and right that the property owners should have their bills and have a reasonable time before the taxes must be paid. Mr. Carr will never sanction a penalty on any one who has been unable to get his tax bill so that he can pay his taxes. The owner should be given an opportunity to pay before he is penalized for not paying.

"I wish that THE TRIBUNE would convey that information to the public on behalf of Mr. Carr."

CARR CHARGED WITH COSTING CITY $500,000

Controller Threatens Him with Impeachment.

Declaring that County Treasurer Carr's alleged refusal to turn over to the city its share of tax money as rapidly as it is collected is costing Chicago taxpayers $500,000 a year in the form of interest on money borrowed to meet the city's pay rolls, Controller Harding yesterday threatened impeachment proceedings against Mr. Carr.

In an open letter to the county treasurer, Mr. Harding wrote:

"You are delinquent to the extent of $15,000,000 to the city of Chicago. This amount, as you know, has been collected by you and you are without legal right in withholding it. You are directly responsible for the loss to the taxpayers of $250,000, the same being discount on various obligations.

Talks of Impeachment.

"We herewith make imperative demands for the entire amount due the city. If you do not comply we will resort to such legal remedy as the law provides and will ask you to show cause why you should not be impeached for repeated malfeasance in office."

Mr. Carr made a denial of Mr. Harding's charges.

"I am having an abstract made of my books to see whether the city has any money coming to it," he said. "That will be ready Monday, and if any money is due the city it will be paid at once.

"The statement that I am delinquent to the extent of $15,000,000 is foolishness. The state tax commission was slow this year in fixing the tax rate. That delayed the county clerk in making extensions and we have only begun recently to get the tax books. Very few bills have been sent out, as property owners know, and consequently little money from real estate taxes has been collected."

Ignores Impeachment Talk.

As to the threat of impeachment, Mr. Carr referred inquirers to his attorney, Alfred S. Austrian. Mr. Austrian would make no comment.

In discussing his letter, which is one of more than a dozen demands made on Treasurer Carr for funds, Mr. Harding said:

"This is not politics. I am not interested either for or against Mr. Carr's campaign for nomination and election. Mr. Carr's delinquency is an outrage against the taxpayers of Chicago. The city is forced, through his actions, to pay 6 per cent for money on which to function, while the county treasurer receives 2 or 3 per cent from the banks for the city's money.

Loans at 3—Borrows at 6.

The city loans money to the banks from its trust funds at 3 per cent, but is obliged to borrow from the same banks on anticipation tax warrants bearing 6 per cent interest.

ETTELSON PAVES WAY FOR OUSTING OF AGE ZYLSTRA

Expect Mayor to Ask His Resignation.

Mayor Thompson is expected to oust City Collector Age Zylstra, Lundin-Thompson committeeman from the Ninth ward, as a result of a letter from Corporation Counsel Ettelson yesterday.

Mr. Ettelson's letter, prepared by Assistant Corporation Counsel Leon Hornstein, says that Mr. Zylstra has failed to make restitution of $96,840, the amount of the shortage in his accounts as the result of alleged embezzlements by two city employés. The demand was made by City Controller Harding.

Conforms With City Code.

"The controller's demand on the collector and his notice to you are in conformity with the city code," the letter says. "Section 40 of the code contemplates summary removal of the city collector when such notice is given to you of demand having been made and of refusal or neglect to comply therewith."

The letter, however, advises the mayor that though the law requires Mr. Zylstra's removal with "the utmost promptness," it would probably be regarded as within the mayor's discretion to give the collector an opportunity to show cause why he should not be removed.

Must Show Cause.

In this connection Mr. Ettelson turned over to the mayor a form of notice to the collector which gives him five days to show cause why he should not be removed. If he fails to show such cause it is probable that his resignation will be demanded, and his successor named at the next council meeting to be held Wednesday.

HIGH TAX WILL MAKE GAY PARIS JAZZLESS TOWN

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS, March 25.—Luxury taxes threaten to make Paris a deserted village. Restaurant owners have decided to eliminate all music and dancing as a result of a 38 per cent tax on all places boasting jazz bands and dance floors. Many orchestras and jazz bands were given two weeks' notice today.

Americans, chiefly Negro jazz artists, who are affected by the change, are preparing to go to Berlin, Vienna, Budapest, Rome and elsewhere.

"Americans already are complaining of Paris prices," said M. Gustave, proprietor of Maxim's. "They will refuse to pay the new tax, and therefore we must abandon music and dancing. New Yorkers tell me that drinks cost as much here now as in the bootleg places in America."

ALDERMEN ORDER INQUIRY INTO FISH PRICE "COMBINE"

Investigation of an alleged "fish trust" operating on the northwest side of the city was ordered yesterday by the council committee on living costs.

Taking advantage of the Lenten season, it is said, an association of fish dealers has been formed, the members agreeing that fish be sold only at prices fixed by the executive committee of the association.

Russell J. Poole, secretary of the committee, was put in charge of the inquiry. He declared that he will submit facts at the next meeting of the committee on next Saturday, which will prove conclusively that a combination of fish merchants to fix prices exists.

Acting Chairman Kaindl appointed a subcommittee on rents, of which Ald. Robert J. Mulcahy is chairman, and announced that the committee will make an inspection tour of the city's big bakeries next Friday in connection with the investigation of the recent raise in bread prices.

LICENSE BUREAU SUIT IS CHARGED TO TAX DODGERS

Political Attack on Him, Cermak Says.

Declaring the attempt of Samuel D. Levy, cashier for Rumsey & Co., Board of Trade brokers, to obtain an injunction preventing the payment of salaries to employés in the city license bureau was a political attack on him and fostered the cause of tax dodgers, Ald. Anton Cermak yesterday appeared with First Assistant Corporation Counsel James Breen before Judge George Fred Rush to resist the issuance of the writ.

ANTON J. CERMAK.

"The suit was instituted by license dodgers, assisted by certain elements in the city hall," said Ald. Cermak. "In 1921 the bureau collected $825,865 more from license dodgers than in 1920, and $1,090,336 more in vehicle taxes.

Would Lose Unpaid Revenue.

"If the injunction is granted we will lose the revenue which the city would derive from licenses which are due on March 1, on which we are preparing to sue, and many will expire between the date of the injunction and the transfer."

Nearly thirty aldermanic committees will be made powerless if the injunction is granted, according to Ald. Cermak, who asserts that such committees as the local transportation, working on the local traction problem, the committee on bridges and harbors, which is planning a harbor on Lake Calumet, are all operating on similar appropriations as the license bureau, which is declared by Attorney Samuel Holmes to be illegal.

Attacks Sixty Day Appointees.

The petition for the injunction, filed Friday by Attorney Holmes, which will be heard by Judge Rush on March 30, denies the power of the council to delegate the employment of city employés or the fixing of their salaries or duties to any alderman, aldermanic committee, or the chairman of any committee.

ROOSEVELT WOMEN INDORSE BRIGHT AS HEAD OF SCHOOLS

Orville T. Bright, Republican candidate for the nomination as county superintendent of schools, was indorsed yesterday by the Woman's Roosevelt Republican club. The organization is to lend its support towards the nomination of Mr. Bright and in addition to the appointment of committees to carry on the work, Mrs. Fletcher Dobyns, head of the club, announced that every woman in Cook county will be asked to vote for Mr. Bright in an effort to make the county's schools 100 per cent efficient.

ORVILLE T. BRIGHT
[J. E. Water Photo.]

"Education should fit persons to live and not merely to make a living," Mr. Bright told the women of the club at a conference. "We need further unification in our school system. Instead of unsupervised schools, every school should be visited once a month at least."

SUMNER FINDS SOCIETY TIRES OF 'FAD' MORALS

High society in New York is doing real penitence, according to the Rt. Rev. Walter T. Sumner, bishop of Oregon, formerly of Chicago, who is here for several speaking services tomorrow. He is en route to Portland.

BISHOP SUMNER.
[Gibson-Sykes Fowler Photo.]

"I have just come from New York," he said. "I have talked with leaders across the continent and I am firmly convinced that the pendulum towards looseness and unconventionality has gone its length and is swinging back.

"A woman of the highest society in New York told me that there had been a remarkable change in her circles. They were getting tired of extremes in dress and dancing and in the smoking of cigarets by women. I have learned of an orchestra company controlling ninety orchestras which has ordered them to refrain from all jazz music.

"It is folly for liquor men to charge up the present wave of crime to prohibition. It would have been ten times worse if we hadn't had prohibition. When I was dean of the cathedral in Chicago the men found lying around drunk all day in my neighborhood were drunk on beer. They didn't drink whisky.

"Men drink for the effect the alcohol has on them, and they will continue to drink until the effect is produced. Oregon is satisfied with prohibition and we don't want beer or wine."

Bishop Sumner will be the host of the Episcopal general convention in Portland in September.

"We expect an attendance of 5,000," he said. "It will be the largest and most important general convention in the history of the church to date."

ASSAILANT PUT ON PROBATION.

Probation for one year was ordered yesterday for Edward Barth, 6249 Cottage Grove avenue, by Judge William L. Morgan in the Chicago avenue court on a charge of assaulting Wilson W. Crooks, manager of the Farley Candy company, 712 North Franklin street.

KEITH SPALDING BUILDS YACHT TO SAIL SOUTH SEAS

Keith Spalding of Chicago has commissioned a New York architect to prepare the designs and specifications and to superintend the construction of a new yacht in which Mr. Spalding plans to tour the south seas in the fall. The contract for building the yacht has been let, the work has been started, and the craft is to be delivered to the owner on Oct. 1 next.

In addition to full sail rig, the yacht will be fitted with a six cylinder heavy oil engine developing 180 horse power at normal revolutions. This will give a speed of 7.5 knots, or 8.62 statute miles, an hour. The oil fuel tanks are under the cabin floor, built in and forming an integral part of the hull, and have a capacity sufficient to give the yacht a cruising radius of 3,500 nautical miles, or 4,025 statute miles, and full speed under power alone.

ACTUARIES TO MEET JUNE 1.

The annual meeting of the American Institute of Actuaries will be held at the Hotel La Salle June 1 and 2, George Graham of St. Louis, president of the institute, said following a meeting of the board of governors yesterday at the Hotel La Salle.

Wouldn't You Like to Own It?

The Price Makes It Easy

High cost has prevented most buyers from enjoying full motoring comforts—possible only in closed cars.

The Essex Coach alone provides those advantages at little more than open car cost.

It is light, sturdy and durable. Has open car performance and economy.

Builders of the famous Super-Six designed and produce it. Here they have created a new type as they have done with so many Hudson closed models.

It has the well known Essex nimbleness and reliability. As a family or businesscar it meets all season requirements in all service. Easy to drive—easy to park—easy to care for, easy to buy.

"48,000 Miles at Low Cost"

"I have driven my Essex 48,000 miles without replacing over $50 worth of parts. I get about 17 miles to the gallon of gasoline, and about 150 miles to the quart of oil. It has been more than satisfactory in every way. The best car on the market."

GERMANY FACES BIG COAL STRIKE; ENGLAND WORKS

European Conditions Shed Light on U. S. Trouble.

BY GEORGE SELDES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.]

BERLIN, March 25.—Europe, like the United States, is having serious labor trouble in its coal fields. Serious disagreements have arisen between the German employers' association's union and the mine workers' union, who are negotiating a new wage scale. The employers' union council has announced that in its dealings with labor the same terms will be given all employés, whether unionized or not. This is aimed at the miners, who are demanding that in the new scale only union employés get the so-called social bonus, which is additional pay, depending on the number of children in the family.

The miners also are demanding general increases, owing to the great advancement in the cost of living since the value of the German mark collapsed and the price of food, a large share of which is imported from Chicago, went up.

Highest Paid Labor.

The miners before the war were paid from 25 to 28 gold marks weekly, which was equivalent to $6 or $7. Today they get 750 paper marks, which is equivalent to $3.75. Incidentally the miners are the highest paid labor in Germany. While the miners' wages on paper are thirty times what they were before the war, the money has only a fiftieth of its pre-war value, and food is now between forty and seventy times as much as it was then. Clothes have risen enormously. Eggs cost eighty times as much as they did before the war; beef, thirty-three times; pork, forty; milk, thirty-five; potatoes, 400, and butter, fifty.

The coal miners claim that their production is largely exported at the world's standard price, the owners, such as Hugo Stinnes, receiving dollars and pounds, whereas labor is paid in depreciated paper marks with which they must buy their foodstuffs at the world's market price. Since the revolution the coal miners frequently have threatened, but they have never engaged in a big strike because their wages generally were raised. Now they are getting double the pay of workers in many other trades. They expect increases so long as the owners are making such disproportionately enormous profits on account of selling their products abroad for real money. However, the labor press warns the owners that their newest action probably is the beginning of a showdown for a coal war.

THE BANK OF KINDNESS

Draw a Check on It for the Unfortunate.

BY THE REV. W. B. NORTON.

The Church of the Atonement, the Rev. F. S. Fleming, rector, Ardmore and Kenmore avenues, is waging a campaign to raise $40,000. Mrs. Homer W. Bang, 5755 Winthrop avenue, is chairman of the women in the campaign. The men are also organized and are devoting their evenings to obtaining subscriptions. W. A. Brownlee, who was active in the war saving stamp drive for the government, has adapted the idea to the raising of the fund for the church. A stamp book entitled a mortgage payment certificate provides for the payment each month of one-tenth of each subscription. The ten months cover from March to December, inclusive. The payment of the mortgage of $40,000 will free the church of debt.

MRS. HOMER W. BANG.

CONDITIONS IN ENGLAND

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, March 25.—British coal mining statistics are always in arrears and the last complete figures available are those for the three months ending March 3, 1921. At that time there were 1,213,204 persons employed in the industry, the average earnings for the quarter were £58 5s 2d (roughly $255) and the average tonnage raised per person employed was 44.42.

At the present time the available figures indicate that 1,065,000 persons are employed in the industry. The production per person has increased, roughly, about 20 per cent and the wages have gone down about 15 per cent. These figures are liable to correction when the reports from all the fields are collected, but they are roughly accurate.

Wages and Production Vary.

Wages and production vary rather widely in the different fields. The highest wages are paid in Scotland, where the average quarterly stipend is £65 8s 5d ($288), and the lowest in Northumberland, where the wages are £53 16s 4d ($236.50). The highest production is in Derby, Nottingham, and Leicester, where the average tonnage raised is 56.90, and the lowest in Monmouth and South Wales, where it is 32.23.

The miners are now working under a sliding wage scale agreement where the piece rates vary according to the price of coal, with a guaranteed minimum living wage varying in the different fields but averaging 7s or 8s ($1.54 to $1.76) daily with full employment.

PAY OF FRENCH MINERS

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS, March 25.—The average French miner's pay today is 24 paper francs 50 centimes (about $2.16), as compared with 7 gold francs daily ($1.40) before the war. Since 1914 the cost of living has increased more than four and a half times, but the miners are paid only three and a half times their pre-war wages in francs.

The miners argue that they should receive 32 francs daily—four and a half times the pre-war wage—so as to meet the increased cost of living. However, the leaders assert the miners do not intend to strike owing to the serious economic and financial conditions now prevailing in France.

Cost of Coal.

The cost of coal is about five times what it was before the war, averaging 200 paper francs ($18) a ton today, as compared with 40 gold francs ($8) in 1910. The operators and mine owners insist that the increased transportation charges and the higher cost of labor necessitates the advance.

A belief is held in informed circles that the British, French, and German governments intend to manipulate the coal situation so as to prevent a further invasion of the European market by American coal. It is expected that the impending strike in the United States will insure victory for this program.

VILLA STEPS UP AND TAKES FLING AT BOLSHEVISM

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

Mexico City, March 25.—A declaration of Pancho Villa at Torreon that he does not stand for bolshevism or extreme socialism has created an excellent impression here. It is believed to indicate a reaction on the part of other revolutionary leaders against bolshevism. Villa's influence is still strong in Chihuahua and Durango. Villa's assertion that the sale of the Terrazas property to Americans is beneficial to the country is also taken as an indication that there is a change in the attitude of the revolutionists towards foreigners, especially Americans.

DEATH LAID TO MOONSHINE.

"Moonshine" is believed to have caused the death of a man identified as John O'Reilly, who was discovered dead in a vacant house at 10-12 West Roosevelt road.

DR. LIPSHULCH IS FINED $1,000 FOR TORTURING MAID

$250 and $25 Penalties for His Sons.

Dr. George U. Lipshulch, 4201 Roosevelt road, was fined $1,000 by Judge Philip L. Sullivan of the Criminal court yesterday on a charge of torturing Mamie McCray, a colored maid, formerly in his employ. The physicians two sons, Jahel, 24 years old, and Caesar, 18, were fined $250 and $25, respectively, on the same charge.

DR. GEORGE U. LIPSHULCH.

According to a story told the court by the maid, she was mistreated by the physician and his sons upon her denial that she was responsible for a jewelry theft at the Lipshulch home.

Judge Sullivan overruled a motion for a new trial, but permitted Attorney Avon Silbert to enter an appeal bond. The court declared that the good reputation and standing of the Lipshulchs in their community alone prevented him from giving them a jail sentence.

Questioned by Assistant State's Attorney Stanley Klarkowski, the McCray girl declared the physician and his sons, after tying her in a chair, placed a rope about her neck and attempted to choke her.

"When I still refused to confess the theft they flourished a revolver before my face and then discharged it," she testified. "Then they put the smoking barrel of the revolver in my mouth and threatened to kill me.

"They finally shoved me into a dark closet where a human skeleton was suspended and told me 'That's what's left of another girl who lied to us.'"

The court scored the defendants for not having called the police when the alleged theft was discovered.

"Lawbreakers taking the law into their own hands must be stopped in this community. This is a clear case of contempt for all law and order," said the court.

EMPTY TREASURE CHESTS DAMPEN EUROPE HATREDS

War Embers Smoldering All Over Continent.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.]

ROME, March 25.—One thing which prevents Europe from being once more plunged into war is the state of exhaustion of the would be combatants—the treasuries are depleted and equipment is lacking. Today Europe is in a state of armed peace more than it was in 1914. Each country has a grievance which it is not forgetting. The people are taught not to forget.

France before the last war had its veiled monument in the Place de la Concorde as a constant reminder of Alsace-Lorraine. Chains were drawn across the Arch of Triumph as a symbol that victory was yet to be obtained. In Budapest today the Hungarians—a vigorous people—are constantly reminded of their nationals under the yoke of the Czechs, Jugo-Slavs, and Roumanians in similar ways.

Coming of Karl.

Despite the unpreparedness of Hungary for war it is less than six months since the Czechs, Jugo-Slavs, and Roumanians, on the pretext of preventing the return of former Emperor Karl to the throne, were set to invade Hungary and were stopped only by the efforts of Great Britain and France.

Had this invasion occurred, it was thought more than probable that Italy would have taken the opportunity to clean up the Adriatic situation. This might easily have brought about a general war which, because of lack of money and equipment, would have taken the complexion of guerrilla fighting.

Plenty of War Embers.

Jugo-Slavia is working for an Adriatic seaport, but every step in this direction is frustrated by the Italian fascisti, who are now dictating to the supposedly free state of Fiume.

Even little Albania could precipitate a world war. For example should Jugo-Slavia invade Albania or occupy the disputed territory on the Albanian frontier, Italy would intervene to save its interests on the Adriatic. The Bulgarians and Hungarians, with the Jugo-Slav armies occupied on the Italian front, might regard this as the psychological time to retake their provinces on the east. This would be answered by war declarations from Roumania and Czecho-Slovakia against the Hungarians and Bulgarians.

Russia would then probably attack Roumania through Bessarabia and involve Poland under the alliance. While Poland was fighting Russia, Germany would retake upper Silesia and Lithuania Vilna. A German attack on Poland and Czecho-Slovakia would compel France to cross the Rhine and begin an invasion. The Turks and Bulgarians in Thrace and Macedonia would revolt. Truly Europe is sitting on a volcano.

MERIDA, Yucatan, March 25.—"What kind of Socialism have you got here?" I asked Felipe Carrillo, Indian governor of Yucatan, the land of henequin, the plant that has made many millionaire sisal growers.

"The Yucatan kind," he said.

"Are you a follower of Lenin and the Russian communism?"

"I believe in Lenin and in communism, but we are not ready for it here—yet."

The guard at the door of the governor's palace in Merida—a dark man with white hair and high, shining black boots—wears a red necktie. The state soldiers wear red ties. Red ribbons are everywhere. Yet there has been nothing of terrorism here. The workers are in the saddle, but they are going slowly. There are real communists in Mexico. The group in Mexico City brands Carrillo and his followers as tame and have expelled them. The Mexico City party believes a soviet republic should be formed here.

Just a Pink.

Carrillo and his group are as radical at heart as the most ardent revolutionist would desire, but in practice they are not disturbing property and the ordinary processes of the capitalist system.

"They are bolshevists and anarchists to the heart," said a sisal shipper of Merida. He was angry because the congress, at Carrillo's dictation, had just passed a law putting a tax of 4 cents a kilo on sisal shipped through any agency except the Exportadorio, which is the state agency for handling the plant upon which all Yucatan depends for livelihood. The state, with one stroke, had put him and all independents out of business. In time the state hopes to take over the plantations and control production as well as export.

At present they are learning the lesson of Russia and retaining capitalists and the machinery and brains of capital. The state hopes to go into the oil business, but just now is ready to make a lease with an oil company for drilling. The state, in time, will have coöperative stores, but now the merchants of Merida are going their usual way, wondering when the economic crisis will be over and the price of henequin will rise and bring prosperity to the country.

Indians Given Land.

I rode all day in the interior with Carrillo and his agricultural commission on a tour to a remote pueblo, where the formality of giving lands to the Indians was to be gone through. The land through which we passed is, for the most part, uncultivated, a jungle or dense growth on a rocky soil.

The Maya Indians, a fine race whose civilization reaches back for a thousand years, have, until the Mexican revolution of 1911, lived in a state of practical peonage. They lived in the shadows of the great haciendas in a condition at times bad and in places good, similar to the slaves of the southern states before the civil war. Under Alvarado they rose and burned their churches and declared their independence. There was a little reaction under Carranza, and they did not get the land they had been promised. Under Carrillo they have the land. All an Indian has to do is to ask for it.

Cheers for Leader.

We rode on a special train in a comfortable coach, stopping at many villages, where the natives crowded round Carrillo, treating him as their friend and savior. It was easy to see why it is unsafe to preach against Socialism and Carrillo in Yucatan.

The governor took groups of Indians from one village to another, until the train was as crowded as a Chicago elevated in rush hour. The democratic governor, in shirt sleeves, purple suspenders showing, seemed to enjoy himself and brought smiles even to faces of the fat, stolid Indian women in their clean white robes with gay embroidered hems.

The Indians are poor, but they raise enough corn and beans to keep fat. They made a fiesta in the village of Yoholin, where the commission made out the deed to the parcels of land and formally presented it to the community. The governor and his party ate lunch in a hut of mud and reeds, standing and eating with their fingers.

Women Dance to Music.

The women danced to the music of the village orchestra under an awning made of palm leaves and flowers. Every one was happy. They did not have to work any more for the big planters. Some Indians, it is true, prefer to stick to the haciendas, and this makes Carrillo angry. He says they are no good and should be hanged. He wants them to work, but for themselves.

In this village lands owned by Attorney José R. Bollo were taken away from him. He held 2,464 hectares (a hectare is two and one-half acres) of uncultivated land and 184 cultivated. The state took 761 uncultivated hectares. From the Penahchen hacienda of 819 uncultivated hectares and 217 cultivated were taken 298 hectares of uncultivated land.

This was distributed to fifty-three agricultural workers on a basis of twenty hectares each for twenty years, ownership to remain in the village. There are 174 inhabitants in the village. After the deeds were signed by the few present who could write the governor and the Indians went to look over the lands, and the natives showed great pride in their new possessions.

German Divorces in 1920 Double Pre-War Number

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

BERLIN, March 24.—Official statistics today show that there were 36,000 divorces in Germany in 1920, which is double the number recorded before the war and 65 per cent above 1919. Hamburg is in the lead and Berlin second. Schleswig-Holstein leads the countryside, which is perhaps due to the plebescite dividing homes as well as land.

HELD AS BAD CHECK PASSER.

"DeLuxe" The Bedspring LUXURIOUS

Your Success or Failure in Life may depend on your bed—says Physician

"There" (in our beds) says the medical correspondent of the London Times, "as in a chrysalis future success or future failure is subtly wrought."

"It might be supposed," continues the writer, "that men knowing these things would devote special attention to the comfort of their beds. In fact," he goes on, "the carelessness of the average citizen as to his sleeping accommodation is very great."

As an example this medical authority points out that the average coil, woven wire or national spring is about as ill-suited for restful sleep as can be imagined. It is neither rigid nor very elastic. It gives sufficiently to make a great hollow for the human body to lie in, but is not flexible enough to mold itself to the shape of the body.

The base of the neck and the small of the back are strained because the shoulders and hips cause great depressions in the spring, leaving the neck and small of the back unsupported.

The only escape from this nerve-straining body-twisting torture is a spring that molds itself scientifically to the curves of the body. Such a spring is the Rome De Luxe. This spring cannot sag into hills and valleys, even though a child and grown-up lie side by side on the same bed. It literally flows around the natural contours of the body, accommodating the hips and shoulders and at the same time gently supporting the incurves such as the small of the back and the neck. Thus the spine remains straight, the body perfectly relaxed.

Examine the Rome De Luxe at your dealer's. There is a world of difference between beds and all that difference is in favor of the bed made luxuriously restful with a Rome De Luxe Bedspring. It is always finished in Rome Grey Enamel and on the side rail appears the Rome Quality Trade-mark which identifies all Rome products. The De Luxe is interchangeable—fits either wood or metal [illegible]s.

GREEKS OPPOSE PLAN TO RETURN TURKISH LANDS

Soldiers May Refuse to Quit Asia Minor.

BY LARRY RUE.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.]

ATHENS, March 25.—Gen. Papoulos, commander in chief of the Greek forces in Asia Minor, will arrive here tonight to discuss the terms for an armistice with the Turks as proposed by the conference of foreign ministers at Paris.

M. Stratos, the opposition leader, who has been ill for several days, appeared in the chamber again this evening, but was careful not to criticize Premier Gounaris before ascertaining the facts regarding the proposed armistice. It is understood, however, that he will accuse the premier of making war without a program and of approaching a peace parley with the same lack of foresight.

Oppose Asia Minor Evacuation.

It is stated here that Foreign Minister Curzon informed Izziet Pasha, representing Constantinople, and Youssouf Kemal Bey, representing Angora, at the recent London interview that unless Mustapha Kemal Pasha accepts the armistice terms as proposed at Paris, England will drop its neutrality and support the Greeks with money and war material to bring about the capitulation of Angora.

All parties and the press bitterly scorn the proposed evacuation of Asia Minor. The general sentiment is that Greece already has sacrificed too much there to evacuate now, even if to remain costs allied isolation.

In official circles it is declared that the army leaders and even the privates are declaring that Asia Minor never will be evacuated. It is said that even if the government orders evacuation in compliance with allied instruction, Greece will be confronted with another d'Annunzio in Gen. Papoulos, who will carry on independently. Furthermore, it is added that if Mustapha Kemal refuses an armistice the Greeks will march on to Constantinople.

According to information from Smyrna, the Greek soldiers and officers are signing petitions requesting that the Hellenic forces remain and are pledging themselves to hold their ground despite instructions from the government. It is reported that 20,000 signatures have been obtained.

Turks Are Suspicious.

CONSTANTINOPLE, March 25.—[By the Associated Press.]—The proposal for an armistice between the Turks and Greeks in Asia Minor, advanced by the allied foreign ministers, was received here with indifference. Distrust is expressed by the newspapers of all shades of opinion, which recall the armistice of Mudros, where, they say, the Turks were deceived by the very statesmen who offer to settle the present trouble.

LAND ONCE $27 NOW $1,500 ACRE TO CHICAGO MAN

Indianapolis, Ind., March 25.—Judge A. B. Anderson in federal court today awarded 170 acres of "squatter land" in the Calumet sand dunes to Charles H. Stebbins of Chicago and John S. Pitney of Brookline, Mass., who held deeds to the property.

The decision ends nineteen years of litigation in which Drusilla Carr of Miller, Ind.; Henry W. Warrum of Indianapolis, Everett C. Ballard, Albert C. Garver, and Bertha Manlove claimed the property by right of adverse possession of more than twenty years.

The litigation arose following the rapid development of the steel city, during which the value of the land rose from $27 an acre in 1891 to $1,500 in 1922. Three times the case was fought out in lower courts, then appealed to the Appellate court, and sent back to the lower courts.

A Safe Investment

By offering our bonds direct to purchaser, saving the commission we would otherwise have to pay a bank or bond company for marketing them, we are able to offer you these 8% first mortgage gold bonds at a price to net you 10% yearly, thereby saving money ourselves and making many new friends for Grand Beach.

SECURITY: These bonds are secured by property valued at $1,151,184, or three and one-half times the bond issue of $300,000. The net yearly income is more than six times the yearly interest charge, to say nothing of sales from building sites, which alone at present prices will pay twice the amount of this bond issue. In short, these bonds are as safe as any established legitimate business can make them.

It has been owned and managed by the present owners since 1900, and in that time has developed into one of the most beautiful and popular colonies in Michigan, with over one hundred and fifty beautiful homes and one of the finest golf courses in America, with another now building which will be ready for play by June 1st.

PURPOSE OF ISSUE: All money received from the sale of these bonds goes direct into the building of the GOLFMORE HOTEL and improvements. A large force of men is now working on the hotel, and it will be ready for the opening on May 30th.

THE GOLFMORE HOTEL and cottages have accommodation for 500 guests and will be open throughout the year—to meet the insistent demand for outdoor life for both summer and winter sports.

An Open Letter To Investors

We had thought that our advertising covered about every point that might reasonably be raised concerning Grand Beach bonds, but after talking to many of our investors, we now realize that there are several matters that we did not make entirely clear.

First, as to the cash value of these bonds—whether "convertible"—and their borrowing value at banks:—

We can answer this question more definitely perhaps than nine-tenths of the firms putting out bond issues, because there are several provisions made for the exact purpose of keeping these bonds right up to full value every minute from the day they are issued. This being primarily a Real Estate proposition it follows that all receipts from the sale of lots must be used to redeem outstanding bonds. Again the Board of Directors has passed a resolution that no dividends are to be paid or no money taken out of the property until all bonds are retired.

We will maintain a trading market for our bonds after the issue is sold and there is every reason to believe that by next August or September there will be more cash in this sinking fund than we will be able to find bonds to re-buy. Your bonds, therefore, would constantly increase in value without ever experiencing any period of depression, and be immediately convertible into cash at any moment you might require the return of your investment—plus interest to that date.

We know of no better secured bond than ours—$1,151,184.00 assets with NO liabilities except this issue of $300,000 bonds. Also please remember that these assets have been placed beyond our reach or control. They are deposited under legal requirements with the Chicago Title & Trust Co., and we CANNOT withdraw any part of these assets until every bond and every interest coupon has been paid in full.

We cannot, of course, say what the attitude of banks will be toward loaning money to you on these bonds. Neither can any other firm or corporation in the country answer this question concerning any bonds. Even U. S. Government bonds could not qualify for a definite answer to this question.

We can only answer that we believe you will find Grand Beach bonds to possess a borrowing power pretty close to their purchase price in any bank in Chicago, Gary or Michigan City—with the Golfmore Hotel under way—and we add to this suggestion that because of the arrangements explained above we expect to always be in a position to cash your bond should occasion ever require.

As to the earning power of Grand Beach—we can also answer this question much more definitely than could most enterprises, for the reason that we have had an experience of over 20 years with this property. The average earnings from Hotel, Golf Course, Dining Room, Cottages and Concessions are estimated at $147,000 per year. The sale of building lots alone at prevailing prices would more than pay the present bond issue twice over, while the yearly income above mentioned would pay all interest six times over.

There is a clear-cut distinction to be made between Grand Beach as a summer colony and the GOLFMORE HOTEL as an all-the-year-round proposition.

Grand Beach, up to the present time, has been simply a beautiful place for summer homes—convenient to Chicago—and possessing an unusually attractive golf course. Its "season" was from early June to early September.

This fact has led many people to think of the GOLFMORE as a "summer resort" hotel. This is an entirely erroneous conception.

We expect the GOLFMORE to entertain as many guests during January as it will during July. There are enough golf enthusiasts alone to keep this hotel full to overflowing from March to December inclusive—for every day is golf weather that is free from rain or snow. It must be borne in mind that while there are hundreds of "summer resorts" there is not a single hotel or place of any kind in or near Chicago offering winter sports.

Grand Beach is about a hundred miles from the center of population of the United States and there are 5,000,000 people within an hour and a half's ride. Thousands of these will take a winter vacation at the GOLFMORE. We have every facility for all kinds of winter sports. Ice skating in rinks, tobogganing and skiing down hillsides 150 to 200 feet high. Snow shoeing through the timber, horseback riding, sleighing and every entertainment that the out-of-doors in winter time has to offer.

The GOLFMORE will be thoroughly equipped for all these diversions and sports. For very stormy days and for evenings, there will be all the indoor amusements—music, dancing, cards, billiards, motion pictures, etc., etc. We fully anticipate that the GOLFMORE will be even more popular during the fall and winter months than in midsummer, for, it will be the ONLY place of the kind in this section of the country.

Another distinction worth your consideration is the fact that because of its wonderful golf links, the GOLFMORE is in a distinct class by itself. A cool summer that would spell disaster and poor business for a summer resort would mean an extra busy season for golfers and therefore a most prosperous year for the GOLFMORE.

Because of the safety of this investment and the extraordinary precautions we have taken to so fully protect every dollar we believe these bonds to be the very best buy for investors from $100 to $1,000.

Because of the splendid interest they yield, we believe Grand Beach Bonds to be the very best investment for those wishing to find safe security for from $1,000 to $50,000.

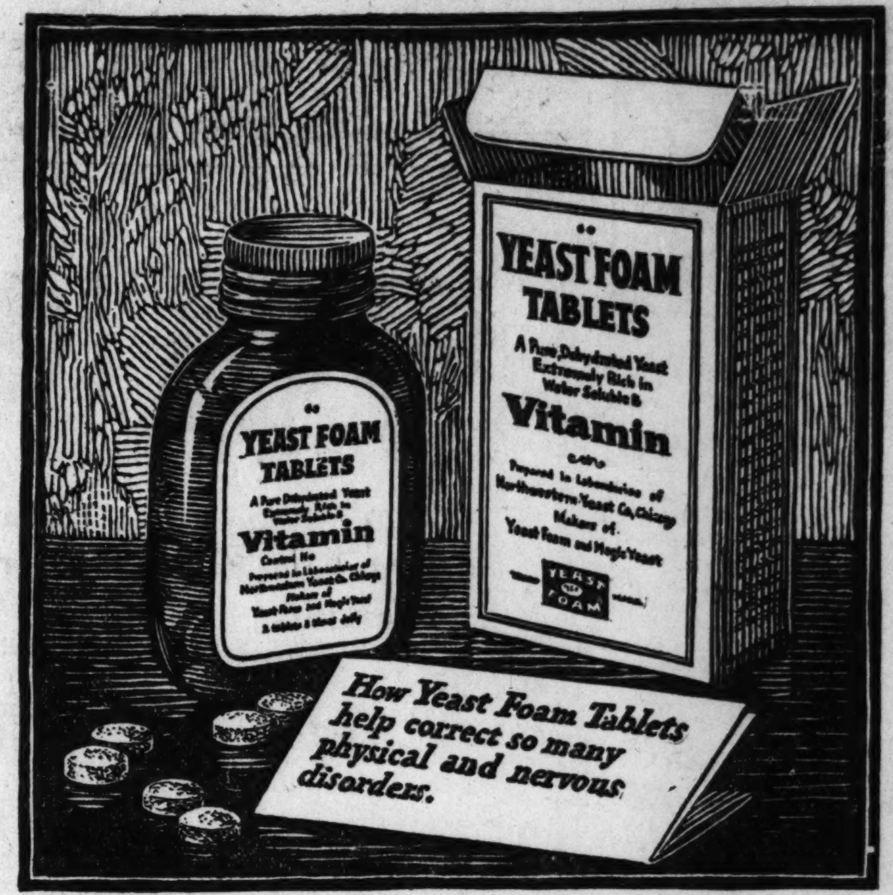
Announcing

the latest and most important development in the use of yeast as a medicinal product



YEAST FOAM TABLETS
A Pure Dehydrated Yeast Extremely Rich in Water Soluble B Vitamin
Prepared in Laboratories of Northwestern Yeast Co. Chicago
Makers of Yeast Foam and Magic Yeast
Vitamin
How Yeast Foam Tablets help correct so many physical and nervous disorders.

Yeast Foam Tablets are for therapeutic purposes only; they cannot be used for baking because they do not cause fermentation.

Yeast Foam Tablets

the only pure whole yeast in convenient tablet form

Yeast and yeast vitamin are everywhere recognized for their extraordinary medicinal value.

Many people in the past, however, have found yeast objectionable on account of the form in which it was obtainable.

Yeast in new and pleasing form

Now, with the introduction of Yeast Foam Tablets, this objection has been overcome.

Yeast Foam Tablets, entirely pure, whole yeast, are put up in small, convenient, agreeable and easy-to-take tablet form.

They contain no drugs or other ingredients.

Important news for yeast users

Yeast Foam Tablets are from 4 to 5 times as concentrated as the ordinary baking yeast. The necessary vitamin potency, therefore, is contained in a much smaller dose.

They may be taken in any quantity desired as they do not form gas or cause belching.

They are the only yeast suitable for children because of their absolute purity, their agreeable form and because they do not cause fermentation.

Each lot tested

Before being released from our laboratories, each lot of Yeast Foam Tablets is tested for its power to promote growth. This precaution is the only scientific means of standardizing yeast.

Made by makers of Yeast Foam

Yeast Foam Tablets are made and guaranteed, both as to purity and vitamin value, by the Northwestern Yeast Company—for 45 years makers of the famous baking yeasts, Yeast Foam and Magic Yeast.

These two products, of which there are 10 million users in the United States, are of a quality which must inspire the fullest confidence in our new, pure, medicinal yeast—Yeast Foam Tablets.

Ask for these tablets by their full name

The name, Yeast Foam Tablets, is your protection. Remember the full name: use it. There is nothing "just as good."

Look at the handy pocket-size bottle here illustrated. Ask for it today at any drug store.

Avoid untested "vitamin" products

The great popularity of yeast and its remarkable health-building properties have been seized by patent medicine manufacturers, many of whose products are untested and do not possess enough yeast to have any vitamin potency at all. When taking yeast, be sure to get it in its purest and most potent form.

To the medical profession

Yeast Foam Tablets have all the tonic properties of fresh, live yeast—and this big, outstanding advantage: they do not cause fermentation.

Thousands have asked us for this yeast

Yeast Foam Tablets are offered to the public in response to a prolonged and insistent demand for a convenient, easy-to-take, medicinal yeast of high vitamin potency.

Famous medical scientists helped us

They are the result of two years' laboratory research and experiment, conducted under the guidance of the leading medical scientists of six famous universities and hospitals.

Take Yeast Foam Tablets for these conditions

Yeast Foam Tablets, which are so rich in the tonic and tissue-forming vitamin, are recommended for loss of appetite or finicky appetite; indigestion; lack of physical strength and energy; anaemia; skin disorders; nervous troubles and many forms of ill health known as "run down" conditions.

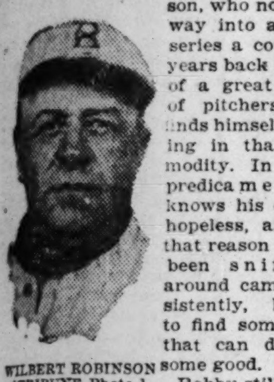
"RINGER" SCANDAL ROCKS A. B. C. MEET

ROBINS TO EYE PENNANT FROM SECOND DIVISION

Lack Hurlers to Make Winning Fight.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

Jacksonville, Fla., March 25.—[Special.]—The rotund Mr. Wilbert Robinson, who nosed his way into a world series a couple of years back by dint of a great string of pitchers, now finds himself wanting in that commodity. In such a predicament he knows his case is hopeless, and for that reason he has been sniffing around camp persistently, hoping to find something that can do him some good.



WILBERT ROBINSON

Robby still holds most of the slab stars who aided him so nobly in the 1920 pennant dash, but they aren't quite as good as they were. They will still win a number of ball games, but not enough, and as the rest of the team isn't what you might term good it is a safe prediction to say the Robins will spend the summer floundering around in the second division. They won't get into the first four even if the pitching staff gets some help from the rookies or a rookie.

Punk Pitching Material.

Eighteen hurlers of various degrees of worth were brought to the Jacksonville camp. Some have already gone their way, the principal one being Freddie Schupp, the veteran left hander. The others were mere punks. Several more of the latter variety have yet to go, but for consolation Robby still has Burleigh Grimes, Al Mammaux, and Leon Cadore, right handers, and Dutch Ruether, Sherrod Smith, and Clarence Mitchell, left handers.

That's a list that once made the other clubs envious. Time has changed that, at least so far as some of these fellows are concerned.

The best looking kid hurler in the camp is Roy Gordinier, a right hander from Buffalo. He came up last fall and cut a few capers in his first start. The next time out the enemy gave him the razz in a hurry, but Robby believes in him and has given him plenty of attention down here. Roy is going to stay for a time, at least.

Some Slab Possibilities.

There is another slab possibility in Clarence Brown, right hander, who won twenty-two and lost seven games at Ludington, Mich., last year. Harry Shriver from Saginaw, Mich., also has made a favorable impression, but no one knows how long it will last. In addition, there is Dizzy Vance, who was looked upon as a gent of ability at New Orleans last season. About the only other heaver who will receive consideration is Art Decatur, who was released by Louisville in 1920 after he had broken an arm.

The Robin infield is going to be a bit different from the one last year, but newness doesn't necessarily mean strength. Ray Schmandt will look after things at first base and Ivy Olson will be moved to second. We hope he is better there than at short. Robinson thinks he will be. Sam Crane, who has made several attempts to bust into big time, is going to be offered the short berth. He may field satisfactorily, but we doubt his hitting strength.

Will It Be Johnston or High?

The third base occupant may be Johnston, as of old, or Andy High. Johnston never was an infielder by choice, so Robinson can't be blamed for wanting to find a man who has natural leanings toward the job. High comes from Memphis and in his exhibitions here he has shown himself a fairly finished fielder. If Robby thinks he can get along with a good defense man at a sacrifice of a little hitting strength, High will hold the berth.

The infield utility job is fairly safe in the hands of Harold Janvrin, the former Red Sox star. Janvrin is what might be called a pretty good ball player and before the season is many weeks old Robinson may discover that the one time American leaguer is too valuable to keep on the bench. Other ambitious infielders with the team are McCarron of Buffalo and Church Ward and Lou Malone.

Should Have Good Outfield.

The team is so well stocked with outfielders that Robby will be able to make a pretty good showing in that department, even if he should cut off one or two of the seven men here for that particular work. Wheat, Myers, Tom Griffith, Hood, and Neis survive from last season and two have been added. One is Bert Griffith and the other the veteran George Whitted, recently waived to the Robins by Pittsburgh.

Bert Griffith is a product of the New Orleans club. Squire Ebbets, president of the Robins, who has been down here spreading glowing accounts of his team, thinks the kid is a bear. Maybe he is in March, but June will be something else again.

Good Catching Department.

The backstopping department is not going to be under par. Otto Miller still hangs on, but younger talent may be permitted to shoulder the bulk of the work in the coming campaign.

One possibility is Hank De Berry, once at Cleveland and more recently at New Orleans. The team also has Bud Hungling of the Memphis team. His specialty is hitting, and he has a fair knowledge of what a catcher should do. Zack Taylor, who has been with the team three years, is apt to lose out this season.

The Question.

Who is your favorite boxer among the world's champions?

Where Asked.

Corner of Madison and Dearborn streets.

The Answers.

Ernest Stout, 905 Tacoma building, lawyer—I can't see any champion but Jack Dempsey. He is a self-made fighter, and has overcome all the forces of opposition with courage and endurance. Incidentally, America owes him a debt of gratitude for defeating Carpentier, and keeping the title in America.

Edward Bernard, 4459 South Wood street, student—I don't know of any other fighter who can compare with Dempsey. I saw Dempsey defeat Carpentier last summer, and I will say that he is great, simply great. He is cool and watches his opponent, then when he gets the opening he lets go and the battle is over.

Sidney Dote, 2916 Lexington street, teamster—My favorite boxer is Johnny Buff, the bantam weight champion. He is a greater fighter for his age. He learned the boxing game in the navy, where they remain young until late in life. He is a great little fighter and always shows the real navy spirit.

Ted Tumpson, Lexington hotel, sales promotor—My choice is Benny Leonard. I consider Leonard the greatest fighter of the age. He has bowled over more tough foes than any other lightweight champion in the history of the game. He possesses all the natural skill a champion should have.

John Tomasetti, 713 South Loomis street, newsdealer—Benny Leonard is my favorite fighter. Boxing is a rough and ready game. It is a game that demands far more than physical strength. In addition to his ring ability Leonard is a man of real character.

ANGELS' BATS PLAY 12-6 TUNE ON CUBS

FLACK OUT 2 MONTHS

EAST ST. LOUIS, Ill., March 25.—Max Flack, who is confined to his home here suffering from a fracture of the skull, will not be able to play with the Cubs for at least two months, according to his physician. An operation will not be necessary after taking an X-ray picture of the injury.

Los Angeles, Cal., March 25.—[Special.]—Los Angeles, hitting the ball fiercely today, stopped the winning streak of the Cubs, 12 to 6. "Speed" Martin started and was an immediate victim. The Angels nicked him for two runs in the opening inning. But the real assault on "Speed" came in the fourth, when eight hits and two walks netted eight counts. Two Angels made two hits in this round.

The Cubs got busy on Lyons in the seventh. Statz singled and was forced. Cotter singled, Miller walked, and Callaghan doubled, Holly and Cotter scoring. Kelleher singled, bringing in Miller and Callaghan. They picked up another in the eighth. Barber, batting for Kaufmann, singled, took third on Hollocher's hit, and scored on a fly.

Percy Jones went the eighth inning, three hits resulting in a run for Los Angeles. Marty Krug, the new Cub second sacker, played the latter part of the game and celebrated by tripling in the ninth and scoring the final run.

RAIN ROUTS SOX

Dallas, Tex., March 25.—[Special.]—What had been planned as a big day for this place failed to materialize because of rainfall. The Giants and Sox were billed to put on their exhibition act, and Commissioner Landis was to present McGraw's world's champions with their series emblems.

Gleason's squad was enlarged late this afternoon by the arrival of Pitcher Dick Kerr and Infielder Eddie Mulligan, the former to sign his contract.

Toledo, O., March 25.—[Special.]—No sport seems to be immune from scandal. This was evidenced today when the American Bowling congress officials unearthed a "ringer" case, the first in its experience.

As a result of the discovery, Judge W. D. Alexander of Cincinnati, second vice president of the congress, will be asked to resign, and Henry Megard Sr., also of Cincinnati, president of the Central States Bowling association, has been asked to quit his position as a result of their alleged culpability.

The black mark on the pin game came when it was discovered that the Buckeye Malt Syrups of Cincinnati used a player who was not entitled to roll. The offending pin knight is A. Burbrink and the offense was committed on March 9, when the team hit the wood for a total of 2,837, with Burbrink doing the heavy work with 606 pins.

Official Admits Substitution.

B. Dreyer, originally slated to roll with the Buckeyes, but he was supplanted by Burbrink. This is attested in a letter from Judge Alexander to Secretary Langtry, received today. Burbrink used the name of Dreyer not only in the five men event, but in the doubles and singles as well. When Burbrink's games were completed he signed the score sheets with the name of "Dreyer."

Judge Alexander accompanied the Cincinnati delegation here and is alleged to have occupied a seat behind the players when they rolled. Megard captained the team.

The Buckeyes' games have been thrown out of the records, as have the singles and doubles series in which Burbrink participated.

Chicagoans in Third Place.

With the tournament about to enter on its final week, the Charles Webers of Chicago indicated by their pin rolling that there is still some competition and that the present leaders are insecure until the final squad has rolled. The Chicagoans stepped right out with games of 968, 988, and 953 for a total of 2,909, which landed them in third place. E. Judy set the pace with games of 214, 224, and 234.

All of the squads that rolled today and tonight hung up mediocre scores with the exception of the Webers.

Following are the scores in the minor events of Chicago bowlers:

Maryland Driving Club Burns; Loss Is $75,000

Baltimore, Md., March 25.—Fire of undetermined origin early today destroyed the clubhouse, a cottage fifteen box stalls, and the water tank at the Gentlemen's Driving park, near Pimlico racetrack, entailing an estimated loss of $75,000. RHODES SCHOLAR AVERTS OXFORD TRACK SHUTOUT

LONDON, England, March 25.—[By the Associated Press.]—Cambridge university overwhelmingly defeated Oxford in their fifty-fourth annual track meet today, winning nine out of the ten events with the strongest team the light blues have produced in many years.

American Rhodes scholars won for Oxford its one event, the shot put. It was won by A. I. Reese of Nebraska, representing Lincoln college. Second place in this event was taken by F. K. Brown of Washington state, representing Exeter college. Reese's distance was 37 feet 2½ inches. These were the only Americans entered in the meet.

There were no outstanding performances except that of H. R. Stallard of Cambridge, who registered his third consecutive victory in the mile run. His time was 4:22 2-5. Cambridge now has won twenty-six meets, Oxford twenty-three, and five have been tied.

Nebraska Man Wins.

Lincoln, Neb., March 25.—The prowess of Alfred I. Reese as a record shot putter was developed after he was graduated from the University of Nebraska in 1920. Although a member of the Nebraska track team, his records were only fair and it was not until he entered Oxford, as a Rhodes scholar in 1920, that he developed into record timber. His home is Grand Island, Neb.

OFFER MICHIGAN GRAD UTAH POST

Idaho Falls, Idaho, March 25.—Joe ("Pep") Maddock, former Michigan star, who was football coach at University of Utah from 1904 to 1909, has under consideration an offer of position as director of athletics at the Utah school. Maddock stated today he would like to accept, but as he is secretary and treasurer of a local trust company and has property here, his business interests may prevent.

Maddock was a member of the famous Michigan backfield in the three year period starting in 1901. For the last two years he has been returning to Ann Arbor during the football season to act as special assistant to Coach Yost.

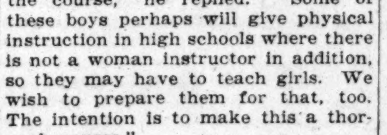
IN the WAKE of the NEWS

SCHOOL FOR COACHES.

WHILE in Champaign last week The Wake "looked in" at several sessions of the University of Illinois school for coaches. This school by both practical and theoretical instruction prepares students to become athletic directors of colleges and high schools.

In one class we saw a group of about thirty husky young fellows performing gymnastic dancing in unison, while another thumped the piano to time their steps. Some of the efforts were not entirely graceful. At first glance it struck us as humorous, and we inquired of our guide, "What the big idea? To make them light on their feet?"



"No, that's not the reason it's in the course," he replied. "Some of these boys perhaps will give physical instruction in high schools where there is not a woman instructor in addition, so they may have to teach girls. We wish to prepare them for that, too. The intention is to make this a thorough course."

Our greatest interest centered in a quiz on baseball strategy, conducted by Athletic Director George Huff. Here the students were asked what they would have batter, or baserunner, or fielder, or pitcher do in certain situations.

What we liked most about it was that Director Huff, in commenting on their answers, differentiated between correct baseball as it would be played in the big leagues and the caliber they would find in college and high school contests in which their charges played, calling at times for different tactics. It was interesting and it was instructive. Several members of the class gave answers which, if carried out on the diamond, would be regarded as "bonehead playing," but the large majority grasped their subject.

Following this theoretical classroom work, the men later are taken outdoors for practical demonstrations in actual play. Practically the same methods are followed in football, basketball, track, and other subjects.

In addition to sports and gymnastics, courses in physiology, hygiene, treatment of injuries, and studies from the regular college list are included in the curriculum.

For men intending to devote their lives to physical instruction, it seemed to us a valuable and practical preparation.

The buses rolled down past Potter Palmer's great retail store, past Charles Gossage & Co., and other popular establishments in that old time retail section. Old Timer.

TABLE OF POINTS

Hyde Park	32	Senn	8½
East High, Columbus, O	16	New Trier	7
Evanston	14	Oak Park	5
Lane	10	Indianapolis	2½

Featured by the phenomenal performances of Dick Howell of Hyde Park, who equaled one and smashed two national interscholastic records, swimmers representing Hyde Park scored a decisive victory in the eleventh annual Northwestern interscholastic at Patten gymnasium yesterday, winning the meet with a total of 32 points. East High of Columbus, O., was second with 16, due to the prowess of the two Addison brothers. Evanston was third with 14, and Lane fourth with 10 points.

Howell splashed the 220 in the remarkable time of 2:22 2-5, bettering the old mark by 17 seconds, and turning the distance in nearly 3 seconds faster time than the national intercollegiate record held by Angus Sinclair of Annapolis.

Nears World's Record.

His feat also betters the present Big Ten mark of 2:24 1-5, made by Ed Blinks, Chicago, and is within whispering distance of the 2:20 1-5 world's record established by Norman Ross.

Howell, in addition, shattered the 100 yard national interscholastic record of :58 by clocking the distance in :56 1-5. Ward of Hyde Park placed second. It was mainly through the sensational work of these two lads that Hyde Park's margin of victory was so decisive.

East High of Columbus was prominent when Addison took two firsts, cracking the national 100 yard backstroke record of 1:14 1-5 with a classy 1:11 1-5 exhibition, and winning the fancy diving event.

In the 100 yard breaststroke, Wehr of Lane, swimming in splendid form, set a new national mark of 1:15 3-5.

Evanston's natators, although failing to capture a first, showed a well balanced team that picked up enough seconds and thirds to win third honors.

Evanston High school's track team, coached by J. B. Riddell, last night won the eleventh annual interscholastic track and field meet of Northwestern university at Patten gym, Evanston, with a total of 22½ points. Oak Park placed second with 12 points, while Cedar Rapids, Ia., and Deerfield tied for third honors with 10 points each.

BASIL IRWIN.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

The meet was featured by the setting of two new records, the tying of another, and the individual performances of Tommy Rugg, West High of Minneapolis, and Basil Irwin of Cedar Rapids.

Rugg won individual honors in the meet, scoring 11 points. He captured the pole vault and the high jump—in which he tied the record—and placed fourth in the shot put.

Irwin Sets Mile Record.

Irwin was the first to set a new mark, when he footed the mile run in 4:38 1-5. The old record of 4:43 1-5 was held by Lay of Lane Tech. C. Cassidy of Rockford was second.

Albert Washington, Englewood's dusky star, next took the 50 yard dash in the record time of :05 3-5. The colored lad ran easily and breasted the tape two feet ahead of Goodwillie of University High. The old record of :05 4-5 was held by Harney of Oak Park.

Tommy Rugg then equaled the record of 11 feet 6 inches in the pole vault. O. Barker of Evanston and A. Steele, Monticello, tied for second, and Orand of Barrington was third.

Irwin of Cedar Rapids won his second race of the night when he romped off with the first race of the 880 yard event, finishing in 2:07 2-5. O. Mathews of East Minneapolis won the second race in 2:08.

Deerfield Boys Take Relay.

Deerfield won the relay, which was run in two sections, the teams being placed according to their times. Evanston was second, Oak Park third, and Hyde Park fourth. The best time was 3:43 3-5.

Tommy Yarnell of Hyde Park stepped off with the sixty yard low hurdles in :07 3-5, two-fifths of a second slower than the old mark. Johnny Cameron, the blonde runner of Evanston, grabbed first honors in the 440 yard run. Cameron won by ten feet in :53 4-5.

ROBINSON PICKS ALL-STAR TEAMS OF BIG 10 SWIM

BY TOM ROBINSON.
[Swimming Coach Northwestern U.]

JOHNNY BENNETT.

That swimming in the western conference universities is making great progress was shown in this year's Big Ten meet, which was won by Minnesota, with Wisconsin a strong contender. The competition was so keen that records in four events were shattered and another tied.

Year after year the records in the various contests have been lowered to such an extent that the marks now compare favorably with those of other intercollegiate swimming associations in the country. This record breaking activity is due to the expanding interest in the sport.

New Teams Come to Front.

In former years Minnesota never was a strong contender for honors, while Wisconsin was represented by average teams. Northwestern, Illinois, and Chicago generally were represented by the teams which contended for the championship. This year, however, Minnesota, Wisconsin, and Chicago were represented by record breakers whose performances were the best ever seen in the conference meets. The men to break the records were:

Bennett of Wisconsin, who lowered the 100 yard time from 56 3-5 to 56 2-5 seconds, and who also equaled the conference mark of :19 3-5 seconds in the 40.

Blinks, all conference champion of last year, who lowered his own record of 2:31 2-5 to 2:24 1-5 seconds for a new national record.

Farricy of Minnesota, who established a new breast stroke record of 2:38 2-5, shattering the old mark by 6 1-5 seconds.

Lampher, Minnesota, who reduced the record in the 440 yard swim from 5:41 2-5 to 5:34.

To Bennett of Wisconsin goes the title of the "iron man" of the conference. He swam two firsts, one second, and one fourth, and swam as anchor man on his relay team in the conference meet.

Guided by Meet Results.

In picking the first all conference team I am guided by results of the dual meets and the conference championships.

In the relay there is a good field to choose from; also in the forty yard dash. Blinks, Chicago; Bennett, Wisconsin; Childs, Northwestern; and Lamboley, Wisconsin, are the first choice. These men have led the conference in the dashes throughout the dual season and are therefore also picked for the first team in the dash.

In all other events only three men will be named on each team. In the fancy diving Crawley of Northwestern is picked to lead, as he has performed well in all dual meets. He went through the preliminaries and the finals in the conference meet without a break. He should have won. Condon of Illinois has been at the top. Crawley handed him his only defeat in the dual season. Byler of Chicago was defeated in all the dual meets, but showed up well in the conference.

Farricy Leads Country.

In the 200 yard breast stroke, Farricy is the king pin of the country. Czenwansky is a good second and Dinsmore of Minnesota third.

In the plunge Atwood of Minnesota, Taylor, Illinois, and Jordan of Minnesota are the choices, and are practically a toss up; all three are steady men in this event and all are under 25 seconds in time. Penfield is rated close to the leaders.

In the back stroke, Day of Minnesota is easily the leader, having won every start for the year. Bowen, Illinois, is a good second and W. Agnew of Northwestern a good third.

Here Are Other Selections.

Choices in the other events are:

220 yard free style—Blinks, Chicago; Bennett, Wisconsin; Lamboley, Minnesota.
440 yards—Lampher, Minnesota; Wheeler, Illinois; M. Hayford, Northwestern.

Capt. Henry Penfield of Northwestern was the outstanding star in water basketball. He played offensive and defensive positions equally well. To him goes one of the forward positions on the first team. Capt. Wilson of Illinois fills the other forward position. Capt. Merriam of Chicago is placed at center forward position. Max Hayford, former captain of Northwestern, is placed as captain, playing roaming guard position. Hall of Chicago, one of the best defensive men in the conference, gets a berth at guard. Fox of Illinois is picked as the other guard.

BIG 3 MEETING HELD TO DISCUSS ATHLETIC UPLIFT

New York, March 25.—Representatives of Harvard, Yale and Princeton gathered today to discuss athletic uplift action and agreements which bind these three eastern universities on the field of sport.

The meeting was held behind closed doors with sessions until late tonight, and it was stated that conclusions would be reported direct to the faculties and athletic authorities of the universities for action. Public announcement of changes in policy or regulations probably will be made through the university centers later, it was declared.

Technical problems connected with the administration of sport, efforts to minimize the super-independence attached to certain intercollegiate contests, and suggestions for curtailment of some sport complaints, were up for discussion.

The universities were represented as follows:

HARVARD—Chester N. Greenough, dean of Harvard college; Dr. Roger L. Lee, professor of hygiene; Stephen Galatti of New York.
YALE—Frederick Allen, New York banker and former crew captain; George Grant Mason, chairman of the alumni advisory board, and Prof. Clarence W. Mendell, chairman of the board of control of Yale Athletic association.
PRINCETON—Dean Howard McClanahan, chairman of the board of athletic control; Walter E. Hope, alumni trustee; Henry B. Thompson, chairman of Princeton university endowment fund.

BAY VIEW INSTRUCTOR.

Noblesville, Ind., March 25.—[Special.]—Miss Cordelia De Vol of Lebanon has been appointed assistant instructor in girls' gymnasium work in the summer school at Bay View university, Bay View, Mich. Miss De Vol secured her training at Oberlin college, Ohio.

BEGIN BATTLE FOR CUE TITLE TOMORROW NIGHT

WEISSMULLER SETS 4 NEW TANK RECORDS

Philadelphia, Pa., March 25.—Johnny Weissmuller, youthful swimming marvel, racing under the colors of the Illinois A. C., in an exhibition race tonight at University of Pennsylvania, in connection with the individual intercollegiate swimming championships, broke four world's records and came back a few minutes later and tied the world's mark for fifty yards.

JOHNNY WEISSMULLER.

The Chicago man's records were established for 200, 250, and 300 yards, and for 300 meters. His new world time in each, respectively, was 2:05 1-5, 2:41, 3:16 3-5, and 3:35 1-5.

Weissmuller's opponents were George Pawling of the Philadelphia Swimming club and Crownover of Swarthmore college. He gave each thirty seconds handicap.

Lowers Ross' Mark.

The old record for 200 yards was 2:08, held by Norman Ross of the I. A. C. In the 250 yard event Johnny clipped off seven and four-fifths seconds from the record of Ted Cann of New York A. C. Cann's record of 3:28 in the 300 yard match was taken down several notches in Weissmuller's 3:16 3-5.

Ten seconds were taken off the old record of Norman Ross for the 300 meter event in the Chicago flash's 3:35 1-5.

Johnny's Fifty Yard Dash.

Weissmuller also holds the record for the 220 yard distance at 2:17 1-5. In an exhibition of the fifty yard dash he did not cut down his old world record, going the distance in :23 1-5.

Yale maintained its supremacy in swimming by taking three out of six possible firsts against all the stars of the east in the intercollegiate individual championship meet.

In the fifty yard dash Gauss of Yale was forced to sprint the distance in :24 4-5 to win from Komakanui of Navy and Damon of Amherst by a touch. The 220 yard contest was a close race between Giebel of Rutgers and Sinclair of Navy, the former winning in 2:25 4-5. In the plunge Guernsey, the world champion, and Wood, both of Yale, were first and second.

Jones Takes Century.

The fancy dive was won by Armstrong of Pennsylvania and the 100 yard dash by D. L. Jones of Brown, a Chicago boy. Jelliffe of Yale was second. Jones' time was :56 3-5.

EDITH CUMMINGS EASY WINNER IN PINEHURST GOLF

Pinehurst, N. C., March 25.—Most of the favorites won easily today in the first round of the North and South golf championship for women. Miss Glenna Collett of Providence and Mrs. M. J. Scamnell of Oakmont, played the championship course in 81, winning from their opponents, but Miss Harriet Shepard of Hartford, one of the most promising of the younger American players, gave Mrs. R. H. Barlow of the Merion Cricket club a close game, losing 2 and 1. Mrs. Barlow had a medal card of 87. Miss Edith Cummings of Chicago was out in 42 in her match with Mrs. John L. Chapman of Greenwich, winning 6 and 5. The summary, championship flights:

Mrs. C. F. Uebelacker, Arcola, defeated Mrs. C. H. Roope, Braeburn, 3 and 2. Mrs. William West, Huntington Valley, defeated Mrs. F. J. Doyle, Torresdale, 2 and 1. Mrs. R. H. Barlow, Merion, defeated Harriet Shepard, Hartford, 2 and 1. Glenna Collet, Metacomet, defeated Mrs. H. E. Foreman, Chicago, 8 and 7. Sarah Fowns, Oakmont, defeated Mrs. A. F. Seeley, Essex, 5 and 3. Mrs. M. J. Scammell, Oakmont, defeated Louise Fordyce, Youngstown, 9 and 7. Edith Cummings, Chicago, defeated Mrs. John D. Chapman, Greenwich, 6 and 5. M. E. Wolf, Sunningdale, defeated Dorothy Dotger, Charlotte, 6 and 5.

Mrs. F. J. Doyle of Torresdale hit a tree with her second shot at the second hole and the ball rebounded, striking her in the neck and running inside her blouse. This incident caused much comment even among the blasé golfing colony here. Of course, Mrs. Doyle lost the hole to Mrs. William West of Huntington Valley when the ball hit her. One golfer said he thought the shot was "out of bounds."

BANKERS' LEAGUE.

Federal Reserve bank trimmed the Central Trust, 23 to 11, in a final round game last night at the Central "Y" floor. Hooper and Dearborn were the luminaries for the winners. In the second game Harris Trust beat Union Trust, 23 to 11. Lineup:

Schaefer Ready to Defend 18-2 Title Against Hoppe

BY JOE DAVIS.

Few matches in the history of billiards have aroused as much interest as the meeting of Jake Schaefer, world's 18-2 balk line champion, and Willie Hoppe, challenger, at Orchestra hall, Chicago, tomorrow, Tuesday, and Wednesday. They will play 500 points each night for the Brunswick diamond emblem, a purse of $1,000, and a percentage of the gate. Their respective managers, Charley Tennes and R. B. Benjamin, have made a tidy wager on the outcome.

R. B. BENJAMIN.

For years Hoppe was the dominating figure in the billiard world, no champion in any line of sport showing as great superiority. He was monarch of all he surveyed, holding the 18-1, 18-2, and 14-1 championships. Then along came Jack Dempsey and Babe Ruth, one establishing himself as the king of heavyweight pugilists, and the other as the exalted ruler of the Kingdom of Swat.

Appear Afraid of Hoppe.

It reached a point where no one was willing to challenge Hoppe, and he went serenely along from year to year, with only the annual championship tournament at 18-2 to threaten his crown. From 1912, when Koji Yamada defeated Hoppe by 2 points in the championship tournament, the latter did not meet with defeat until Jake Schaefer upset him twice on successive nights and wrested the world's championship title from him.

They met in the final scheduled game of the world's tournament at the Congress hotel, Chicago, Nov. 22, and Schaefer, opening with a run of 192 and finishing with one of 152, overwhelmed Hoppe, 400 to 26, by far the worst defeat incurred by the New Yorker. Schaefer averaged 66 4-6 and Hoppe 4 2-6.

This game was taken as an "off night" for Hoppe by many of the critics, but Schaefer came back the next night and set his mark as a real champion indelibly on the records by trimming Hoppe 500 to 346, averaging 83 2-6, while the loser had an average of 69 1-5. Hoppe's average would have been considered fine as a winning one, but it got him nothing against the wonderful play of the young Chicagoan.

Brilliant in Exhibitions.

Since that time both men have been on exhibition tours and reeling off averages that would have amazed the billiard world twenty years ago, but now of every day occurrence. Hoppe by reason of having been the runner-up had the right to challenge, and since he clinched that option both players have been pointing themselves for the big match which will start tomorrow night.

Orchestra hall has been the scene of a number of great matches, and it was there the late Jake Schaefer, father of the present champion, played his last match when he defeated Willie Hoppe in an uphill match. The table will be placed on the stage and seating accommodation for 1,800 will be provided.

William Hoppe was born at Cornwall on the Hudson, Oct. 11, 1887, and Schaefer was born at Chicago Oct. 18, 1895.

NOTES OF THE KNIGHTS OF THE TEE

ALAN GOW, new professional at Edgewater Golf club, and his wife arrived last night. They were met at the station by Judge C. M. Foell, president of the club. Forbes Leith, who will be assistant to Gow, arrived Friday night. Gow, who is a ruddy faced Scotchman, is about the same build as Laurie Ayton, while Leith is taller, ranging about six feet in height.

Gow was born at Lougham, Perthshire, in 1885, and comes from the Banstead Downs club of Surrey, England, where he succeeded Wilfred Reid when the latter came to this country.

Gow reports golf as comparatively at a standstill in Great Britain, and does not expect much improvement this summer. As soon as he gets located he will start work at Edgewater. He plans to compete in the national open championship, and in company with Chick Evans keep Edgewater on the golfing map.

Walter Fovargue, former professional at Skokie, has returned from Japan, where he laid out a golf course. He was stricken with typhoid fever on his return to San Francisco, but is recovering.

Rain kept the golfers away from most of the local course, but fifteen players reported at Westmoreland, and if today is fine about 100 are expected. Edgewater opened its grillroom yesterday.

Semi-finalist opponents in the second indoor tournament of the season at the South Shore Country club will be J. F. Chelius vs. J. P. Dunne and F. M. O'Donnell vs. J. F. Sheehy. These players won their way into the penultimate frame yesterday, as follows: Chelius defeated F. W. Linden, 3 and 2; Dunne defeated S. A. Dee, 2 and 1; O'Donnell defeated H. E. Sever, 3 and 2; Sheehy defeated G. L. Danforth, 4 and 2.

Walter Thiebault of the Oak Park Country club has just returned from a three months' vacation in California, where he played on fourteen different courses. He won the cup in the tournament staged during the National Warehousemen's association at Catalina Island, getting a card of 77. Mr. Thiebault says the Wilshire C. C. has the most wonderful greens in California, although only two years old.

Chicago Advertising Golfers will meet at a luncheon at the College Inn tomorrow for the purpose of boosting the annual tournament of the American Golf Association of Advertising Interests, which will be held at Cooperstown, N. Y., the week of June 23.

Bob MacDonald, the Bob o' Link professional, who returned home for a short visit, left last night for Pinehurst, where he will compete in the North and South open championship. Larry Ayton of Evanston and Jock Hutchison of Glen View also will play after filling an engagement at Nashville.

Bill Hutchison, who has been at Glen View for several years, will remain as instructor at The Fair through the summer.

Vice President Waide, who is chairman of the membership committee at Olympia Fields, yesterday announced that applications to fill the twenty-one vacancies had been received and that the club now has a waiting list.

BOY SCOUTS

CELEBRATE TWELFTH BIRTHDAY

NEXT Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock 500 business and professional men from all points of the United States who make up the national council of the Boy Scouts of America, representing over half a million Boy Scouts and leaders, convene at the Hotel La Salle for the twelfth annual meeting of the Boy Scouts of America.

Men prominent nationally in work for boys will lead the two days' program, which will include reports of the last year's progress, and the development intensively and extensively of the Boy Scout movement. The big feature of the conference will be the twelfth birthday dinner at the La Salle on Wednesday evening.

Northwest District.

The district orchestra is practicing for the national Boy Scout convention. Wednesday night at the birthday dinner the boys will furnish the music.

A large court of honor will be held on Friday at Holstein park. Over 100 Scouts successfully passed the tests for second class, thirty for third class, and sixty boys passed merit badge exams.

Troop 47, one of the new troops, has accomplished a great deal in the few months it has been organized. On the night of the court of review thirty-eight neatly dressed Scouts marched in a body to the headquarters and passed the tests.

West Side.

The West Town exposition is housing a Scout booth. The exposition is at the Second Infantry armory, 6253 West Madison street, all this week.

South Shore.

The district court of honor will be held at St. Paul's Episcopal church, 50th street and Dorchester avenue, on Tuesday evening. Guy Guernsey, district chairman, will speak.

Troop 593, formerly connected with Carson, Pirie, Scott & Co., is now located in Room 104 of the County building.

Southwest.

A public session of the district court of honor will be held at 8 p. m. on Tuesday at Hamilton Park Field house, 72d street and Normal boulevard.

Calumet.

The Calumet district is engaged in an inter-division rally contest. Points are being awarded in drill, knot tying, first aid, fire by friction, signaling, scouts pace, and troop yells.

The eastern division will hold its contest as Bessemer Park field house on Tuesday evening, the western division at Palmer Park Field house, 111th street and Indiana avenue, on Thursday evening.

TALES of A TEE-BOX TOURIST

WILLIE PARK, who laid out the fourth course at Olympia fields, is in Chicago to inspect the progress of the work. Last week he was a visitor at the South Shore club, in company of President Charles M. Smalley of Olympia, who had just returned from Florida. Mr. Smalley stopped to chat with Charles Willard, the veteran South Shore player.

Mr. Willard was telling Mr. Smalley of his first experiences at golf at the Essex County club of New Jersey. After a few games, in which he had defeated the men who introduced him to the game, Mr. Willard thought he was good enough to take on the professional. The game was arranged, and Mr. Willard lost the first three holes. He thought the professional was lucky, but two more holes convinced him he had a lot to learn.

Willie Park, who had been talking to a South Shore member, was near enough to hear part of the conversation, and as soon as Mr. Willard finished, introduced himself as the professional who was responsible for the conviction.

They had not met for over twenty years, and so Mr. Willard had failed to recognize him.

TILDEN-MOLLA CAPTURE TITLE AT INDOOR NETS

Boston, Mass., March 25. — Mrs. Molla Bjurstedt Mallory of New York won her fifth national women's indoor tennis championship today. In the final match of the title tournament, on the courts of the Longwood Cricket club she defeated Miss Leslie Bancroft of Boston, 7—5, 6—1.

R. NORRIS WILLIAMS.

With William T. Tilden II. of Philadelphia, world's singles champion, she captured the mixed doubles title for the second time in as many attempts. The nation's greatest singles players mastered Mrs. Frank H. Godfrey and R. Norris Williams II. of Boston, 6—2, 7—5, in the final.

Only One Upset.

Today's program brought to a close the first national tournament under the new arrangement of "seeding" the draw. Form ran exceedingly true, the only upset of the week having been Miss Bancroft's elimination of Mrs. Marion Zinderstein Jessup in the semi-finals of singles yesterday.

For a time this afternoon it appeared that Miss Bancroft would take the measure of Mrs. Mallory, but she faltered when within a point of winning the opening set and thereafter was completely submerged. It was Miss Bancroft's first appearance in a national tennis final and the youthful lefthand player was brilliant.

In the end, however, the dogged determination and steadiness of the defending champion forced the challenger into errors by a typical steady baseline game.

Tilden Brilliant.

Williams, a former national singles champion, continued to use his new steel strung raquet throughout the mixed doubles tournament and at times brought off shots for which he is noted. The scintillating work in this contest, however, was furnished by Tilden, whose tremendous reach and agility enabled him to turn the tide definitely in favor of his side when the Boston pair threatened. Mrs. Mallory's rôle was almost that of a spectator.

After the match Tilden defeated Williams, 6—2, 6—2, in an exhibition singles contest.

MEN CHOICES WIN

New York, March 25.—Leading players in the men's national indoor tennis championship tournament won their matches handily today in the opening rounds of play.

Kynaston, all of the "seeded" group, were victors in the feature matches. Vincent Richards, another former holder of the indoor title, was compelled to default his place because of illness.

CLASSY DISPLAY WHEN J. MEYERS MEETS PARCAUT

Unless all indications go astray, the championship wrestling match between Johnny Meyers, claimant of the middleweight title, and Ralph Parcaut, the Mason City, Ia., challenger, to be staged by Jim Mullen at the Coliseum on April 3, should be the most attractive and interesting of the season.

RALPH PARCAUT. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Everything points to a shooting contest, one of those up and up affairs which will be featured by plenty of action and application of nearly every hold known to the mat game. Both men, Meyers particularly, are known for their expert knowledge of innumerable locks. They also know how to apply the leverage and adjust the weight when either gets the other in a dangerous position.

Meyers, Smart Wrestler.

Local fans are familiar with Meyers' style of offensive and defensive wrestling. He is a past master in applying the double wristlock, which he employs to whip opponents into positions to pin them by use of the head or body scissors, combined with a plain wristlock. Johnny has won several matches by use of the crotch and half nelson, the standing crotch, toe hold and cross body chancery.

Parcaut is also an accomplished mat artist. He is known as one of the strongest middleweights in the game, especially across the shoulders. He has unlimited endurance, and has been training for this contest for the last three weeks.

Bad Feeling Exists.

There is a little feeling between the grapplers. When Lou Talaber lost a decision to Parcaut in Iowa recently Parcaut made a certain remark to Meyers after the contest. The Pole has not forgotten it and intends to remind his opponent of it when they get into the ring. At the time of this match, Meyers and his manager, Eddie White, lost a little money on the result, and this has added fuel to the fire of bad feeling.

It will be strictly a championship match. The men have agreed to weigh 160 pounds at 3 o'clock on the day of the contest. They will wrestle twelve rounds to a fall or decision, and the referee will be chosen some time during the week.

LUTZ DONATES 'Q' BOAT TROPHY FOR MAY 30 RACE

The trophy for the championship "Q" series of races to be sailed each year under the auspices of the Jackson Park Yacht club, it was leaned Thursday, has been donated by T. C. Lutz, for years one of Chicago's most enthusiastic yachtmen.

Commodore C. H. J. Thorby will be asked to accept the trophy as soon as the deed of gift is completed and the transfer will probably be made on Decoration day, the official opening date for the summer activities.

The owners of all "Q" boats in this country and Canada will receive a formal invitation to participate in the class championship event.

The yachts of the south side fleet are being fitted out at the South Chicago yards, and all will be in readiness for the Skippers' cup race, May 30.

THREE SOCCER GAMES ON TODAY; ONE CANCELLED

Wet grounds have caused cancellation of the game between Thistles and Rangers in the Chicago Soccer league at 47th avenue and 19th street this afternoon. The three other games will be played as scheduled, Bricklayers traveling to Harvey, while at Bricklayers' field, 35th street and Wentworth avenue, the leading Olympias will tackle Canadian club. The Olympia eleven has not lost a league game, but the Canucks hope to give them their first upset.

The Swedish-Americans will oppose Pullman at 103d street and Corliss avenue.

The All-Stars of the International league will oppose a picked team from the District league at Riverview. Games start at 3 o'clock.

FATHER AND SON ROLL INTO LEAD IN K. OF C. MEET

Mattie Faetz and his son, Leo, rolled into first place in the two-man event at the Knights of Columbus bowling tournament, which will play the final games of its schedule at the Randolph alleys tonight.

The new leaders piled up 1,283 pins, displacing F. Kartheiser and E. Krems, who had been leading with 1,267. Leo showed the way for his dad with 677 pins. Leo also was the top man of the night in the singles, with 636, which is fifth high.

The Commodore Barrys, two time national champions, are reigning supreme in the main event with 2,936, and Jack Lawler has 671 for the best performance in the singles. Leo councell is second to the Barrys with 2,915.

RIFLE CLUB TO MEET CULVER

The Chicago Rifle association has accepted a challenge from Culver Military academy for a picked eight man team dual shoot Saturday on the range on the roof of the Hamilton club. The local organization accepted Culver's conditions of 50 foot distance, ten shots each prone and sitting positions with iron sights.

JOHNNY DUNDEE, THE BUSY SCRAPPER

WILLIE JACKSON HASN'T BEEN ABLE TO STAND DUNDEE OFF SINCE THE TIME HE KNOCKED JOHNNY OUT.
"JOHNNY DUNDEE" WHOSE CAREER AS A SMALL LIGHTWEIGHT HAS BEEN ONE OF THE MARVELS OF THE RING.
R. Edgren

BY ROBERT EDGREN.

JOHNNY DUNDEE has had one of the most remarkable careers known to the ring. The number of his battles runs into the hundreds. For several years fight fans have been watching him and waiting for him to "crack," but he has gone on with undiminished vigor, while nearly all of the youngsters who started with him years ago are out of the same profession entirely. Dundee has been boxing continuously for thirteen years. He began when he was 16.

Dundee's right name is Joseph Carrora. He was born at Sharkai, Italy, Nov. 22, 1893. He is 5 feet 4½ inches tall and weighs 130 pounds. Although this is his top weight, and he has only gradually come up from the featherweight class during several years, he has fought all the best lightweights, as often as he could get matches with them.

Passes Up Fish Business.

When Johnny was 16 years old his father, the elder Carrora, wanted John to go into business with him in a fish market in New York, but Johnny couldn't see business. He thought boxing would pay more. And he was right. As a fighter he has cleaned up a fortune running into several hundred thousand dollars. As a fish merchant he might have accumulated a bunch of debts.

Joseph Carrora started out with a manager of about his own age, Scotty Monteith, a real Scotchman. It was Scotty who gave young Carrora the Scotch name, Johnny Dundee.

Montieth Boosting Pest.

Having named Dundee, Montieth began to spend all his spare time around the newspaper offices in New York, telling the sporting editors what a great little fighter Dundee was. He had a pet name for Dundee. He called him the "Scotch Wop." Night after night Montieth used to come into my office and talk about his fighting "Scotch Wop" until I grew weary of hearing Dundee's name, and hoped some one would wallop him and stop Montieth's eternal boosting.

Then, as Dundee made good in fight after fight, meeting the best men in his class and attacking them all with the same dauntless audacity, like all the rest of the sporting writers, I began to see Dundee fight and rooted for him to win. There was something about Dundee's fighting that made every one fancy him. He wasn't afraid of anybody. From the start they all looked alike to Dundee. He didn't care whether they were wallopers or fancy boxers. He met them all in the same way, and if he didn't whip them he at least gave them a mighty exciting evening.

Unequaled Energy.

In a good many years following ring events I never saw another fighter with Johnny Dundee's endless store of energy. From the start he had an unusual fighting style—one that seemed likely to burn him out in two or three years. He danced about constantly—always in motion, and was usually going ahead. His dancing steps weren't to the rear, as with most dancing boxers. Dundee was a fighter. He had a curious trick of crouching low and moving in with his jaw unprotected to draw the enemy's fire.

He had a quick eye. As soon as a blow started for his jaw he'd drop his head a trifle lower, or moved forward and a little to one side instead of pulling back in the orthodox way. This made his rival miss, and left Dundee within easy countering range. It was a puzzling maneuver and fooled them all. Even some of the greatest boxers in the country, knowing all about Dundee's bobbing, tantalizing style, practicing ways to get him, were unable to catch him squarely with a damaging punch. And when Dundee was hit hard on the chin he only fought twice as fast and hit twice as often in the flurry that followed.

No Sign of Cracking.

With his tireless, constant movement in every fight, it seemed Dundee must burn up that speed and vitality of his, just as a sprinter runs himself out by entering too many races. Five years ago I was watching Dundee for some sign of cracking. He hasn't shown it yet. In 1917 it looked as if at last Dundee had begun to slip, when Willie Jackson caught him with a right hand smash flush on the chin in the first round and knocked him out, cold.

But to the astonishment of all the fight followers in the east, Dundee came right back without the slightest impairment of his confident spirit and won a row of battles. He fought Jackson again and tore into him like a wildcat for ten rounds, outfighting him all the way.

The list of great fighters who have been unable to solve Dundee's fighting style is as long as your arm.

In the last two years Dundee has fought Lightweight Champion Benny Leonard half a dozen times and Willie Jackson more than that, besides a great number of other slugging lightweight "contenders," and he hasn't shown a sign yet of losing either his speed or his endless store of stamina. Dundee has quite a lot of boxing skill, but his speed and strength and aggressiveness account for most of his ring success.

Wins Junior Title.

Last year he won the "junior lightweight championship"—a new class invented for Dundee, and a lot of other little fellows who were a few pounds under the lightweight limit—by taking a decision over George Chaney on a foul. It looks as if Dundee can defend that title for several years to come.

HAMILTON CLUB ACTS TO SUPPORT MOVEMENT FOR ILLINOIS BOXING

THE Hamilton club went on record yesterday as being in favor of boxing in the state, and will lend its support to the city athletic commission's move toward favorable legislation to provide a boxing law.

In a letter sent to H. H. Maylett, secretary of the city athletic commission, S. T. Meservey, president of the club, stated: "We believe that boxing, properly regulated and controlled, helps to dehonest competition, and has its appeal to thousands of ex-service men, for whom boxing was a part of their regular curriculum in physical training. We are very glad to coöperate with the commission in this move."

Woods and Waters by BOB BECKER

THE GRAND OLD GAME OF BAIT SHOOTIN'.

THERE are probably more bait casters in this country than any other class of fishermen, and when some of the old timers begin talking about this game, the one that brings the scrappy small mouth and the old lunkers of big mouth bass right up to the top of the water with a wallop at the bait, a fellow gets a bad attack of "angloitis," the deadly spring fishing fever. Illinois fishermen are already beginning to feel the effects of this fever, as they will be able to start casting within a few weeks if the weather man behaves. Illinois is about the only state in this neck of the woods that hasn't a law restricting early spring fishing when the bass are spawning and anglers in other states have to wait several months before they can get into action.

The crack baiter is an active, alert fellow and because he is constantly on the move covering lots of water he has more chances of bagging his quarry than the fisherman who trolls or still fishes. The bait slinger who is on his job is always poking around and shooting an attractive lure, more or less (sometimes it seems mostly less) at every likely spot where a bass is apt to be hanging around. And that's one reason why bait casting is so popular with a great host of anglers—there is no sitting still in a boat all day waiting for some genial fish to bite. No lazy trolling around. Bait shootin' means action, a fellow has to keep on the jump and at the same time try to get the fish to jump.

In this game of bait casting getting the fish is not the whole fun. At least that's the way it strikes us. For instance, one day last summer a pal and I started from camp at sunup for a spot on the Chippewa river, a great bass and muskie stream. We fished over beautiful water all that morning, using some fifty-seven varieties of lures from frogs to home made doodle bugs and nary a fish could we stir up At noon we took a swim in the old Chip, devoured a fine lunch and then hit the road for another spot along the river. We fished that afternoon until sundown—no fish. It was after dark when we cooked another meal on the bank of a tiny lake (which we did not fish), and arrived home tired, but not without enthusiasm. Although a fishless day, very much so in fact, I consider that day one of the most profitable and enjoyable I have ever spent, as it was a day outdoors, with a good pal and in a new country. That's the bait casting game over and over, and you sure can crowd enough action to suit any one in this sport.

IZAAK WALTON CLUB LUNCHEON WELL ATTENDED

The expansion of the Chicago chapter of the Izaak Walton club was evidenced by the large number of members who attended a luncheon yesterday in honor of George N. Mansfield, superintendent of fisheries and game for the state of Indiana, and A. D. Hosthous, superintendent for Missouri, at Hotel Sherman.

From a membership of fifty-four on Jan. 14, when the Izaak Walton League of America was launched with the idea of preserving game fish, clubs throughout the country have been forming, and 411 members attended the luncheon.

The Fishermen's Club of Chicago last night held its fifteenth annual banquet at the Auditorium hotel, with Douglas Malloch as toastmaster. Prof. Henry B. Ward of Illinois university talked on salmon fishing; Dr. H. J. Morlan took his auditors verbally to the coast of Labrador; Capt. Norman Allan Imrie of Culver academy told some piscatorial anecdotes, and Maj. Thorton Anthony Mills described the angling offered by the streams along "the open road." Hundreds of anglers from five middle western states were present.

West secured a grand slam.

The bidding was the feature in this deal. A two suit hand is almost always better played as a suit declaration than at no-trumps, and the player with such a holding should take his partner out of a no-trump, even though his hand promises good support for the original bid. Bid the higher suit first and switch to the lower if necessary.

Although holding nine trumps and all the honors, the declarer would have lost the slam had he drawn the adversaries' trumps.

The club suit in dummy was the best proposition in the deal, and in order to make that the declarer must spend his own trumps prodigally while conserving the trumps in dummy. Not until the adversaries were out of clubs did a trump lead become desirable.

Complicated Play.

The next deal is more complicated, although teaching the same lesson.

THE BIDDING.

West dealt and bid one spade, north passed, east bid two spades, and the bidding closed. North had the original lead.

West secured ten tricks.

Forced to choose from several bad openings, north selected the worst.

The lead from a suit of ace and one other is very popular against a declared trump and almost always expensive.

After the second trick the only important problem for the declarer was what to do with his two remaining trumps. The play of the deal shows how this problem was solved, and the declarer would have won the game even had there been three trumps in the south hand.

ROLLER SKATERS IN TITLE RACES; FITZ IN CHARGE

The world's championship professional roller skating tournament will be held at Riverview April 3 to 9, according to announcement yesterday by Julian T. Fitzgerald. Fitzgerald, who is president of the Western Skating association and the International Skating union, will manage the tournament, which is the first to be held since 1916.

The meet is sanctioned by the Nationel League of Roller Skaters, and leading professional racers of the country will compete. It is the first time since 1916 that "Fitz" has been connected with the roller game. When the sanction for the races was awarded to Riverview, Manager I. M. Seitz induced the king of the ice skating sport to come back and put on the tournament.

Fitzgerald has selected Edward A. Mahlke, secretary of the I. S. U., and George Smith of the W. S. A. board of control as his assistants.

DERBY PATRONS TO SEE MOORE IN ACTION MAY 12

TRIBUNE DECISIONS

Decisions of The Tribune boxing representatives are:

At Boston, Mass.—Jock Malone beat Augie Aatner [10].

At New York—Mel Cogan beat Jimmy Hanlon [12].

At Philadelphia—Joe Welsh stopped Jack Labelle [5]. Frankie Conway and Bobby Burman fought draw [8].

Pal Moore, local bantamweight, yesterday accepted terms of Promoter Hevrin of Louisville to box a suitable opponent May 12, the night berore the Kentucky Derby.

Last year Moore boxed Joe Lynch, the bantam champion, on the night before the racing classic. The bout drew a capacity gate, and Moore is gambling with the promoter by taking a percentage with no guarantee. Harry Hochstadter, manager of Moore, told the promoter to get any boxer in the bantamweight class, Champion Johnny Buff preferred.

Herbie Schaeffer, whom Pal is scheduled to meet at Peoria this Thursday, and Moore are training every day at the Arcade gym. Moore did only light work yesterday, but will settle down to hard training tomorrow. Schaeffer is working every day with Jack Blackburne. According to Tom Jones, matchmaker for the Peoria club, the contest is attracting a lot of attention in and around Peoria.

The boxing show to be staged by the Blackhawk and Gen. George Crook posts of the American Legion, at Fort Sheridan, March 31, has been postponed until April 6. Pal Moore and Harold Smith in one bout and Jimmy Nikol and Kid Stahr in another will meet in the double windup.

Bill Tate, colored heavyweight champion, left yesterday for Memphis, where he will meet Sam Langford in an eight round bout tomorrow night. Kid Howard, Tate's manager, will leave today.

CARPENTIER O. K.; WILLING TO BOX DEMPSEY AGAIN

PARIS, March 25.—[United Press.]—Georges Carpentier is just as sound today as before Jack Dempsey hit him, in the opinion of his manager, Francois Descamps.

"It is what you call the bunk to say that Georges has tuberculosis and hurt insides since Jack Dempsey hit him," he said. "Georges is the healthiest now since he has recovered from the trouble with his neck. Fight Dempsey? Sure, if the public wants it. We already have a proposition with a London promoter for a return bout with the champion."

P. O. BASEBALL MEN TO MEET.

A meeting of postoffice employés interested in baseball has been called by Archie Bauman for 8 p. m. tomorrow in the oak room, Great Northern hotel.

TRAINING CAMPS

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., March 25.—George Gibson's Pirates are settling down to the real mid-season form. The regulars jumped on the yannigans yesterday for a 3 to 2 victory. It was a nip and tuck battle all the way. Charlie Grimm's homer settled all arguments. Stuffy Stewart, his neck bandaged for carbuncles, covered the dizzy corner in creditable fashion. Rabbit Maranville, the Pirates' clown, slammed the pellet for a triple.

New Orleans, La., March 25.—Miller Huggins, Yankee manager, today handed releases to Glenn Killinger, D. C. Grigsby, Gomez Wilson, Ed. Neusel, Bernie Culp, and Camp Skinner, recruits. A string was attached to Killinger, Penn State's football star of last season. He goes to the Jersey City International league team. It all depends upon Glenn's ability to improve whether he reaches the Polo grounds.

Eagle Pass., Tex., March 25.—Connie Mack has decided to keep his first squad here over the week-end. Connie's second team steamed out today to fill an engagement with San Antonio tomorrow. Tuesday the first team starts a series with the Cardinals.

Marlin Springs, Tex., March 25.—McGraw's second string of Giants arrived here today for a two game series with the Indianapolis Association club. The second string Giants are under the leadership of Dick Kinsella, McGraw's scout, and father of Bob Kinsella, Tris Speaker's outfielder.

Tampa, Fla., March 25.—Walter Johnson, Washington Senator's pitching ace, took his first workout for ten days today. He reported complete recovery from his attack of influenza. Manager Milan likes the work of Brillheart, a recruit pitcher.

San Antonio, Tex., March 25.—Before breaking camp here last night for Dallas, Tex., to resume the series with the White Sox, Manager McGraw of the Giants, let it be known that San Antonio would not see his boys in training next year. John likes the ozone offered by Pasadena, Cal., and also the prospective gate receipts. Phil Douglas trotted along with a new contract in his pocket.

Charleston, S. C., March 25.—Ty Cobb's Tigers have five victories to their credit, administered to the Rochester team of the International league. The teams were here today for another tilt, in which Harry Heilmann got one of his famous triples.

Orange, Tex., March 25.—The stove league here has gone into executive session again, following the evacuation of Branch Rickey's Cardinals. Bill Doak, pitcher with a sore arm, and Johnny Lavan, shortstop, on sick list, are the only two left behind. Both will recuperate before following the trail to Houston and Galveston.

Pensacola, Fla., March 25.—Lee Fohl's Browns milled around the station here today, until they got their sense of direction and then headed for the lot where they will stage a three day series with the Pensacola team. They came in from Mobile, Ala., after breaking camp there.

Dallas, Tex., March 25.—Joe Sewell, Indian shortstop, turned his knee in yesterday's game with the Dallas team of the Texas league, running out a triple. Stuffy McInnis, Speaker's new first sacker, late of the Red Sox, drove over three tallies with a single, a double, and a sacrifice. The Indians made thirteen hits and five errors, winning, 12 to 7.

Leesburg, Fla., March 25.—Roy Leslie, the Phillies' new first sacker, was crowned hero yesterday, when with the bases loaded he swung for the circuit. A 12 to 3 victory resulted over the Florida university team.

ALL GRAIN PRICES CONTINUE ON WAY TO LOWER LEVELS

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Pressure continues to be put on the wheat market, and with further liquidation in the May prices dropped to a new low for the week. A good class of buying was in evidence on the decline, but the finish was with net losses of 1⅛@2c. Corn and oats were affected by the weakness in wheat and closed with corn off 1@1⅛c and oats off ⅜@½c. Rye was ⅛c higher to ¼c lower.

Liquidation was on in all grains throughout the week with the highest figures made early and the lowest toward the last. Stop loss orders were uncovered on the way down and at the close wheat showed a decline of 3⅛c to 8½c, as compared with the previous week, while corn was 2⅜c to 4⅛c lower; oats, 1⅜c to 2⅛c, and rye, 4c to 5⅛c lower. Provisions were unsettled with lard 17½c to 22½c lower, and ribs unchanged to 2½c higher.

Prices Lower All Day.

At no time were wheat prices as high as the close of the previous day. Houses with eastern connections were free sellers of May and at the inside figures showed a drop of around 2c from the finish on Friday. At one time the May-July spread was only 14c, but it widened out later. Good support developed on the break and short covering caused a sharp rally at one time, but it failed to hold and considerable week-end evening up was under way at the last.

Sentiment among commission houses and local traders in the main is bearish. Export demand is not sufficiently large to take some of the weight of cash grain off the market and the outlook for the new crop, while somewhat spotted in some states, in general is regarded as favorable. Expectations are for relatively small world's shipments for the week, due to a falling off in the Australian clearances. Liverpool closed ¼d to ½d lower.

Corn Hits New Low.

Stop loss orders were caught in corn which broke into new ground on the present downturn, May getting under 58c for the first time since it left 70⅛c. Sentiment remains very bearish, due to the pressure of the cash grain. Export demand showed improvement with a good business done via the gulf, with St. Louis and Kansas City exporters buying at Omaha.

Oats were affected by the action of other grains and ranged lower. Shipping demand continues slow.

Trade in rye was rather light, and while there was buying by houses with seaboard connections and reports of a liberal export business, the break in wheat led to general selling and a decline.

Provisions Make Gains.

Strength in Liverpool and an upturn in hogs was responsible for a good bulge in provisions, and while the finish was at the low point net gains were 12½c on lard and 30@32½c on ribs. Cash trade was dull. Realizing sales made the reaction toward the last. Packing of hogs at Chicago for the summer season to date aggregates 458,000, against 417,000 last year. Prices follow:

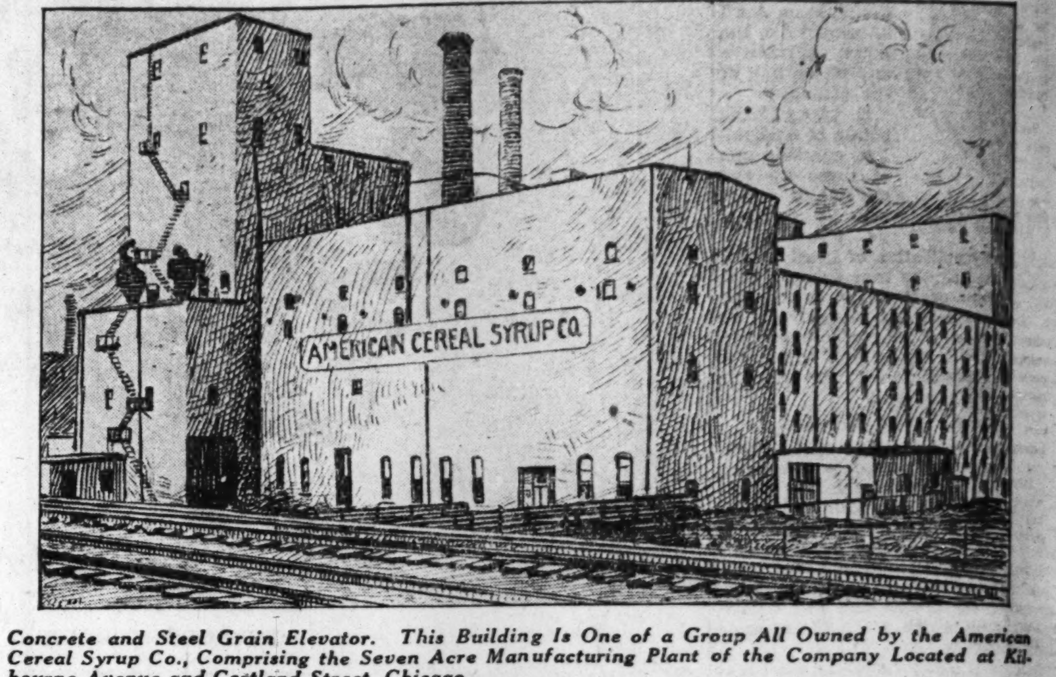
INTEREST PAYABLE JULY 1 AND JAN. 1.



AMERICAN CEREAL SYRUP CO.

Concrete and Steel Grain Elevator. This Building Is One of a Group All Owned by the American Cereal Syrup Co., Comprising the Seven Acre Manufacturing Plant of the Company Located at Kilbourne Avenue and Cortland Street, Chicago.

Interest Rates: Are falling rapidly. These are the very highest class First Mortgage Gold Bonds, and under present prevailing interest rates should not be offered to yield more than six per cent. The only reason that these bonds are now offered at 8% is because the issue of $300,000.00 was authorized in the Fall of 1920 and the bonds are dated January 1, 1921.

At that time 8% was the customary rate of interest on high class securities such as this. $75,000.00 of the issue was sold and the bonds were then withdrawn from the market.

It has now been decided to sell the balance of the issue, so we are closing out these bonds at the same old interest rate. You will in all probability never again have such an opportunity as this (especially for small investments from $100 up) for many years to come.

Nature of Business: The American Cereal Syrup Co. is an Illinois corporation and was originally established in January, 1911. The present company is a continuation of the Acme Malting Co., under which name the business was conducted up to 1920. The company is engaged in the manufacture of pure food products, refined sugar syrups and Acarose; the latter is a cereal sugar syrup made from selected corn and barley under a new process and without the use of chemicals. It is higher in food value than cane sugar or glucose and, in fact, is the most healthful type of sugar known. The products of the company are used by candy manufacturers, ice cream factories, canners. The demand for these products is probably 100 times the total capacity of the company, so that there is no lack of selling opportunity at any time. In fact, the profits of the company depend almost wholly upon the capacity of the plant, as all goods are practically sold before they are made. In addition to the main products the company also makes by-products such as protein feed, corn oil, etc. The process used for the manufacture of these products is controlled by the company.

Security: The assets of the company are valued at $1,159,917.58. The illustration shown herewith is a concrete and steel elevator with a capacity of 250,000 bushels. This elevator is operated in connection with the manufacturing units at the plant and equips the company for the most economical and profitable operation. This elevator ALONE would RENT for enough to pay interest and principal of this entire bond issue. The company's plant occupies a tract of approximately 7 acres, having a frontage of 528 feet on Kilbourne Avenue and 633 feet on Cortland Street, Chicago, and in the rear has access to the Chicago & Northwestern Belt and the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railways. Four street car lines are within easy walking distance of the property and you can very easily satisfy yourself as to the security represented by this real estate.

Legal and Technical Features: The valuations of the various assets of the company (shown in detail in a Balance Sheet as of February 28, 1922) are arrived at through the following sources:

Appraisal by Manufacturers' Appraisal Co. and Chicago Real Estate Board.

Trust Deed and all legal proceedings under the supervision of Adams, Childs, Bobb & Wescott. Business survey by Arthur E. Anderson & Co. Accountants' reports by Price, Waterhouse & Co.

We do not believe that any more dependable authorities or reliable appraisers could be obtained than the ones named above.

Use of This Money: The proceeds from the sale of this bond issue are to be used for the construction of additions to the syrup manufacturing equipment and to provide additional working capital to take care of the company's rapidly increasing business; also to retire current indebtedness incurred in the construction of a new power house and other buildings.

Sale and Borrowing Value of These Bonds: The conditions under which these bonds are issued provide for a sinking fund of $30,000 to be set aside each year for a period of 10 years. As the entire issue of these bonds is due January 1, 1931, it can readily be understood that a sinking fund of $30,000 per year set aside for the re-purchase of bonds will enable the company to meet emergency cases in which a bondholder wishes to cash his bonds prior to the date of their becoming due. In fact, it is anticipated that the company will be in the market to re-buy these bonds and that the sale for any bonds that you may hold can very easily be effected at any time. The value of these bonds as a borrowing security should be very close to their face value with any bank in Chicago or vicinity.

Provisions for Extra Protection: All of the properties are covered to their full insurable value by fire insurance. These policies are payable to and deposited with the Chicago Title and Trust Company as Trustee for the protection of bondholders. Provision is also made for regular audits of the company's books by certified public accountants. It is further provided that the company can pay no dividends until all interest and sinking fund requirements have been complied with.

Officers: Robert H. Lanyon, President and Treasurer.
W. M. Lanyon, Vice President.
W. P. Rice, Secretary and General Manager.

Each of these gentlemen is a specialist in his department, and all represent the highest type of successful business men.

Future of the Business: The average earning of this company for the year 1916 to 1919 applicable to interest charges was $48,000.00 per year. In 1920 and 1921 automatic machinery was installed at an expense of over $350,000.00. These improvements have quadrupled the possible output at the plant, and it is now anticipated that the plant will show a profit in excess of $350,000.00 per year. This is the net profit after deducting all operating expenses and is the amount available for interest, sinking fund and dividends.

How to Invest in These Bonds: Mail your check or call at our office in the Stock Exchange Building at 30 N. La Salle Street. We will be pleased to give full information to any one who is thinking of investing—whether $100.00 or $100,000.00, and we have all the records in our offices of the various valuations, assets, audits, etc., of the American Cereal Syrup Co. Will You Be Caught Napping?

ONCE before we have had a period parallel to the period 1914 to 1922. For eight years history has been repeating itself with amazing precision.

The panic when war was declared, the war boom, the reaction when peace was made, the post-war boom followed by a violent depression—all these occurred once before just as they did in 1914-1922.

Then came a 2-year period corresponding to the two years just ahead of us. If history continues to repeat itself, then next year and the year after will be very different from general expectations and thousands of business men will again be caught napping.

Now is the time to plan. Do you want the full facts, together with many others of equal importance and interest?

Today's call money rate reached the year's low 3 per cent quotation. No lower figure has been touched since the spring of 1918, and in fact a 2½ per cent rate was quoted freely today outside the stock exchange. What was of more significance than the demand loan rate, the market for thirty day secured loans fell to 4¼ per cent and for sixty days to 4½, the year's previous minimum having been 4¾ and the new rate being the lowest since the summer of 1917.

WORLD'S·GRAIN MARKET·NEWS

Pressure was put on the grain markets, especially wheat and corn, by bearish interests as well as by scattered local longs. There has been heavy scattered liquidation in wheat and the opinion expressed by a number of traders at the last was that there had been enough decline for the time being. One large operator who has been bearish all week said at the last that he looked for more selling and a further decline on Monday. A larger short interest has been created than the market is said to have had of late, a liberal percentage of which is said to be for eastern traders.

Most of the selling of corn early and toward the last was attributed to local interests, part of which was taken back at the last around 57⅞@58c for May. May corn was weaker than the other months, and carrying charges are expected to increase. Elevator interests are selling more corn to go to store for delivery on May sales than they are for shipment. One house sold 100,000 bu yesterday, making 200,000 bu in two days. No. 3 mixed corn was 4 to 4¼c under May in the sample market. Most of the trade is bearish on corn and oats.

Seaboard exporters had large buying orders in the market for May rye and found offerings so light at times that they stopped buying to prevent a big advance. Buying was said to be against export sales of 500,000 bu to Norway.

With shipments of wheat from Chicago of 387,000 bu, or 140,000 bu more than the receipts, and with oat shipments 342,000 bu larger than the arrivals, there should be a reduction in stocks the last week. As only 9,000 bu more corn arrived than was shipped, little change in the stocks is expected. Holdings of grain on track here are normal, 798 cars on Friday morning, including 429 cars at the elevators and 369 cars on track. An average of 270 cars were unloaded during the week.

Expectations are that oats are to be moved more freely from interior elevators in Illinois and Iowa this week. When country roads dry up a little, more corn is expected.

Frank Cheatle, the Hulburd, Warren-Chandler traveling man, after a trip over northern central Illinois, says acreage in winter wheat there is larger than usual and the crop is in fine condition.

While Australia has exported 39,000,000 bu wheat since Jan. 1, it is estimated that 60,000,000 bu remain to be cleared. Exports for the week were 1,496,000 bu, including 640,000 bu to non-European countries.

Sales of around 700,000 bu corn are said to have been made from St. Louis to the gulf for export in the last two days out of total stocks of 1,400,000 bu. St. Louis and Kansas City exporters were after corn at Omaha and took 100,000 bu.

Supplies of wheat on ocean passage are estimated to have decreased around 2,000,000 bu for the week and are 66,000,000 bu. Foreign news is rather mixed. Switzerland has to buy 1,100,000 bu wheat before the end of the season. Winter wheat and rye crop in Holland have been damaged by frost.

World's shipments of wheat for the week are estimated at around 13,500,000 bu, or equal to the average weekly requirements, compared with 17,528,000 bu the previous week and 10,602,000 bu last year.

"In Marion, Hancock, Rush, Decatur, Bartholomew, Jackson, Johnson, and Shelby counties wheat generally is in good condition," wired Logan & Bryan's crop expert from Indianapolis, Ind. "More spotted and uneven then in the north. Will be practically no abandoned acreage in territory covered. Many farmers in fields plowing and disking."

CASH·GRAIN NEWS

A good export business was under way at the seaboard with sales of 500,000 bu wheat, 500,000 bu corn, and 500,000 bu rye reported, Norway taking the latter. The United Kingdom was said to have taken a cargo of Manitobas for July shipment.

Domestic shipping sales were 40,000 bu wheat, 70,000 bu corn, 25,000 bu oats, and 7,000 bu barley.

Cash wheat prices at Chicago were unchanged as compared with the May, with No. 2 hard ½@1c under. No. 2 red was nominally May price to 1c over. Receipts 5 cars. Outside markets easier. Omaha 1@3c lower; St. Louis unchanged to 2c lower.

Offerings of cash corn were not large. Sample values ½@1c lower, in sympathy with futures. Basis was about unchanged, with No. 2 mixed 2¾c, yellow 1½@2¼c, and white 1½@2¼c under May. Receipts 132 cars. Outside markets ½@1½c lower.

Demand for cash oats remains slow. Sample values were off only ¼@½c. Basis was unchanged, with No. 2 white May to 1½c over and No. 3 white ½@2c under. Receipts 77 cars.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Answers to inquiries are based upon information which THE TRIBUNE believes reliable, fair, and unprejudiced, but beyond the exercise of care in securing such information THE TRIBUNE assumes no responsibility.

Invest Through Reputable Firms.

This department has always urged its readers to purchase securities only through well established reputable houses. The importance of this admonition cannot be too strongly insisted upon for the protection of the investor. It is never safe to deal with a brokerage or investment firm wthout knowing them to be entirely reputable. Some of the long established firms are so well known through a long period of honorable dealing that their reputation is unquestionable. There are others, not as long in the business, or who are so small as to be little known, who may be perfectly reliable and safe to do business with. The investor contemplating doing business with any concern about whose reputation he is not entirely sure should ask the firm for bank references. Any financial house doing a legitimate business will be glad to give bank references and invite its clients to inquire at the banks as to its credit and general standing. If a firm is unwilling to give such references, it is wise to have no dealings with it.

The fact that a firm is not a member of one of the principal stock exchanges does not necessarily mean that it is not a thoroughly reliable concern. On the other hnad, if a firm is a member of the Chicago or New York stock exchanges, or those of the important cities, it is reasonably safe to suppose that such a firm will deal honorably, as the requirements for membership are so high, the rules for business conduct so strict, and the supervision of members so careful as to make the practice of fraud at least unlikely.

In this connection it is worthy of note that among the large number of recent failures of brokerage and investment houses practically none belonged to the New York or Chicago stock exchanges. The big exception to this was the firm of Wagner & Co. This concern was a member of both. But let us see what has happened. The firm is offering to pay its customers dollar for dollar. The plan consists of an immediate payment on all claims in cash of 50 per cent of their amount, the balance to be paid in noninterest bearing notes, which will be retired as the slow assets of the firm are sold. It is claimed that it can do this successfully if not compelled to dispose of all its assets at a sacrifice. The receivers estimate the concern's quick assets at $5,264,000 and the slow assets at $3,742,554, or a total of $9,026,554, against which are liabilities of $8,400,000. The proposed settlement is an entirely fair one and is the best proof that the concern was operating its business on legitimate lines.

FINANCIAL NOTES

Wall street was inclined to look with a high degree of favor on the remarks of E. H. Gary with relation to steel prices and profits and the course which the corporation would follow in its handling of the situation. The deduction most generally drawn from Mr. Gary's setting forth of the case is that the low point of steel prices has definitely been passed, at least for a long time to come. The Illinois Steel company has advanced its price on bars, shapes, and plates to $1.60 per hundred pounds, f. o. b. mill. The Inland Steel company, an independent concern, has made a similar price. This is an advance of $2 a ton. The Carnegie Steel company made a similar advance to $1.50 a hundred pounds, f. o. b. Pittsburgh.

The Pere Marquette railroad, which has been the center of wide interest lately on account of the rumors of an impending merger with the Ann Arbor, is scheduled to consider action on the 5 per cent cumulative preferred stock on April 5. This is also the regular quarterly period meeting for action on the 5 per cent prior preference preferred, and while there is still 5 per cent unpaid on the cumulative preferred, it is believed that in preference to paying any part of this the directors will be disposed to begin current payments with the idea of preventing the present accumulation from growing. The dividend has been cumulative since Jan. 1, 1919, but as 10 per cent was declared Dec. 7, 1921, covering 1919 and 1920, the 1921 disbursement remains unpaid. The preliminary income account for 1921 showed earnings to have covered the entire 15 per cent accumulation to Dec. 31, 1921.

Attention is once more directed to a spread which sometimes develops between "A" and "B" stocks of the Bethlehem Steel corporation. At the close yesterday the "A" shares sold at 66 and the "B" shares at 70⅞. So far as the two classes of stock are concerned they are identical with this exception, that the "A" shares carry a voting privilege which the "B" shares do not have. The spread is simply another manifestation apparently of the difference which may be created by speculative paper flavor. The "A" shares are out of the speculative limelight and their inactivity often causes a moderately wide range in bid and asked. The "B" shares, on the other hand, are the medium of speculation in the stock of the Bethlehem company.

Directors of the Manati Sugar company are expected to ask the stockholders to authorize the sale of some $6,000,000 to $8,000,000 of new bonds within the next two or three weeks and conversations already have been held with the bankers about the proposed loan. Manati is now in the midst of its crop season and current needs for cash are large. Production so far is ahead of last year.

Aggregate debits to individual deposit account amounted to $1,011,417,000 compared with $877,445,000 for the corresponding week last year.

The Builders and Merchants State bank, a new concern of which G. Hallbom, vice president of the Union bank of Chicago, is to be president, will be located at the southeast corner of North Clark street and West Foster avenue. The capital stock of the Continental and Commercial Safe Deposit company has been reduced from $6,000,000 to $200,000.

CHICAGO CURB MARKET

The weekly review of F. M. Zeiler & Co. follows:

41 Years 100 Per Cent Safe

"I put aside all anxious fears."

"DREAD OF DISASTER haunted me for twenty years," wrote an investor recently. "I always made what I considered safe enough investments, but they were more or less speculative and every unfavorable turn of the market filled me with apprehension.

"Why, at night I would awake in cold fear that my financial ruin was impending—that my whole investment structure was falling, carrying down my family with it. Market reports in the morning paper often unnerved me for the whole day. A sudden slump would nearly prostrate me, and naturally my health and business suffered.

"Last year—when eighty-two of the leading corporations passed their dividends—I became desperate. 'What,' I asked myself, 'would now be the condition of my family if they had to live on the income from my securities?'

"I realized at last that my investment methods must be changed. 'What is there,' I questioned, 'that is absolutely safe yet pays a high enough rate of interest to enable my family to live in comfort on what I have accumulated?'

"Putting the results of three months of investigation into a sentence, I found one high yielding security—and one only—that has stood secure during wars, panics and depression, without loss, depreciation or delayed payments—the First Mortgage Real Estate Serial Gold Bond, safeguarded by a House of high integrity.

"Having learned this, it did not take me long to decide where to buy my bonds. I found that one house selling these securities has behind it eighty-seven years of experience—that no investor in its bonds has ever lost a dollar. This House is H. O. STONE & CO.

"I converted all my speculative securities into their bonds. I discovered that their bonds pay me a better net income, too, than the tax free bonds I owned. These also I converted, so that I now get a better income with at least equal safety. And so I have put aside all investment worries—all anxious fears."

These bonds are sold in denominations of $1,000, $500, $250 and $100, and pay 7% interest. Also on our Systematic Saving-Investment Plan, 10% down, 10% a month. On monthly payments 7% interest is credited.

8% Perpetual, Full Participating New Type of Preferred Security

Shares Equally in the Big Earnings of the Largest Business of its Kind in the World with a Record of 18 Years' Uninterrupted Growth.

E. E. DAVIS, President and General Manager

A VIRTUAL MONOPOLY BASED ON DEMONSTRATED MERIT AND STRONG BASIC PATENTS

Davis Boring Tools have been adopted as standard shop equipment by 98% of the railroads—both steam and electric—of the United States and Canada, and by 60% of those in foreign countries. This virtual monopoly of the field is due to the unquestioned superiority of our tools and the strong patent protection we enjoy.

From a very small beginning 18 years ago, we have grown steadily, until today our business is the largest of its kind in the world. A total of $10,000.00 is the only outside capital ever invested in the company, and with this small capital we have earned as high as $150,000 in a single year. Our present large and prosperous institution has been built up by the re-investment of profits earned, after paying handsome returns to stockholders.

RAPIDLY GROWING BUSINESS FORCES FACTORY EXPANSION

Notwithstanding the fact that we have increased our manufacturing facilities each year since the company commenced operations, we have frequently been compelled to decline profitable business because our factory has been operating at its maximum capacity.

We now realize that the insistent and constantly increasing demand for our products makes it necessary for us to expand faster than is possible without additional capital; hence the present limited offer of our Participating Preferred Stock.

This is the first time in the history of our company that we have offered our stock for public subscription, all of the stock having been owned by myself and two associates.

ADDITIONAL WORKING CAPITAL POINTS TO ENORMOUS PROFITS

This additional capital will permit us to extend into the Automotive Industry and General Manufacturing and Industrial Field the same successful sales policy which has enabled us to dominate the railroad field. Our opportunities in each of the fields mentioned are greater than in the lines we now control.

The enormous possibilities for this company in the future will be apparent when it is realized that approximately 20% of all machine shop work consists of boring and reaming operations. Although we now serve over 2,900 railroad and industrial shops and plants, this figure represents but a small fraction of the market open to us. Our potential market consists of approximately 106,000 plants, factories and machine shops in whose boring and reaming operations Davis tools are essential.

AN UNUSUAL OPPORTUNITY FOR THE INVESTOR

New investors, now for the first time admitted to an interest in this firmly established, highly successful enterprise, pay no premium for the good will built up in 18 years of consistently maintained growth.

This is a very unusual privilege—an opportunity probably unsurpassed by any investment offering in recent years. Thoughtful investors, who are seeking an ideal combination of safety and large earning power, will take prompt advantage of it.

E. E. DAVIS, President

72% Per Year

The average annual earnings of Davis Boring Tool Company for past six years have been 72% per year on the net worth of the business.

GEORGE W. GOETHALS & COMPANY, THE WORLD FAMOUS INDUSTRIAL ENGINEERS, OF WHICH MAJOR-GENERAL GEORGE W. GOETHALS IS PRESIDENT, REPORTS:

"A careful analysis of the future demand for these tools has been made and it is estimated that future sales will exceed those of the past best years. In our opinion, the business of the Davis Boring Tool Company is one of merit, is competently managed, and possesses possibilities of considerable future development."

WHAT IS THE FACTOR OF SAFETY IN THIS INVESTMENT?

This security has a first lien against all assets of the company, which, according to the present balance sheet, amount to $507,000 tangible property, and after taking into consideration practically $300,000 of depreciation imposed against equipment and operations covering the past three years, makes a total of real worth of over $200 per share back of each share of this stock without giving any value to the extremely valuable patents of this company or placing any value whatsoever on the good will established through eighteen years of operations resulting in this company completely dominating its market.

A FAIR ESTIMATE OF THE PATENTS AND "GOOD WILL"

The Company carries only a nominal value on its extremely valuable patents, and NOTHING on its books for good will. Yet it is plainly evident that owing to the character of the business—its non-competitive basis and firm control of its market through demonstrated merit of its product, protected by basic patents—the good will of the Davis Boring Tool Company is an asset of great present and potential value. Conservatively estimated, the REPLACEMENT VALUE, REPLACEMENT VOLUME, and REPLACEMENT PROFITS of the business already established, with its vastly greater WAITING FIELD, combined with a fair evaluation of the patents, constitute today a value in "good will" of at least TWO MILLION DOLLARS.

TO BOND BUYERS:

Davis Boring Tool 8% Cumulative Full-Participating Preferred partakes of the nature of a bond by reason of its special protective features, and because there is no bond, mortgage or prior lien ahead of it.

Yet it is more desirable than a bond, because, while it has 18 years of prosperous, uninterrupted growth back of it, this security has a much greater earning power than the fixed and limited yield of a bond.

And by its non-callable feature, this security assures a perpetual income, not subject to retirement or conversion, as is the case with practically every bond issue. Bond buyers, therefore, should carefully examine the FACTS underlying this sound and attractive offering, so that they may not miss a very unusual opportunity.

INVESTIGATE!

Any one with money to invest will make a mistake to pass this offering without the fullest investigation. It is so very exceptional that its real merits cannot be realized except through careful examination and verification of the FACTS.

The New York Times.

New York, March 25.—[Special.]—The course of prices on the stock exchange today indicate that ratification of the four power treaty, which occurred after Friday's Wall street closing, had been as fully expected and as "discounted" as had the passing of the soldiers' bonus bill in the house, which occurred on Thursday evening. Wall street has all along been convinced of the purpose, even of the senate opposition, not to permit the failure of the treaty.

Movement of prices on the stock exchange today was meaningless as a whole; it included both net advances and net declines, most of them only fractional. Even the shares of steel companies lost most of the advance made on Friday in connection with the steel corporation's intimations.

Foreign Exchange Is Steady.

From the action of foreign exchange rates today the same deduction might be drawn; that market hardly moved, sterling exchange not going at any time more than ¼ cent above or below the closing rate of Friday. In some respects this would indicate markets which have already adjusted themselves to anticipation of favorable developments in the field of international politics.

If that is so, the incubating plans for the Genoa economic conference may cut more of a figure as an influence hereafter. There are evidently all sorts of possibilities, favorable and unfavorable, surrounding the preparations for that gathering. They are linked, upon one hand, with the continuance of the Lloyd George government, on the other with the attitude of France, and in still another way with the position taken by Russia.

Bond Prices Are Strong.

Today's bond market was in the main distinctly strong. The third Liberty 4¼ per cent bonds went to a new high figure; so did the bonds of Sweden, Norway, Denmark, Belgium, Switzerland, and of various European cities.

Ever since the compilations of exchange of bank checks during February showed the first increase over the preceding year of any month since the autumn of 1920 the weekly showing of this financial weather sign has been watched with interest. In the week just ended these clearings show the substantial increase of 12 to 13 per cent. Taken along with such other familiar indexes of reviving trade as the 18 per cent increase in weekly car loadings over 1921 and the last month's 10 per cent increase in steel production to the highest ratio of capacity reached in two years, the signs of the time are fairly plain.

Bank Reserves Fall Slightly.

The surplus reserves of the New York clearing house banks at the end of the week showed a decrease of $1,589,000, bringing this item down to $47,571,320. Loans are smaller by $10,978,000 and deposits meanwhile have declined $85,693,000. Reserves of member banks in the Federal Reserve bank of that city are less by $12,565,000 and government deposits declined $21,022,000. Details of the statement, with comparisons, follow:

BUSINESS NEWS IN BRIEF

[Copyright: 1922: By Fairchild News Service.]

NEW YORK.—Officials of the National Association of Credit Men expect the impending coal strike to have a damaging effect on credit conditions. Credits of manufacturers, wholesalers, and retailers in coal regions already are upset, it is stated.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa.—"Direct to retailer" hosiery mills are hit by the apparent determination not to stock up until stocks on shelves are moved. However, recently there has been brisk ordering for small quantities from larger cities.

PARIS.—French shoe manufacturers are preparing to exploit their product in the United States market. One large department store company quickly followed up an initial order with a reorder.

NEW YORK.—Good grades of lisle and all white cotton hosiery are creating interest. Manufacturers report satisfactory orders on such lines for June and July delivery. Moderate priced lines are receiving no attention.

NEW YORK.—The Fur Merchants' Association of New York has issued a statement strongly condemning the practice of some raw fur collectors of offering but not paying fancy prices. The association threatens to take the matter up "with the proper authorities."

PARIS.—American merchant buyers again are protesting against French prices. Paris undergarment manufacturers reply that to secure better prices the buyers must come to the market oftener and buy farther ahead. Buyers demanding quick deliveries naturally send prices up, they say.

NEW YORK.—Factors in the women's undergarment market believe merchant buying for May sales will be deferred until as late as possible. March is being a month of only moderate activity and that on immediate delivery basis.

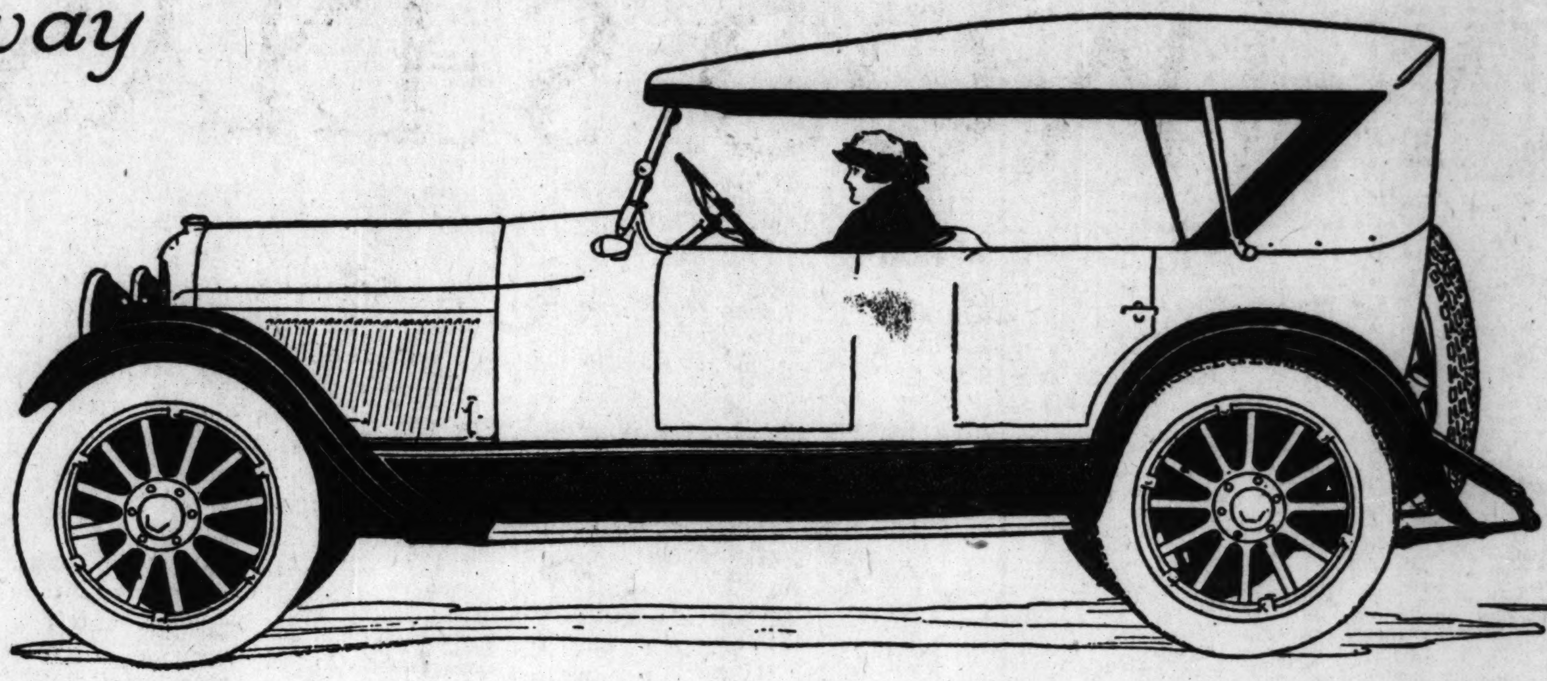
PAIGE

Master of the Highway



Paige Six-44 Touring.
Price $1465 f. o. b. factory.
Other models listed below.

Paige Six-44—the only car near $1465 built by makers of top class cars

There is one point worth considering. Look over the names of those who offer cars at near this popular price. Who are they? What are their ideals, achievements?

Then consider the family from which springs this Paige. You know the famous Paige Six-66—Master of the Highway. You know that the Daytona Model holds all world's stock chassis records from 5 to 100 miles. You know what it has done on hills and roads the country over. It has amazed all who thought fine cars must still be costly.

Remember: this medium size Paige Six-44 at $1465 was conceived on the same drafting board, designed by the same engineers, and is produced by the same organization which builds the champion stock chassis of all America. Naturally, you expect much from this medium size Paige. And you will not be disappointed.

Outwardly you find Six-44 bodies as smart and fashionable as their larger brothers. You observe the same exquisite finish. The same all-leather or fine motor cloth upholstery. Hardware and fittings built for quality cars.

Inwardly you find the same engineering principles throughout. The same type motor, ignition, starter, clutch, transmission. And on the road you find the same smooth, comfortable performance—as near alike as two cars of different size may be.

We ask that you come in or telephone and arrange to drive this Paige Six-44. Look over and try out the Touring Car we show above. Its equal you cannot find within reach of its amazing price—$1465.

After driving 30 days, this 70 point test

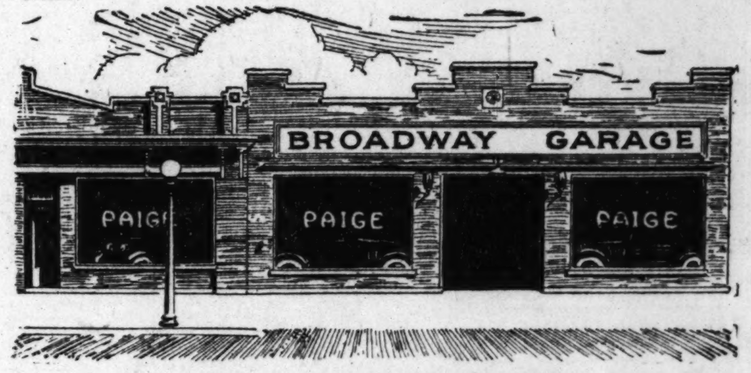
Any car is stiff when it is first driven. It requires about 1,000 miles of travel to work itself in. After that, the engine runs smoother—the car rides easier. But other developments also take place.

For instance, some parts may work a little too loose—others may tighten up. Factory tests cannot detect these slight imperfections. But, if expert attention is given immediately, no harm is done—later repair bills are prevented.

We do not want to take any chances of a Paige needing repairs because such symptoms were neglected. Therefore, thirty days after delivery of a new Paige, we give it a two-day period of tests and adjustments. This is free, and every Paige owner is urged to take advantage of it.

The inspection is thorough—it is made by experts. Over 70 items are checked. Nothing is missed. Everything is put in perfect condition. Twenty to twenty-five hours of labor are required. Our records show that it is worth while. The resulting long mileage without repairs is remarkable.

Our ten Sales and Service Stations in Chicago all offer this super-service. Compare it with your experience elsewhere. Isn't it fine to know that you can buy a car with the certainty of such after-sale care and attention?



IN MELROSE PARK

The Broadway Garage operates this fine, completely equipped Sales and Service Station. It is located in Melrose Park. Other stations are listed below.

If you live in Chicago, a Paige Station is within a reasonable distance of your home. There you will find skillful repairmen, who work with surprising ease and dispatch.

The women and young people of the family can attend to repairs and adjustments at the nearest station. It is absolutely dependable. The 4,000 Paige owners in Chicago find this a great convenience. The man of the house does not need to cut into business hours to have his Paige properly cared for.

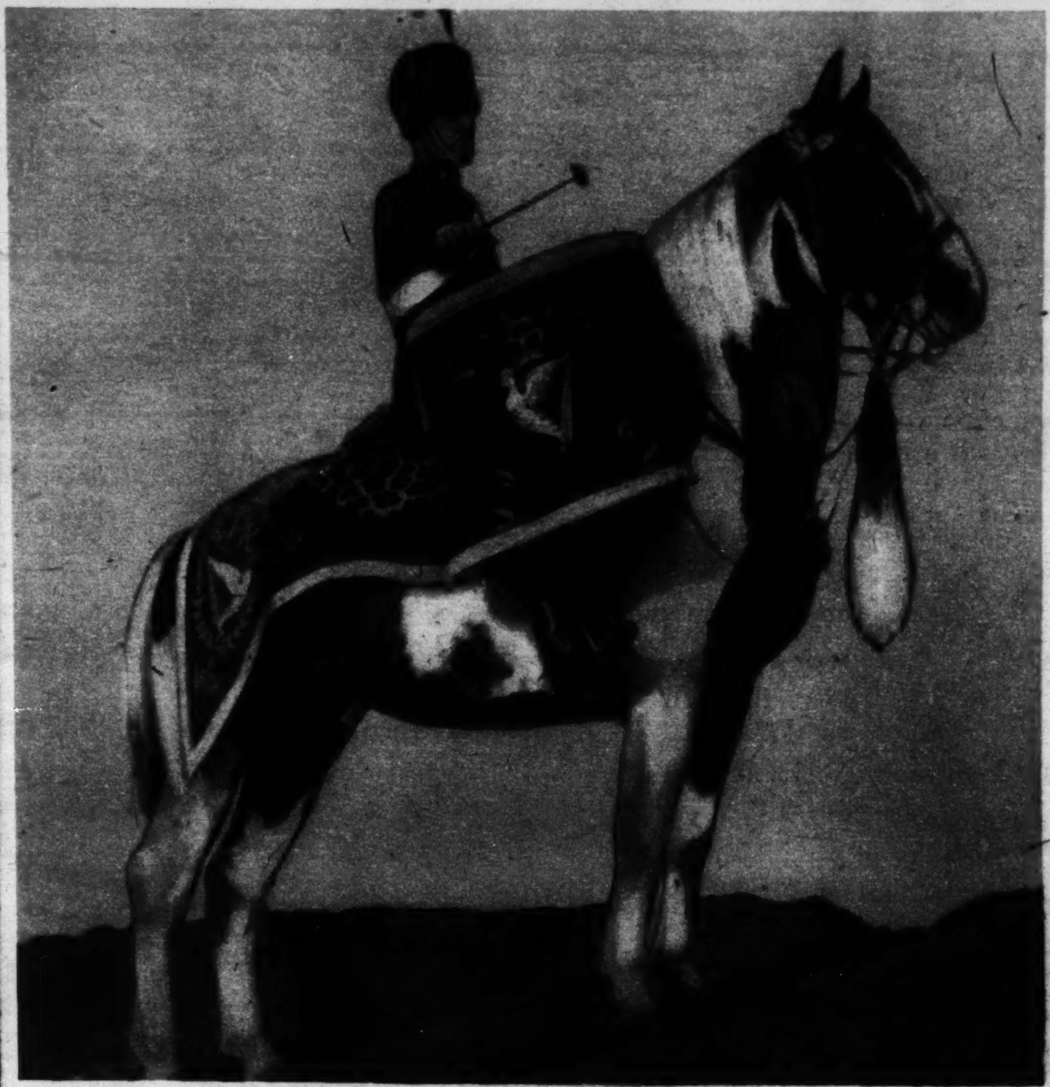
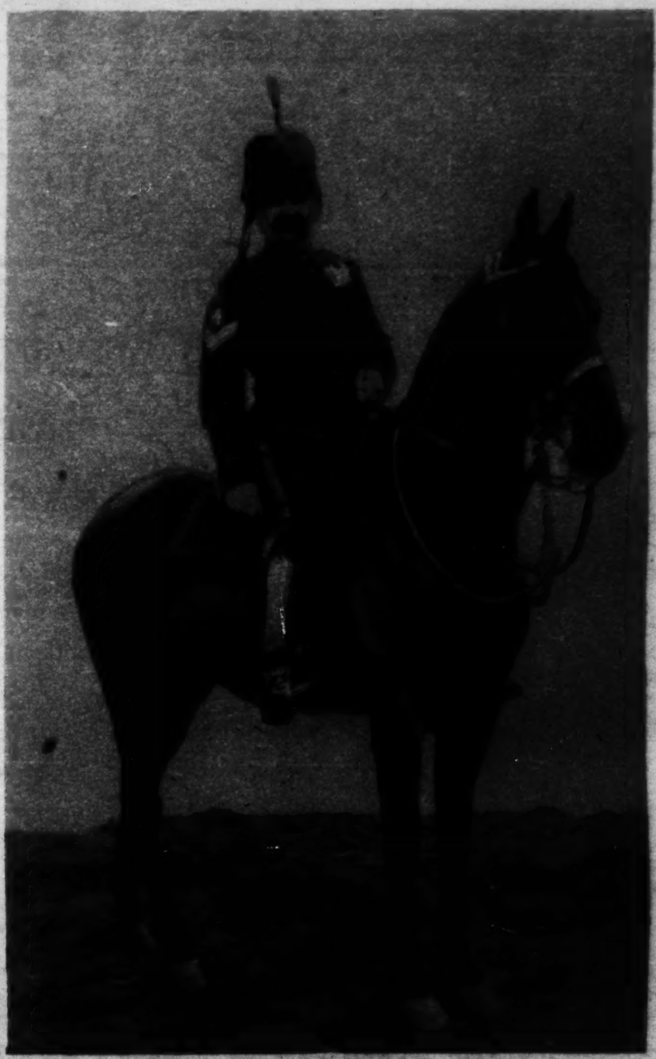
"T·A·P·S"

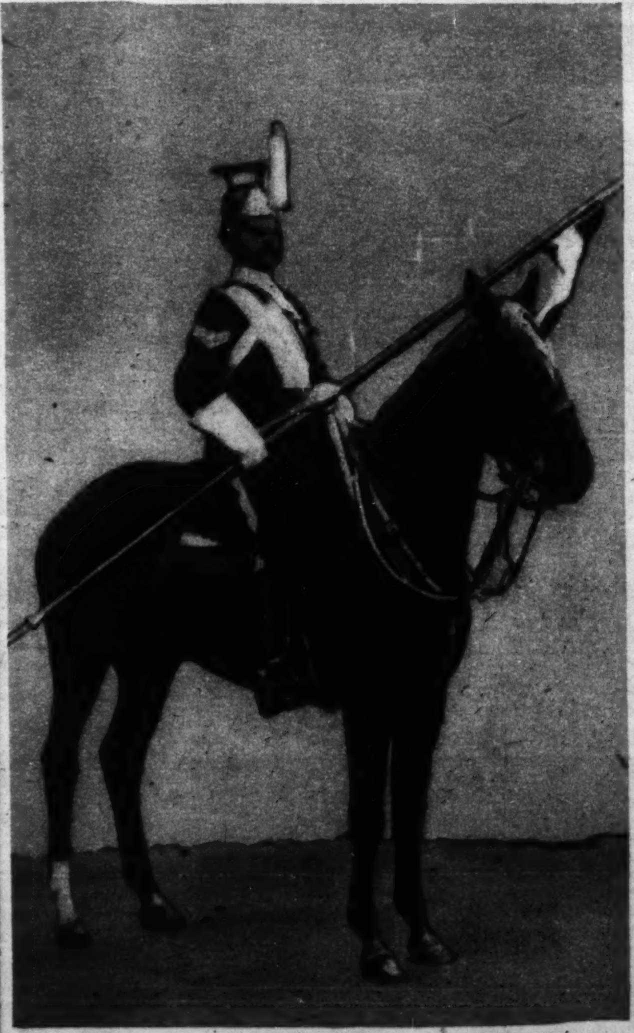
Three famous cavalry regiments that may be disbanded by the British government.



DATING BACK TO 1693, the Eighth King's Royal Irish Hussars, who covered themselves with glory at Leswaree by their brilliant action against the Mahrattas, may now disband. This is the picturesque drum horse of the regiment.



A TYPICAL IRISH HUSSAR and his spirited mount. The hussars comprise one of three renowned cavalry regiments that may disappear from the British army forever.



EVEN THE LANCERS, with their ornate helmets and their long lances of a day gone by, appear to be doomed to go. This trooper is a member of the Seventeenth Lancers.

DRUM HORSE OF THE FOURTH ROYAL IRISH DRAGOON GUARDS is this gallant figure. This historic regiment must also be disbanded, if the recommendations of the Geddes committee are carried out.

How to Shampoo Your Hair Properly

Use plenty of lather. Rub it in thoroughly and briskly with the finger tips

© THE R.L.W.CO.

The final rinsing should leave the hair soft and silky in the water

A Simple, Easy Way to Make Your Hair Beautiful, Keep It Soft and Silky-Bright, Fresh-Looking and Luxuriant

THE beauty of your hair depends upon the care you give it.

Shampooing it properly is always the most important thing.

It is the shampooing which brings out the real life and lustre, natural wave and color, and makes your hair soft, fresh and luxuriant

When your hair is dry, dull and heavy, lifeless, stiff and gummy, and the strands cling together, and it feels harsh and disagreeable to the touch, it is because your hair has not been shampooed properly.

When your hair has been shampooed properly, and is thoroughly clean, it will be glossy, smooth and bright, delightfully fresh-looking, soft and silky.

While your hair must have frequent and regular washing to keep it beautiful, it cannot stand the harsh effect of ordinary soaps. The free alkali in ordinary soaps soon dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle and ruins it.

That is why discriminating women, everywhere, now use Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo. This clear, pure and entirely greaseless product cannot possibly injure, and it does not dry the scalp or make the hair brittle, no matter how often you use it.

If you want to see how really beautiful you can make your hair look, just follow this simple method:

A Simple, Easy Method

FIRST, put two or three teaspoonfuls of Mulsified in a cup or glass with a little warm water. Then wet the hair and scalp with clear warm water. Pour the Mulsified evenly over the hair and rub it thoroughly all over the scalp and throughout the entire length, down to the ends of the hair.

Two or three teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather. This should be rubbed in thoroughly and briskly with the finger tips, so as to loosen the dandruff and small particles of dust and dirt that stick to the scalp.

When thoroughly clean, wet hair fairly squeaks when you pull it through your fingers

When the hair is dry, always give it a good thorough brushing

After rubbing in the rich, creamy Mulsified lather, rinse the hair and scalp thoroughly—always using clear, fresh, warm water.

Then use another application of Mulsified, again working up a lather and rubbing it in briskly as before.

Two waters are usually sufficient for washing the hair, but sometimes the third is necessary.

You can easily tell, for when the hair is perfectly clean, it will be soft and silky in the water, the strands will fall apart easily, each separate hair floating alone in the water, and the entire mass, even while wet, will feel loose, fluffy and light to the touch and be so clean it will fairly squeak when you pull it through your fingers.

Rinse the Hair Thoroughly

THIS is very important. After the final washing, the hair and scalp should be rinsed in at least two changes of good warm water and followed with a rinsing in cold water.

When you have rinsed the hair thoroughly, wring it as dry as you can; finish by rubbing it with a towel, shaking it and fluffing it until it is dry. Then give it a good brushing.

After a Mulsified shampoo you will find the hair will dry quickly and evenly and have the appearance of being thicker and heavier than it is.

If you want to always be remembered for your beautiful, well-kept hair, make it a rule to set a certain day each week for a Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo. This regular weekly shampooing will keep the scalp soft and the hair fine and silky, bright, fresh-looking and fluffy, wavy and easy to manage—and it will be noticed and admired by everyone.

You can get Mulsified at any drug store or toilet goods counter, anywhere in the world. A 4-ounce bottle should last for months.

What a Child's Hair Needs

CHILDREN should be taught, early in life, that proper care of the hair is essential.

Get your children into the habit of shampooing their hair regularly once a week. A boy's hair being short, shampooing takes but a few minutes. For either a boy or a girl, simply moisten the hair with warm water, pour on a little Mulsified and rub vigorously with the tips of the fingers. This will stimulate the scalp, make an abundance of rich, creamy lather and cleanse the hair thoroughly. It takes only a few seconds to rinse it all out.

You will be surprised how this regular weekly shampooing with Mulsified will improve the appearance of the hair and you will be teaching your child a habit that will be appreciated in after-life, for a luxurious head of hair is something every man and woman feels mighty proud of.

Cutting The New Way Saved $7.58 On One Dress Alone

This woman was lucky—but one experience taught her a lesson she did not have to learn twice

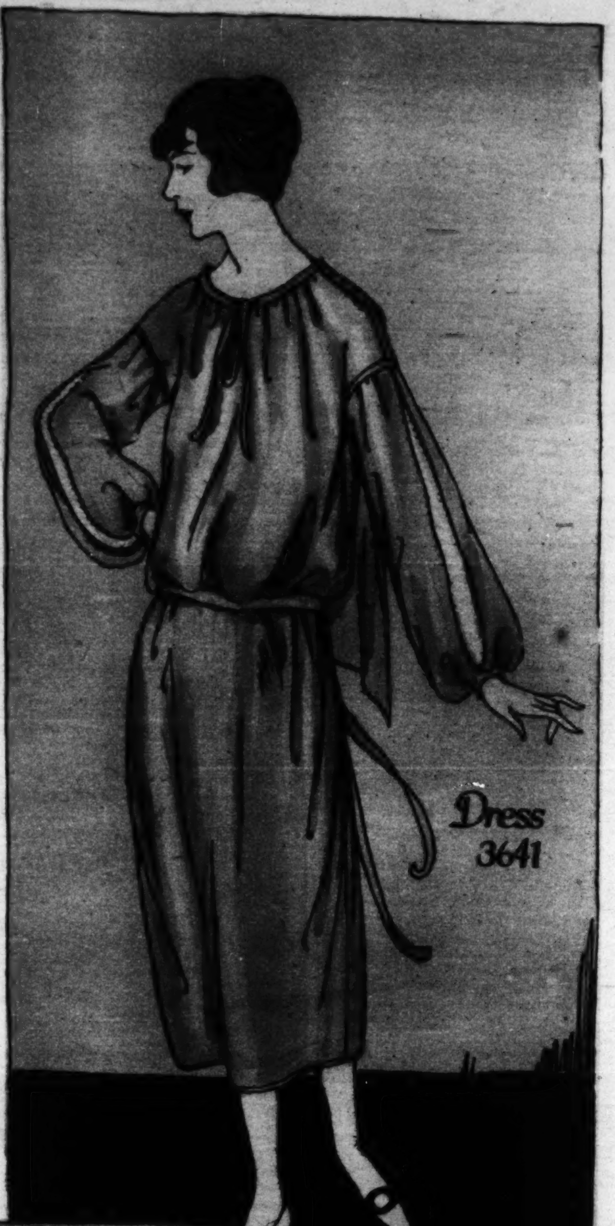
"I bought my material first, then when I got my pattern with the Deltor I found I had 1⅜ yards more material than I needed if I followed the Deltor cutting layout. At $5.50 a yard, that meant I had spent $7.58 more than I need have on material. Fortunately, however, I was able to use the extra on another dress for which I had expected to buy a piece of brocade," writes one woman.

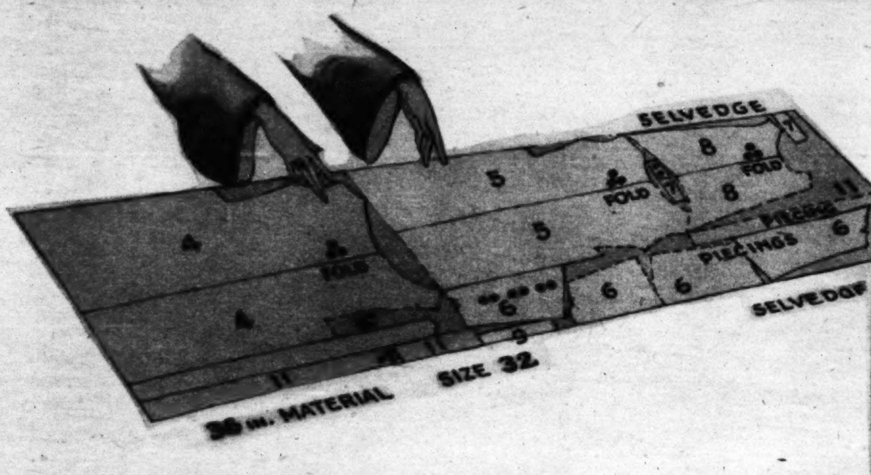
The Deltor that now comes with every Butterick pattern insures you a cutting layout that exactly meets your need. It gives cutting layouts for every size the pattern comes in laid out on every width of suitable material. You just select the picture of your size pattern laid out on the width material you are using, pin and cut accordingly, saving time and money.

These layouts are made by men who specialize in cutting. Women who have sewed all their lives say frankly they are amazed at the time and money they now save cutting this expert way.

The Deltor also gives you just as graphically the way a professional deftly puts together your dress, and the clever methods of finishing it that originate in Paris. For the Deltor is an exact record of how an expert actually cut, made, and fitted on a living model, that dress before its Butterick pattern was put on sale. Get your Butterick pattern with its Deltor at the pattern counter today.

Butterick, New York, Paris, London.

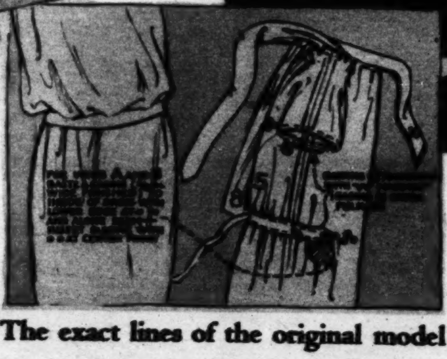




An expert cutting chart for your size and your width material

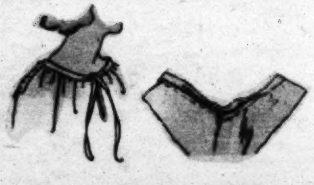
When the designer has made the pattern, men who specialize only in cutting make your Deltor cutting layouts. Not one person in a thousand, however talented, can cut as economically. Their expert experience, their careful planning, their skill, become yours with the Deltor. Gone is all the old time fussing, and trying the pieces, first one way and then another, to be sure you were not wasting goods. The quickest, most economical way is there, charted for you. With the Deltor you cut even more cleverly than ever before.

Each Deltor shows a layout for every size the pattern comes in, laid on every width of suitable material. You just select the one for your size and your width material You will find your new way of cutting saves you from ¼ to 1⅜ yards of material.



The exact lines of the original model

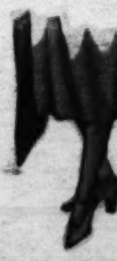
You have before you in the Deltor the exact way an expert put together the dress. No matter how inexperienced in sewing you are, you can put the dress together easily and quickly by just following the pictures. If you follow the Deltor exactly you will be amazed at the success you have. You will find that you can now make things you never even dreamed of attempting before.



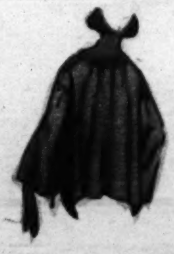
You "finish" professionally

It is the finishing of today's simple frocks that makes or mars them. With the Deltor you can achieve perfectly any new finish that your dress calls for. It is all there in pictures and clear directions for you.

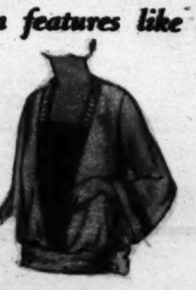
You can handle these fashion features like a professional



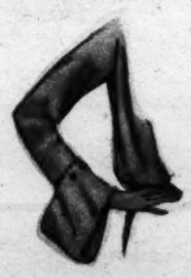
Design 3601—This uneven hem line is achieved by clever cascade draperies. The Deltor tells you just how to cut out and finish these cascade draperies with the cleverness of a professional.



Design 3641—You know just how to handle this little cape so that it falls softly from the shoulders yet breaks into unexpected fullness, when you have the Deltor.



Design 3639—The lattice trimming is delightful on the semi-formal summer frock. The Deltor tells you exactly how to make it like a professional.



Design 3633—The sleeve is more important than ever and can successfully go to any width when you have the Deltor to show just how to shape, line and finish the enormous cuff.

CHANGING A BATTLE CRUISER INTO AN AIRPLANE CARRIER was the point illustrated by these working models which were taken before the house naval affairs committee by navy experts. The change, it is argued, would obviate the loss that would be caused by scrapping the cruisers as provided in the limitation of arms treaty. The lower model is the airplane carrier. The men in the group, left to right: Rear Admiral David W. Taylor, Rear Admiral W. A. Moffett, Representatives F. C. Hicks, Claude Burdick, and Philip D. Swing, and Engineer-in-Chief J. K. "... Watching her from every corner of the crowded room"

Strangers' eyes, keen and critical – can you meet them proudly – confidently – without fear?

STRANGERS' eyes, watching you in crowded restaurants—in theatres and ballrooms—do you shrink and feel apologetic before them? Or can you meet them without awkwardness or dread?

The possession of a beautiful skin gives any woman poise and confidence. It is a charm that any woman can have if she will. For your skin changes every day; each day old skin dies and new takes its place.

By giving this new skin the right treatment, you can make it flawlessly clear and soft and smooth.

Are you using the right treatment for your special type of skin?

Skins differ widely—and each type of skin should have the treatment that suits its special needs.

There is a special Woodbury treatment for each different type of skin.

For instance, if you have a very sensitive, delicate skin you should use each night the following treatment:

> DIP a soft washcloth in warm water and hold it to your face. Then make a warm water lather of Woodbury's Facial Soap and dip your cloth up and down in it until the cloth is "fluffy" with the soft white lather. Rub this lathered cloth gently over your skin until the pores are thoroughly cleansed. Rinse well with warm, then with clear, cool water and dry carefully.

How you can tell that your skin is responding

THE very first time you use this treatment it will leave your skin with a slightly drawn, tight feeling. Do not regard this as a disadvantage—it means that your skin is responding in the right way to a more thorough and stimulating kind of cleansing.

After you have used Woodbury's once or twice this drawn sensation will disappear and your skin will gain a new firmness and smoothness.

This is only one of the special treatments for different types of skin given in the booklet of treatments which is wrapped around every cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap. In this booklet you will find complete treatments for all the different types of skin.

Get a cake of Woodbury's today, at any drug store or toilet goods counter, and begin tonight the treatment your skin needs.

The same qualities that give Woodbury's its beneficial effect on the skin make it ideal for general use. A 25-cent cake lasts a month or six weeks for general toilet use, including any of the special Woodbury treatments.

A complete miniature set of the Woodbury skin preparations

For 25 cents we will send you a complete miniature set of the Woodbury skin preparations, containing:

A trial size cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap.
A sample tube of the new Woodbury's Facial Cream.
A sample tube of Woodbury's Cold Cream.
A sample box of Woodbury's Facial Powder.
Together with the treatment booklet, "A Skin You Love to Touch."

Send for this set today. Address The Andrew Jergens Co., Spring Grove Ave., Cincinnati, Ohio. If you live in Canada, address The Andrew Jergens Co., Limited, Sherbrooke St., Perth, Ontario.

If your skin lacks fineness of texture, find the special treatment it needs in the booklet around each cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap.

Rinso
Rinso
No rubbing-no boiling

Big lasting suds—they give the water a "soapy feel" all through

Put your hand in a tub of Rinso suds. You can feel that the water is actually soapy all through.

This is one reason why Rinso soaks clothes clean without hard rubbing.

Many bar soaps make frothy, foamy suds. But they disappear when you put the clothes into them, leaving the water as if soap had never touched it.

Rinso suds work down into every fold and fibre, loosening the dirt, without weakening a single thread.

Just a light rubbing with dry Rinso on cuff edges, neck bands and the like, gets them clean—the dirt is so loosened.

Be sure to use enough Rinso to get the big lasting suds, that give the water a soapy feel all through.

Rinso is made by the largest soap makers in the world. It is sold everywhere. Get Rinso today—at grocery and department stores. Lever Bros. Co., Cambridge, Mass.

Rinso does the family wash as wonderfully as Lux does fine things

NOTE: In very hard water it takes from 1½ to 2 packages of Rinso to a tub to make the big, lasting suds that loosen all the dirt.

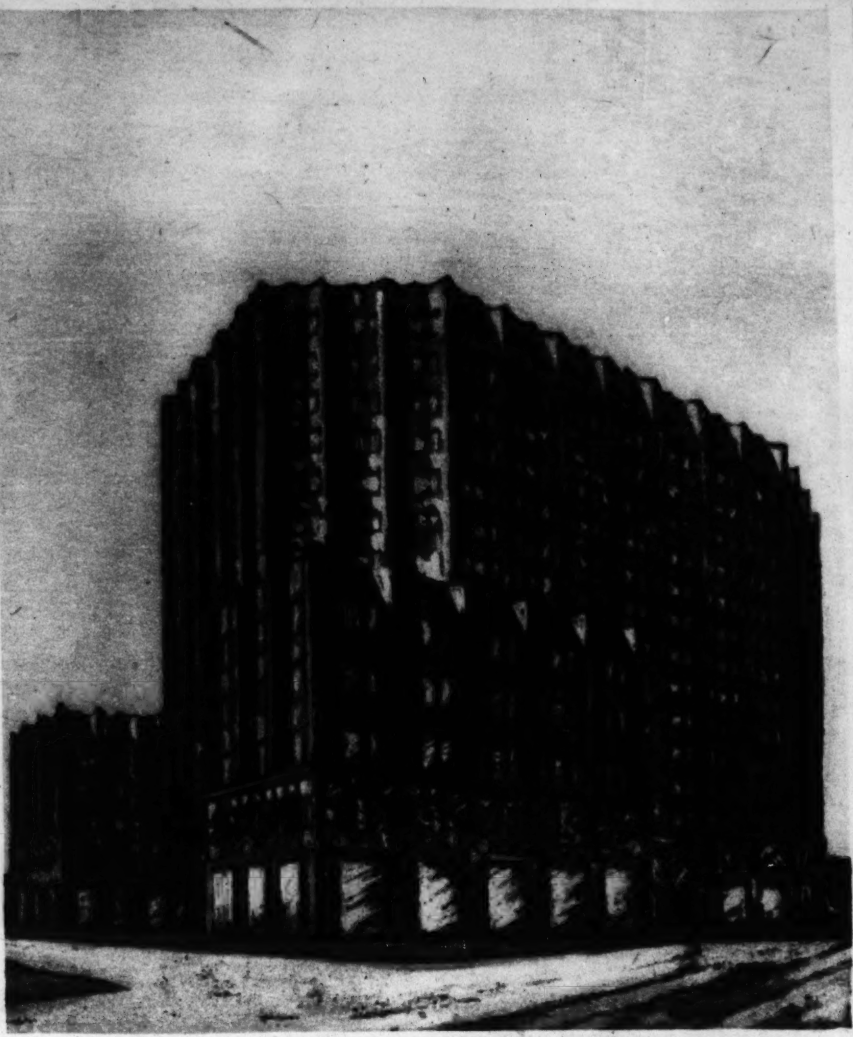
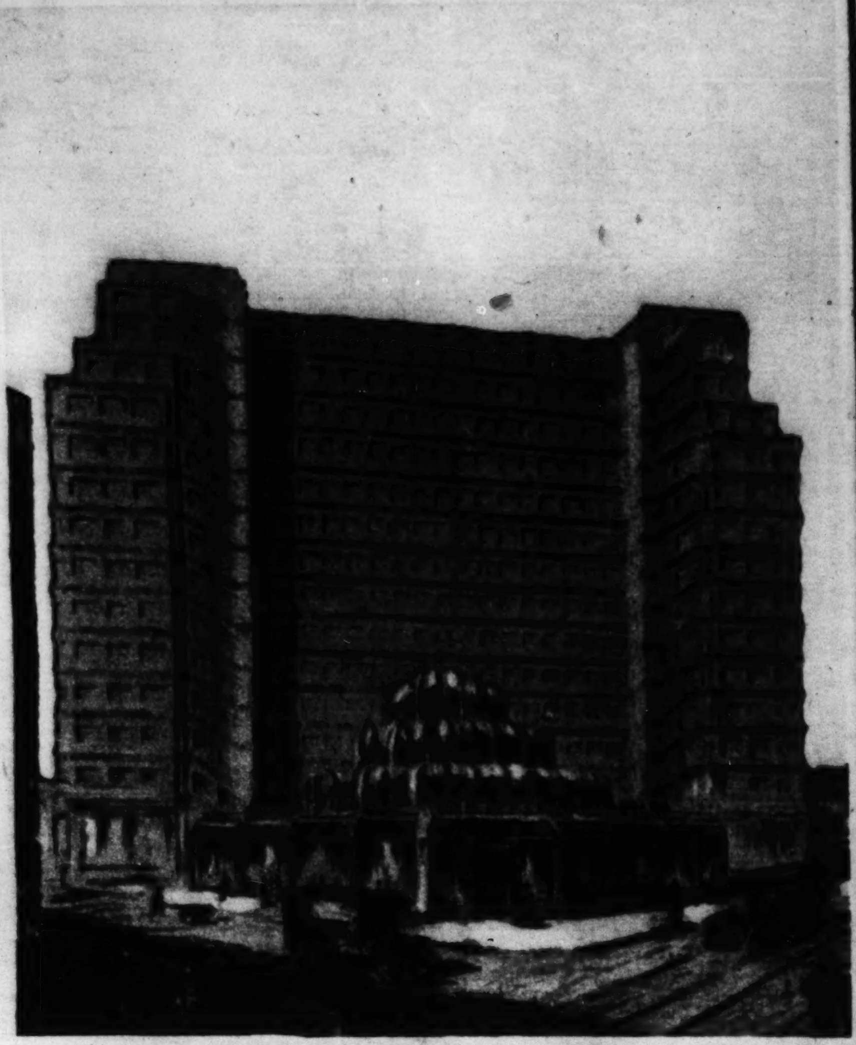
BERLIN'S "SKYSCRATCHER"

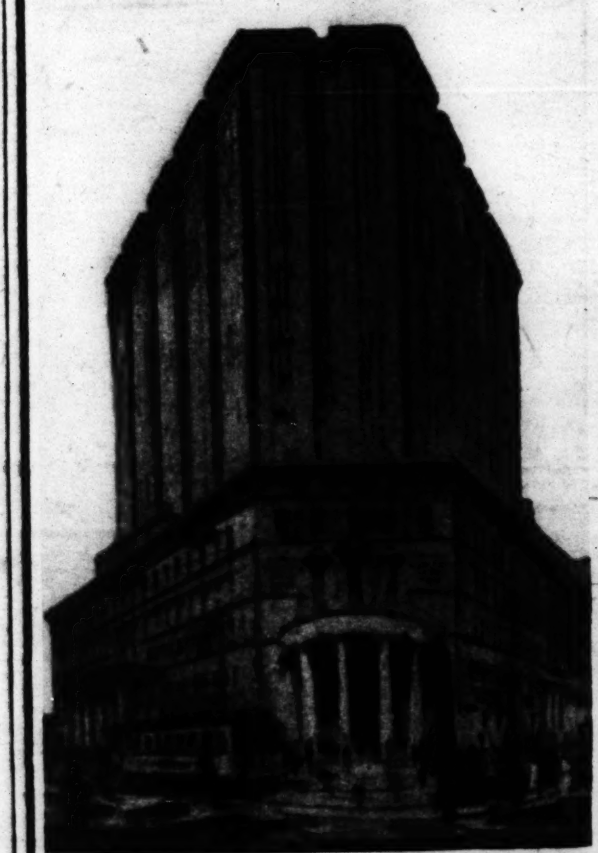
Designs awarded prizes in unique German competition for American skyscraper plans.



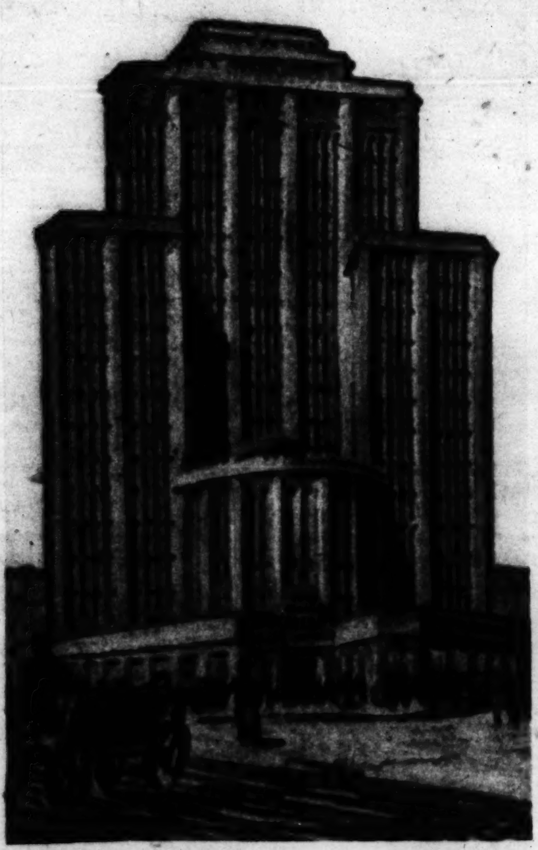
THIS DESIGN WAS AWARDED FIRST PRIZE. Resembles an American skyscraper somewhat, doesn't it?



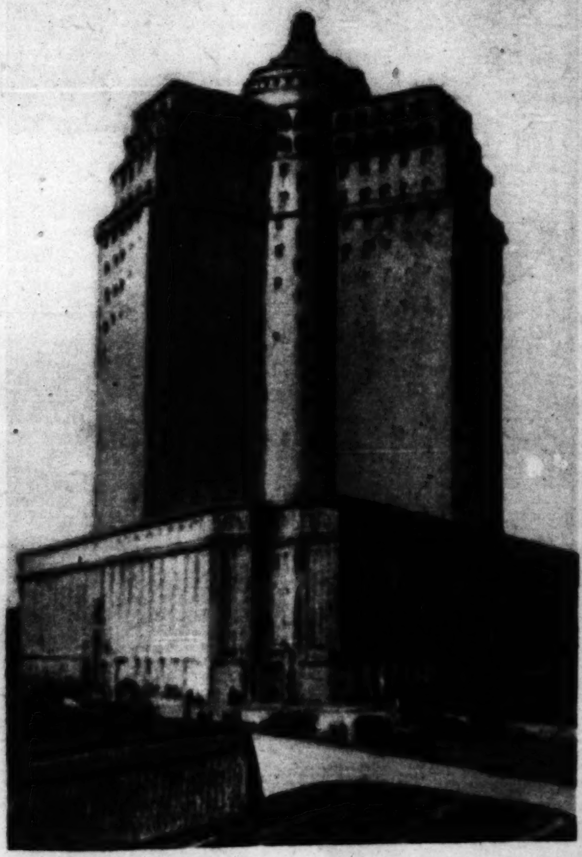
SECOND PRIZE went to the maker of this ornate drawing with its highly unusual lines.



THIS ODD-SHAPED STRUCTURE, somewhat resembling the flatiron type, won the third prize.



THERE WAS A TIE FOR FOURTH PRIZE. This design, with its lofty rotunda, was one of the winners.



MOST PECULIAR OF THE DESIGNS was this towered one, which shared in the awarding of the fourth prize.

BERLIN IS ANXIOUS TO BUILD A SKYSCRAPER ON THE AMERICAN PLAN, and has just finished a prize competition to obtain an appropriate design. The prize winners are pictured above. The German name for skyscraper is "wolkenkratzerbau," which means cloud-scratching building. The building is to be erected near the Friedrichstrasse railroad terminal in Berlin and is to be a sort of community festival hall and municipal building. There are few if any skyscrapers in Berlin at present.

Blue Ribbon Fiction

Meredith Nicholson

W. L. George and Perceval Gibbon are two English writers on the Blue Ribbon schedule for 1922. George has long been popular as a novelist and short story writer and is credited with an uncanny knowledge of the peculiar traits of women. Gibbon has been a sailor, soldier, explorer and war correspondent, and his Blue Ribbon story, "The Looters," published in February, was a masterpiece.

Will Payne and Maude Radford Warren are Chicago writers whose work is known throughout America. Both have agreed to furnish stories for The Tribune. Meredith Nicholson, known for a generation as one of America's best writers, will have a story in June.

Noted critic calls The Tribune's Blue Ribbon Stories better than those of 8 big magazines

WHEN The Tribune established its Blue Ribbon fiction section two years ago, it broke a journalistic precedent. It had been the custom of newspapers to publish inferior fiction that was new or serials which had previously run in magazines or had been published as novels.

THE Tribune decided to give its readers good stories and established a fiction section that compared favorably with any of the big magazines paying the highest prices for stories. Recently Edward J. O'Brien in his "Best Short Stories of 1921" placed The Tribune's Blue Ribbon fiction ahead of that of eight big popular magazines in literary quality. His rating of The Tribune and these magazines follows:

Periodicals	Percentage of distinctive stories published	Percentage of stories of permanent literary value
Chicago Tribune	22	2
Red Book Magazine	20	0
McCall's Magazine	19	0
Everybody's Magazine	18	1
Cosmopolitan	18	2
McClure's Magazine	17	2
Saturday Evening Post	15	1
Ladies Home Journal	15	0
Collier's Weekly	12	0

BLUE Ribbon fiction during the coming year offers even more to lovers of good stories. Among the stories which will be published within the next three months are:

Completely Done in Oils	By Octavus Roy Cohen
The Gold One	By Samuel Merwin
The Heel of Achilles	By P. G. Wodehouse
The Flapper Who Found Herself	By Inez Haynes Irwin
Which Twitchcomb?	By George Barr McCutcheon
The Dyke Grange Mystery	By Sax Rohmer
Eileen	By W. L. George
The Hand on the Shoulder	By Meredith Nicholson
Cheek	By Henry C. Rowland
Probability and Error	By Sophie Kerr

MANY other famous writers, both English and American, have agreed to write stories for The Tribune during the coming year, so that the quality of Blue Ribbon fiction will be better than ever before.

Your skin needs different creams at different times

To protect the skin against wind and dust apply a little Pond's Vanishing Cream before going out

For daytime and evening it needs a cream that protects against wind and dust—and holds the powder

IF you do not protect the skin against wind and dust, it will protect itself by developing a rough, coarse surface. You can prevent this only by protecting your skin yourself, before you go out.

Apply a little Pond's Vanishing Cream to your face and neck whenever you are going out. This is a softening cream based on an ingredient famous for its soothing qualities. Dust and dirt cannot clog the pores, wind cannot chap the skin or coarsen it, if you provide it with this invisible shield. Pond's Vanishing Cream disappears the moment you put it on and cannot reappear to make the face shiny, for it contains no oil.

Also, to hold the powder on, use Pond's Vanishing Cream. Rub it lightly on the face and neck and arms when you are dressing. It softens the skin as it is absorbed, smoothing off any rough places where the powder might show. You will find that one powdering lasts many times longer with this velvety cream as a base.

Begin today the regular use of this cream. Used faithfully, Pond's Vanishing Cream keeps the skin soft and fresh. Apply it regularly before going out. This cream is too delicate to clog the pores, and it cannot promote the growth of hair. Get it at any druggist's or department store in convenient sizes of both jars and tubes. The Pond's Extract Co., 131 Hudson St., New York.

For cleansing, your skin needs an entirely different cream—one that is made with just enough oil to penetrate the pores and lubricate the skin.

The circle is eleven years old, and quilts made by its thirty-five members have been sent all over the world. There were twenty-eight members present when the picture was taken, and their ages totaled 2,065 years. (TRIBUNE Photograph.)

Will Life Be as Good to You?

Home from college, aglow with youth's ambition, ready to go to work.

But what does the future hold?

Will he have his father's firm, quick tread, his priceless health when he is as old as dad?

Shrewd business man, the father knows the cash value of a healthy mouth, All his life he has cared well for his teeth.

Pyorrhea, which strikes four out of five past the age of forty and thousands younger, has not touched him with its poisoned fangs.

If you would pass the noon of life and go down the sunset trail vigorous and strong, watch your gums!

At the first sign of tenderness or bleeding, take heed. That is Pyorrhea's warning.

If this disease gets beyond control your teeth are doomed.

As Pyorrhea gains headway the teeth loosen at the roots, drop out or must be pulled; pus pockets form; deadly germs seep, seep, seep throughout the system.

If you would prevent Pyorrhea consult your dentist regularly and brush your teeth with Forhan's For the Gums.

Forhan's will prevent Pyorrhea, or check it in its course, if used consistently and used in time.

But don't wait! Start using Forhan's now.

Forhan's For the Gums is the formula of R. J. Forhan, D. D. S. It is an excellent dentifrice, keeping the teeth white and clean and the gums firm and healthy.

Brush Your Teeth With Forhan's — How to Use It

Use it twice daily, year in and year out. Wet your brush in cold water, place a half-inch of the refreshing, healing paste on it, then brush your teeth up and down. Use a rolling motion to clean the crevices. Brush the grinding and back surfaces of the teeth. Massage your gums with your Forhan-coated brush—gently at first until the gums harden, then more vigorously. If the gums are very tender, massage with the finger, instead of the brush. If gum-shrinkage has already set in, use Forhan's according to directions, and consult a dentist immediately for special treatment. 35c and 60c, in the U. S. and Canada. At all druggists.

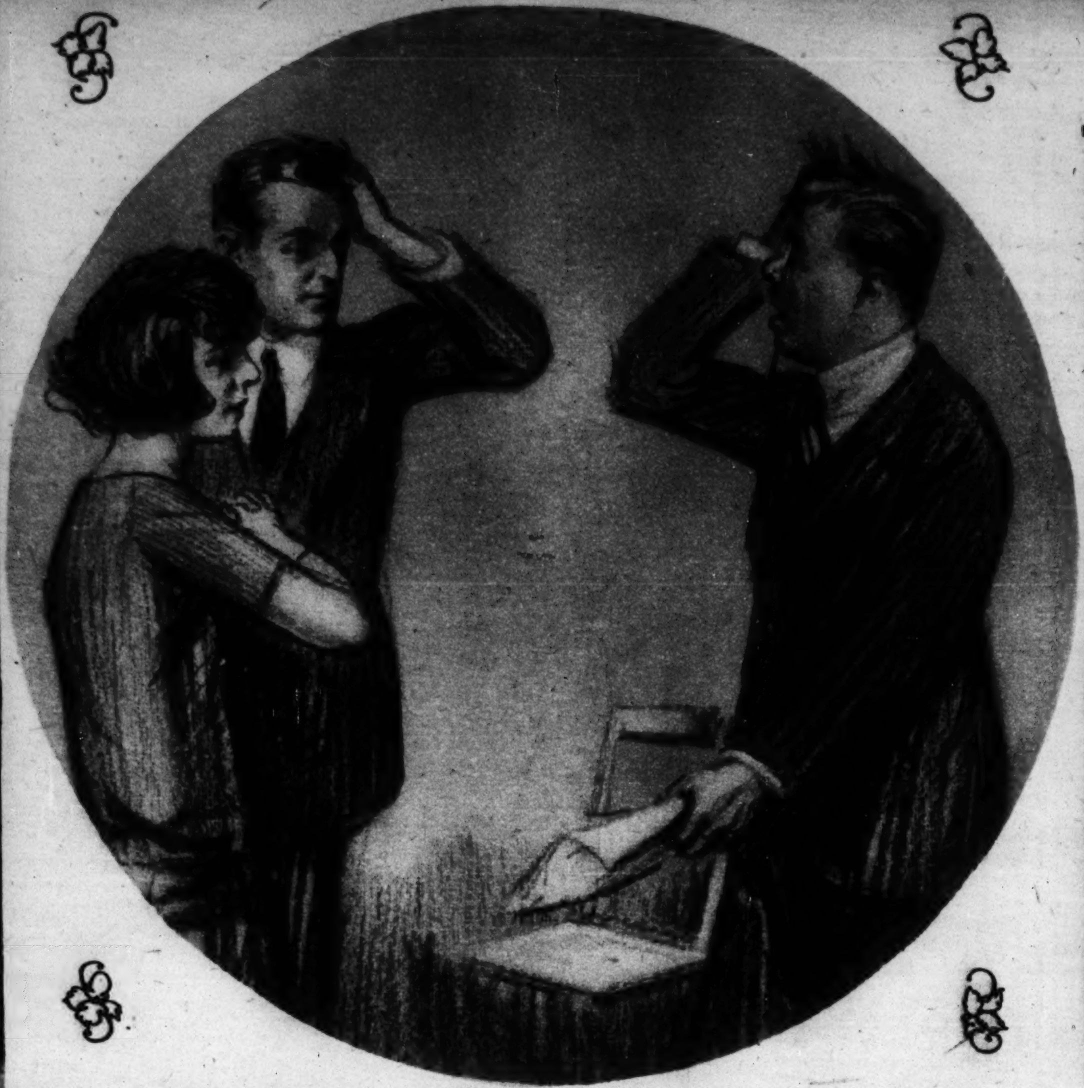
Everybody in the audience will say, no doubt, "They don't look as though they were acting at all." Naturalness—that's what Edna and Harold are striving for. Just see how different this love scene is from the average stage affair!



"O. Jessamine, my darling, what must you think of me!" That line is the stumbling block for all concerned in the theater workshop-craftsmen's dramatic guild production of Clavering de Pew's little drama, "The Light That Blinds." Clavering is having a terrible time getting Jessamine's husband to say the line properly. Mr. Bowie, who plays the part, is a very efficient bond salesman in the daytime and ought to be intelligent enough not to inhale after every second word!

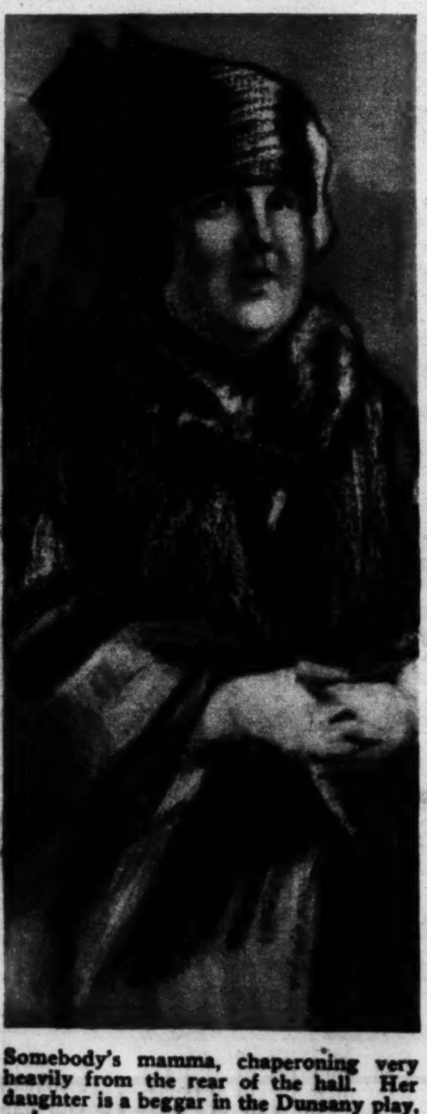
The dress rehearsal of "Mixed Couples" is going splendidly. It begins to look as if the show would be over by 1 o'clock at the latest on the opening night. "Mixed Couples" is a clever comedy, written by a leading member of the "Community Workshop Comrades," Mrs. Rosemary Beebe by name, and it is all about an old couple who see a newly wedded pair quarreling and decide to show them how foolish it is to quarrel by staging a fight of their own. Enter the maid and the butler. Old and trusted family servitors that they are, they decide to show the old couple how foolish it is to quarrel. Whereupon they do a make-believe quarrel. Well, it all turns out that the young couple were only rehearsing a movie scenario and weren't really quarreling at all. Curtain.



Somebody's mamma, chaperoning very heavily from the rear of the hall. Her daughter is a beggar in the Dunsany play, and mamma can't see why they should have cast Marjorie for such a common part! For Marjorie simply can't even simulate commonness!

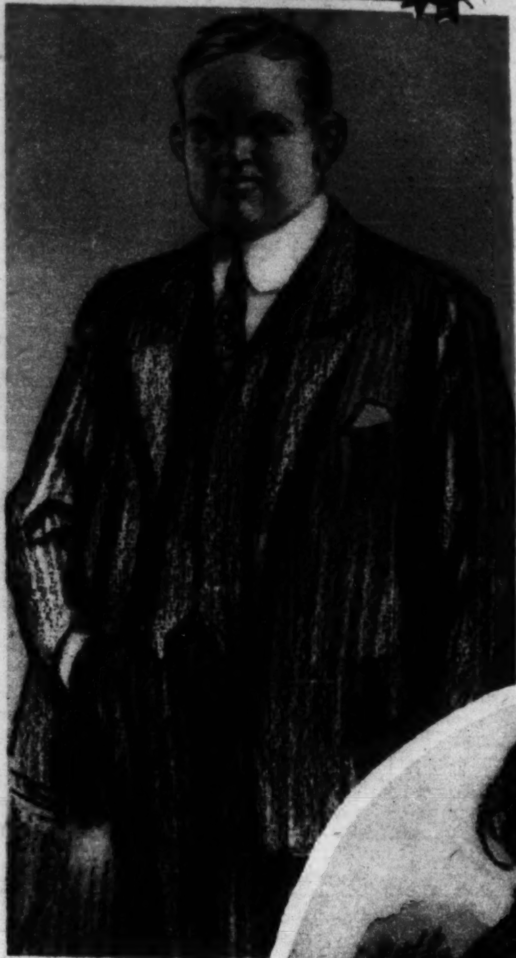
The prompter, having entirely lost track of the lines, goes out for a smoke.



The character man. Joe is given little character bits whenever there are any, for Joe, though not a very good actor, is a splendid bookkeeper and extremely handy to have on hand when the finances become involved.

The property lady, who sits in the wings and successfully impersonates "a noise without" or "crash off stage, followed by moaning." Sometimes the noise without comes at the wrong time and then the property lady has to stand for a lot of temperament from the actors.

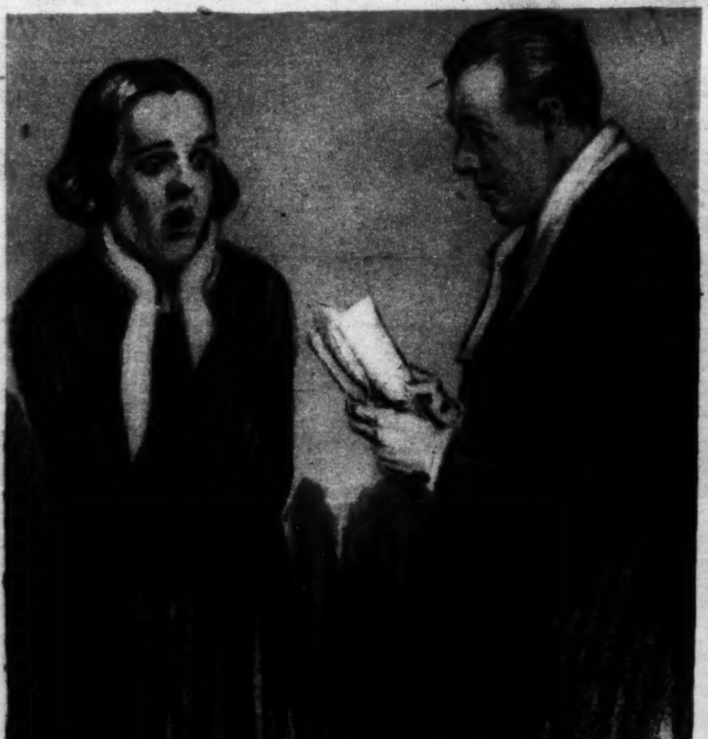
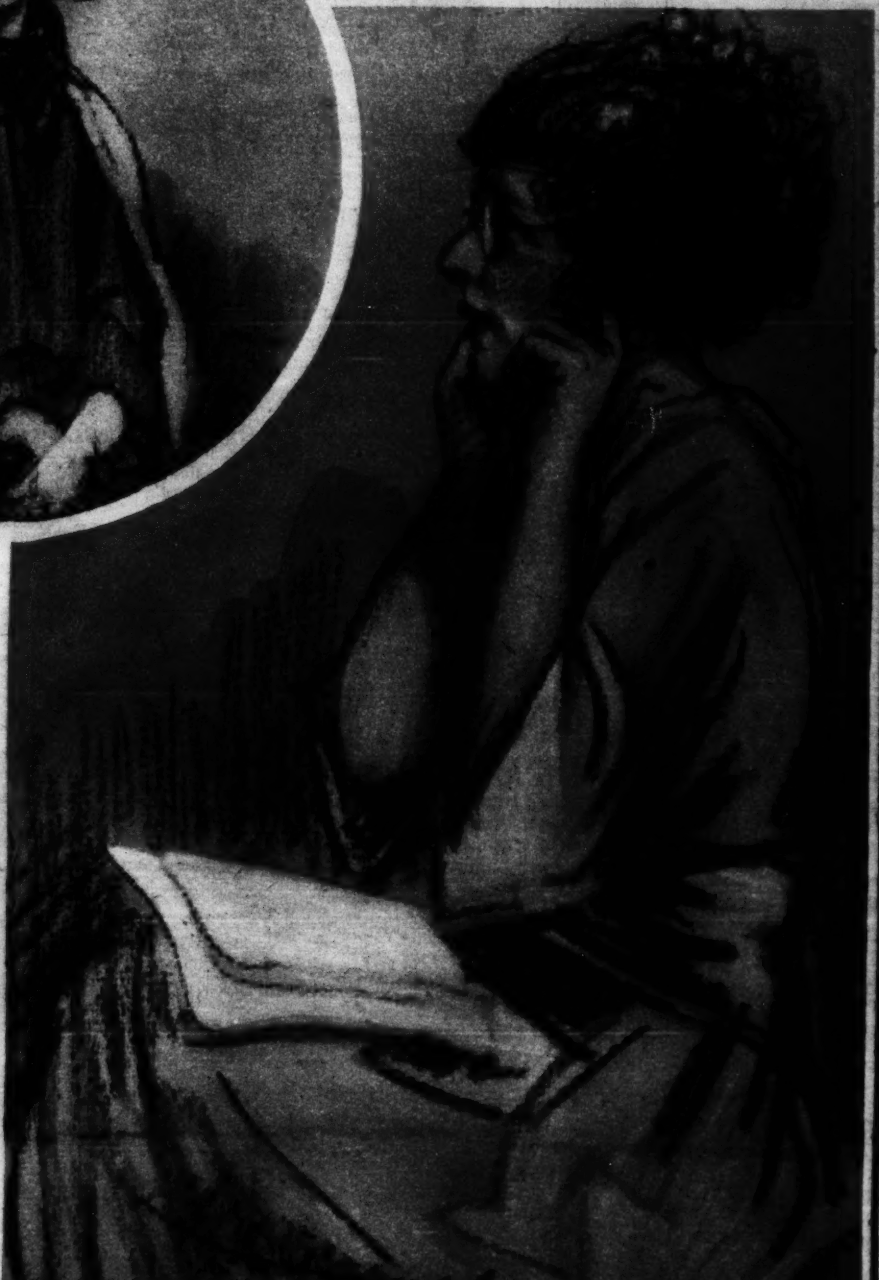
is cast for the slave boy, who bounds thout much on, bearing a lute, or a ectar, or a telegram from the Syrian as the case may be, in an oriental at is supposed to be a lot better than Dunsany ever wrote. Frederick looks y, but wait till the dress rehearsal and ll see. He's hardly going to wear at all, and maybe he'll be all gilded!



Harriet has a really big part in a one-act thriller called "Hydrophobia." In it she goes mad, bites her husband, her lover, two doctors, a trained nurse, her husband's mistress, and a charwoman. They all go mad, too. Harriet is being heard her part by a bashful swain, who hadn't bargained for quite so much realism behind scenes.



The eleventh hour substitute, called in to take the leading lady's place when that young lady went under with tonsilitis. You will find the lady substitute in the wings at the dress rehearsal saying whole passages to herself over and over and over. And when they give the public performance she will skip half an act or so, thereby endearing herself to the entire cast.

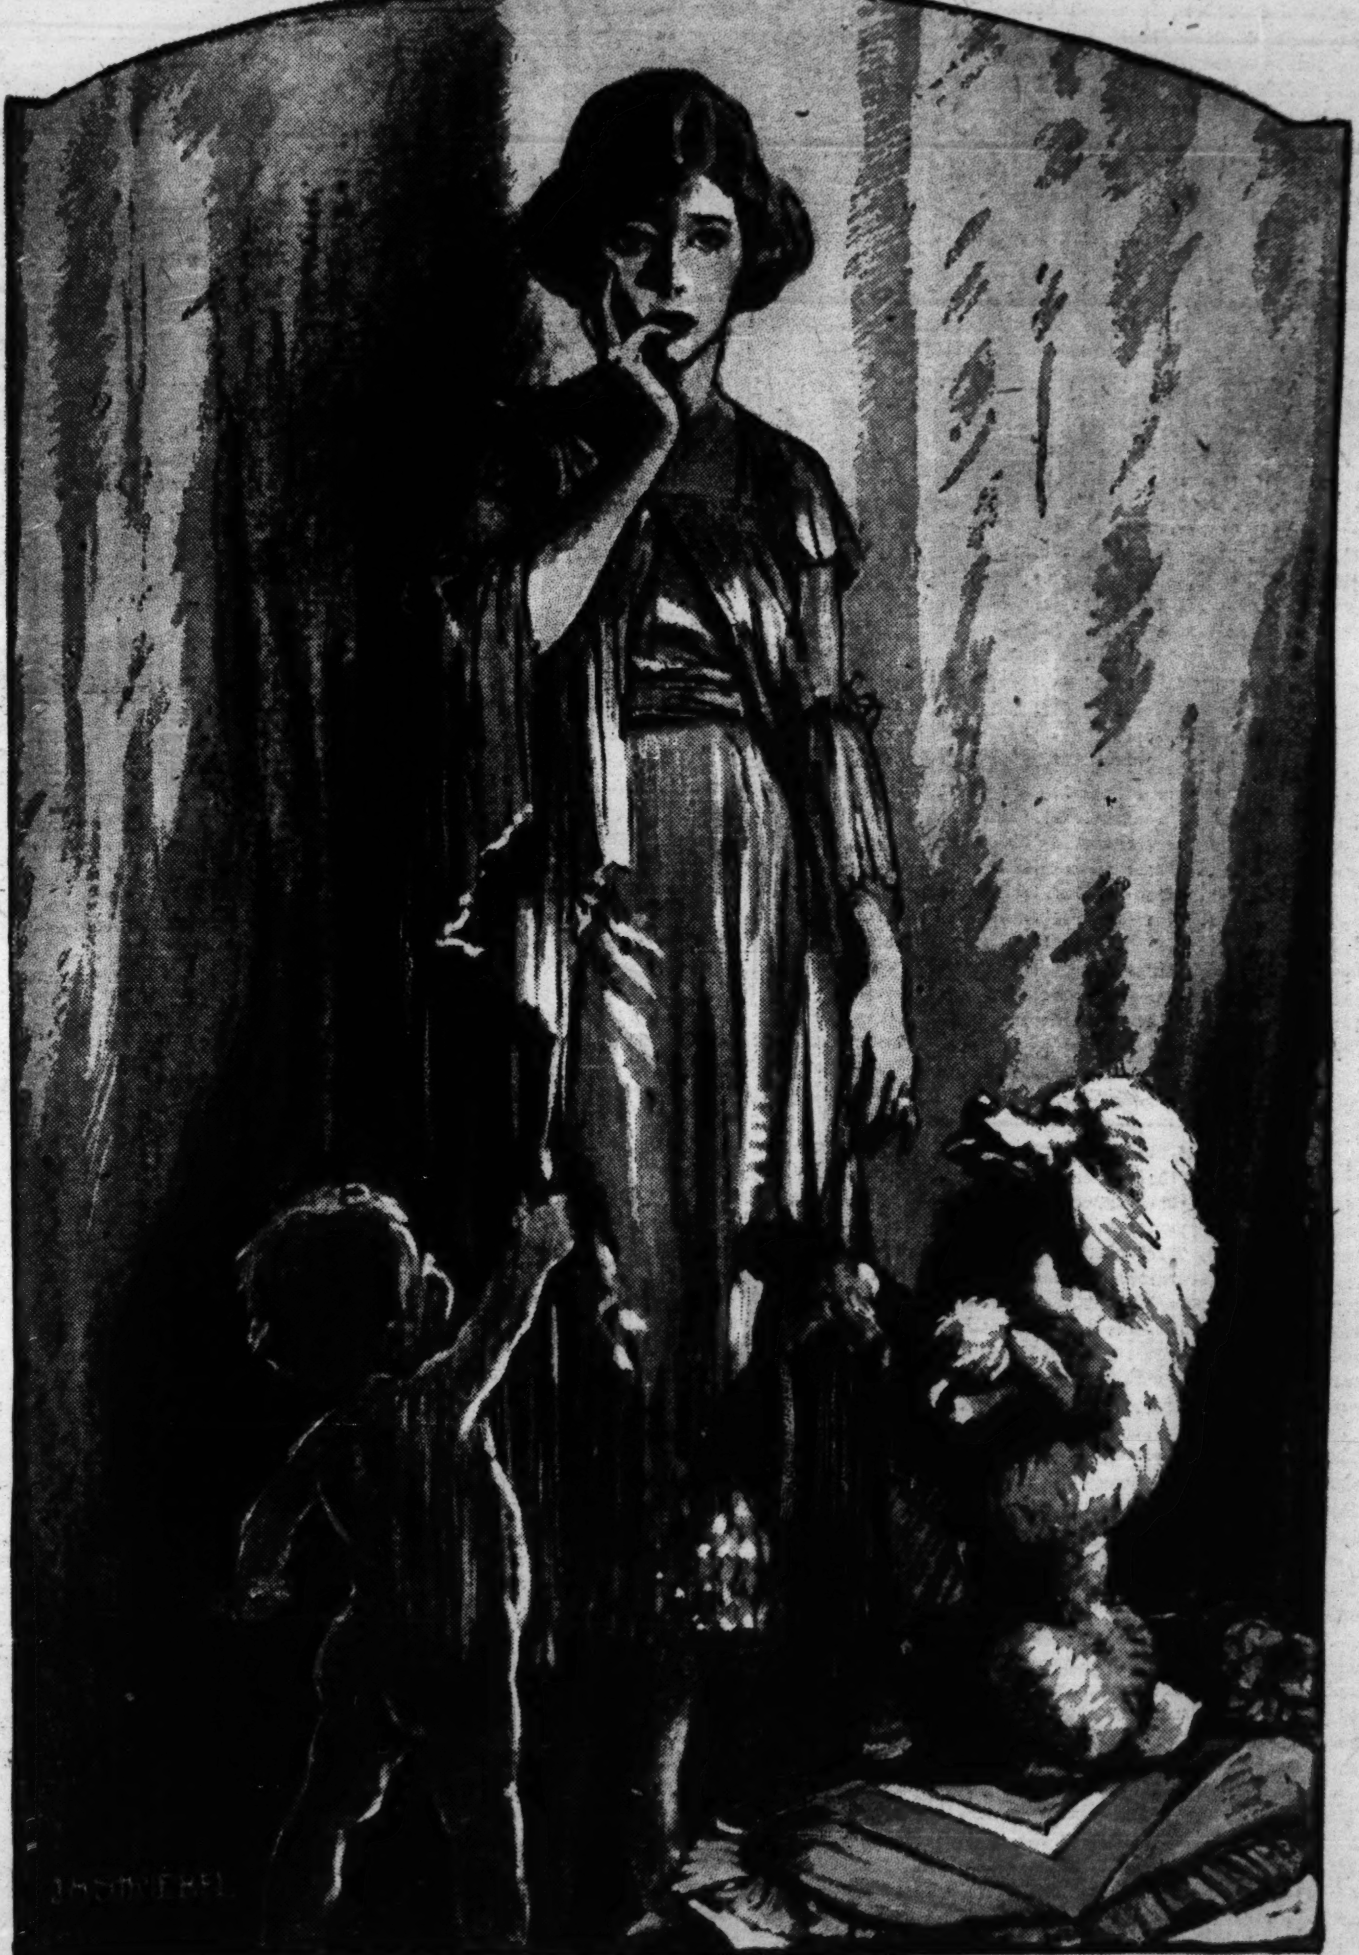
MILLICENT

by Louis Weitzenkorn

Her Diamond Collar Links the Two Ends of Infinity and Changes a Selfish Woman's Heart.



Which ?

THERE are two buildings in New York as far apart as the stars. Nay, as far apart as the opposite ends of infinity. Yet it is said all things move in circles and infinity may sometime—the paradox is excusable—join without smashing up either the solar system or the real estate business.

One of these buildings faces the viaduct of the New York Central railroad, and electric trains vie with each other, in passing this mass of brick, to drown out the noise of the fish and cabbage peddlers in the street below the windows of the building and below even the wheels of the trains.

Old clothes men with adenoids wander by it through the long hours of the day crying piteously for trousers without more than one rent in the leg or for shoes which, perhaps, a modern Cinderella with a number eight foot and a double A pocketbook may some day put upon her graceful appendages when the soles are renewed. Children slip by this house on roller skates and banana peels. Joe, of perennial ice, coal, and wood fame, Joe the ubiquitous, except when one wants ice on the Fourth of July or coal on Christmas, is always getting a ton of coal or half a ton of ice tumbled into his cellar—which is part of the building.

The name of the building is the Albemarle, a misnomer, for by all the laws of the appropriate it should be called the Bedlam. In it, out of it, and around it, the atmosphere rings, howls, screeches, and whistles. It is chaos done into brick and mortar.

There are twenty-four families in the Albemarle, and as one ascends the brass rodded stairway upon worn and frayed matting, one hears the turmoil within. There is Mrs. Shamus O'Hara, widowed, before prohibition, by the Golden Pheasant Café on 103d street. A moaning mechanical piano below her has prevented the good widow reading the society notes in her favorite evening newspaper, and, in spite of herself, she is trying to transpose "How Yuh Gonna Keep 'Em Down on the Farm After They've Seen Paree" into "The Wearin' of the Green." An amateur trap drummer somewhere in the reaches of the building is playing two-four time in accompaniment, and Mrs. O'Hara's symphony is also diluted with the wails of the ten months old Erdman baby in the apartment above her.

With William Erdman and his pale and hopeless little wife, the house is typified. Mrs. O'Hara, with the help of roomers and the Workmen's Compensation Act, affords the high rent of twenty-five dollars, while young Erdman, a guard on the subway, pays but twenty-two. Erdman's baby has just been weaned, so the father knows Grade "A" milk costs eighteen cents a bottle while loose milk, "an might'll be, Mr. Erdman, not so kosher, 'leven cents." William buys the eleven cent grade, which his wife boils, and for every bottle the youngster drinks the father opens and slams thirty heavy train doors.

There are other tenants worthy of description, to be sure, but it is Mrs. O'Hara with her evening newspaper who touches the outside world of Millicent, and it is the Erdman baby who——

By the broad stone of the doorstep, engaged in his fourteen hour day of argument, is Billett, the janitor. At least upon the pay roll of Judson T. Walters, who owns this shelter, he is titled janitor, but by all the just laws of the angels it will be Mrs. Billett who shall have the credit in Heaven. Billett, like so many of his tribe, has constituted himself a buffer state between tenant and landlord. Complaints come to Billett and die with him. Demands for garbage collection, when forced upon him with a hard and reddened fist beneath his nose, are referred to Mrs. Billett, whose poor arms can hardly lift the dumbwaiter upon its ropes.

So the tenants of Judson T. Walters thrive in their building, enjoying life as they may under the high cost of living, about which they are forever talking and comparing notes on peddlers, grocers, and other small tradesmen, or boycotting, insulting and even assaulting, as the case deserves, the purveyors of food and drink.

And in the Hotel Van Buskirk, at the pleasanter end of infinity, dwell Mr. Walters and his wife and Millicent.

The Hotel Van Buskirk is a colossus of human habitation which furnishes jazz for the tin ear and symphony for the connoisseur. It reaches out one arm across half the world for milady who desires half a dozen French snails, and another into an adjoining state for the prothonotary of a Pennsylvania town seeking a boiled New England dinner.

Should the well known and oft surg

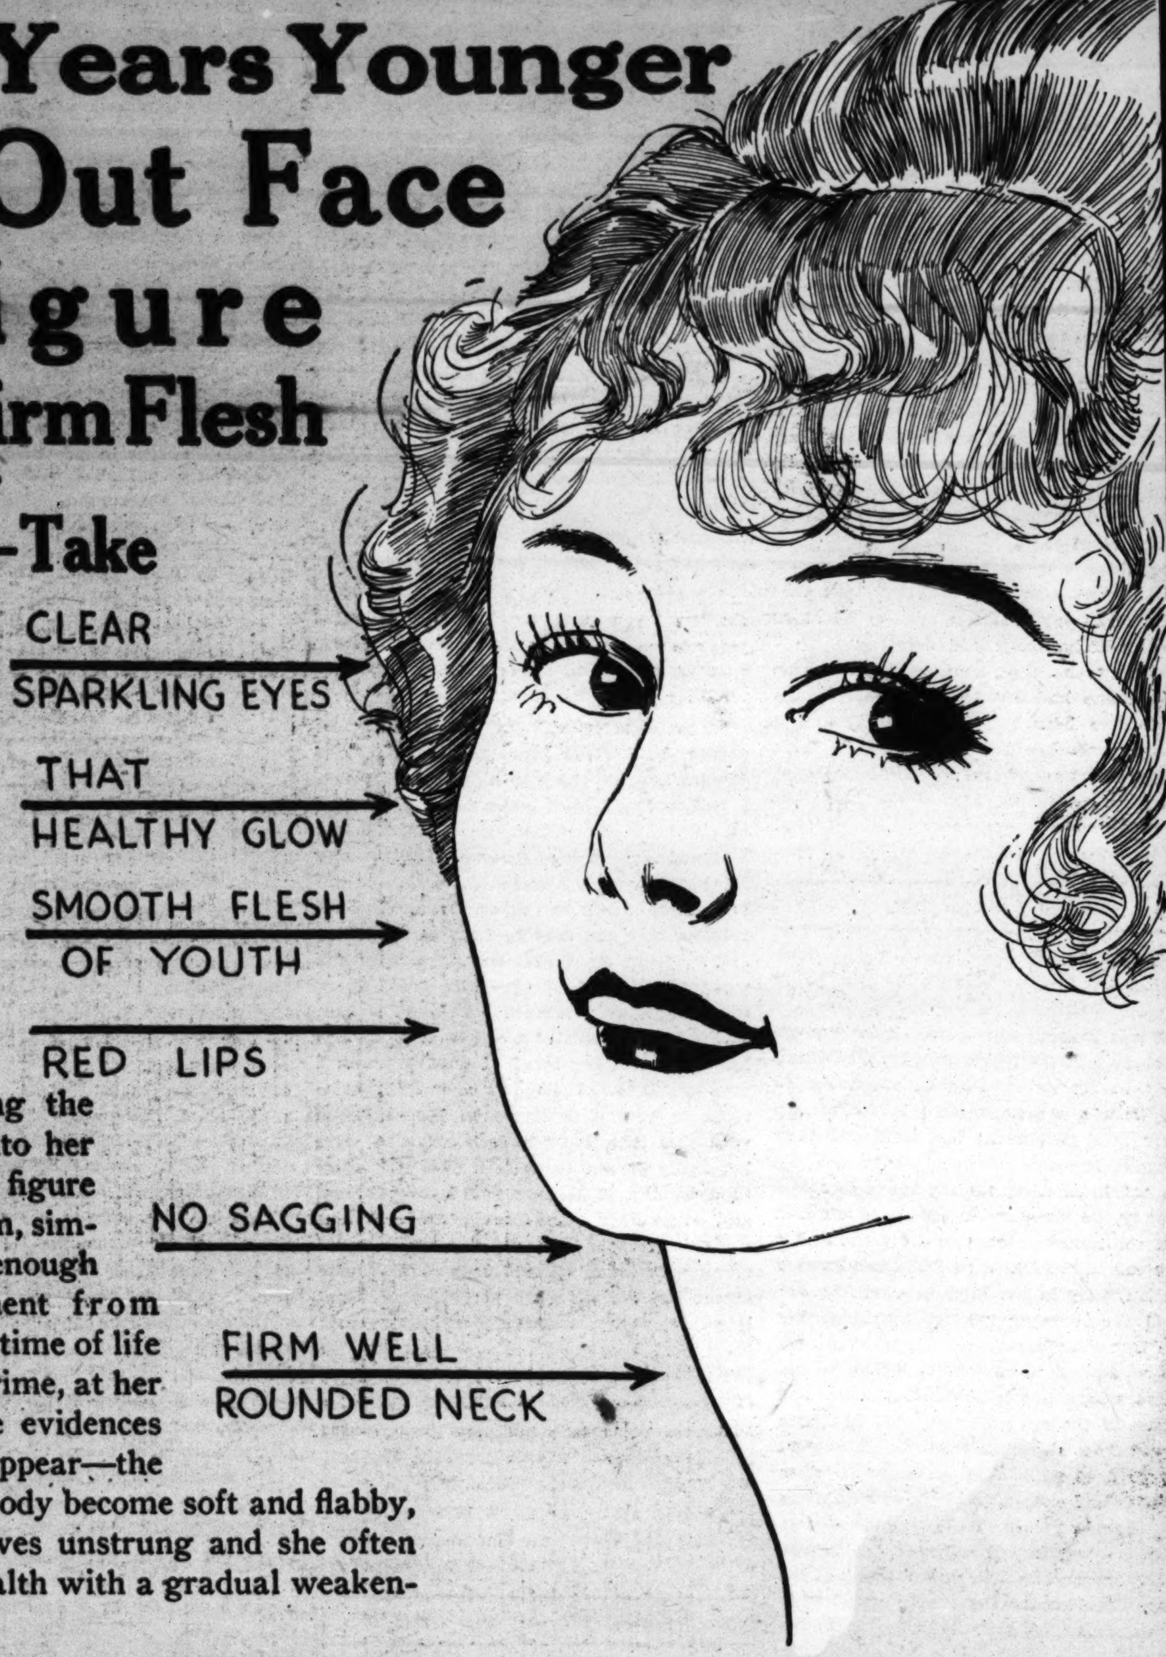
Start Now—Take

MASTIN'S VITAMON TABLETS

To Help Build Up Weak Nerves and Shrunken Tissues, Enrich the Blood, Renew Vitality and Protect Yourself Against the Ravages of Time



Many a woman is allowing the signs of old age to creep into her system, robbing her face and figure of youthful beauty and charm, simply because she fails to get enough strength-building nourishment from her food. As a result, at the time of life when she should be in her prime, at her very best, the first tell-tale evidences of departing youth often appear—the muscles and tissues of her body become soft and flabby, her cheeks sunken, her nerves unstrung and she often becomes the victim of ill-health with a gradual weakening of her physical forces.

If such women would only get some good, firm, solid flesh on their bones, increase nerve force and energy, enrich their blood and provide the proper muscle, bone and tissue-making elements by taking MASTIN'S VITAMON TABLETS with each meal they might easily fill out the hollows, smooth out the wrinkles, round out the figure to graceful proportions, build up health and look years younger.

MASTIN'S VITAMON TABLETS contain a highly concentrated form of all three vitamines, true organic iron, the necessary lime salts and other vitalizing elements which Nature provides for perfect vigor of body and mind.

Try This World's Great Secret for Beauty

If you want to quickly get more strength and vitality, and have the firm flesh "pep" and healthy glow of youth which makes you look and feel far younger, try making this simple test and see for yourself just what MASTIN'S VITAMON TABLETS may do for you! First weigh and measure yourself. Next take MASTIN'S VITAMON—two tablets with each meal. Then weigh and measure yourself again each week and continue taking MASTIN'S VITAMON TABLETS until you are satisfied with your gain in weight, "pep," energy and improved appearance.

Ahkoond of Swat honor the Van Buskirk with his patronage, it will print its menus in Swattian. It will curl hair, manicure fingers, shine shoes, press trousers, be supercilious or informal as one may desire. It will rent a suite of rooms to a king and in the chambers adjoining furnish shelter to whispering revolutionaries. The Cascades of its salle à manger are more fitting as an accompaniment to a honeymoon than Niagara Falls. In short, the Van Buskirk, with its Allee des Jardins, in which flutter the peacockdom of New York, its checkroom boys, its headwaiters, its messengers, its actors looking like millionaires, and its millionaires looking like actors, its wireless service, personal physicians, dentists at all hours, has held the proud boast that it can furnish anything except a navy, please any one except members of the Anti-Saloon league, and never lose its smile.

That was before the time of Millicent.

Millicent came to the Hotel Van Buskirk with Mr. and Mrs. Walters. A suite of three rooms and a bath was furnished to the couple and one room and bath to Millicent. Mr. Walters could have been completely satisfied with a large clothes closet and a cuspidor, only that his wife knew more about spending money than he knew about making it, which, the size of his income being taken into consideration, is knowledge raised to the 'th power. Mrs. Walters could awaken at 2 o'clock in the morning and be, as she would put it, de rigeur. Mr. Walters could emerge from a Turkish bath looking as if he had just been in the path of an invading army.

Millicent, being a French poodle, had it on both of them.

Perhaps the reader should early have been warned that this was to be a dog story and the heroine a French poodle. Millicent was a French poodle of a particularly obnoxious breed. To all those who have been sniffed, smelled, snarled, and growled at by French poodles, or have been honored enough to be licked, sat upon, rubbed against, or favored by that perennial cataract which a French poodle drops upon one from its eyes, some slight picture of Millicent can thus mentally be gathered up.

Muzza's Wittle Bebsy.

MILLICENT had the soul of a jilted dance hall artist and the temperament of a retired harem wife. She would coil herself, perfumed in attar, upon the huge downy cushions furnished by Mrs. Walters, where she grunted, wheezed, or snapped as the occasion demanded. For Mrs. Walters, Millicent deigned to grunt and wheeze. She patronized her mistress as an ancient nabob might have favored a willing slave.

To Judson T. Walters, Millicent was about ten pounds of incipient Hydrophobia. To the train of maids, valets, waiters, porters, and hotel clerks, and even the manager of the Hotel Van Buskirk, Millicent was "that damn dog in 908."

"Oo is muzza's 'ittle, wittle bebsy," Mrs. Walters would say, and in that phrase lies whatever tragedy may be in this story and the subtle connecting link between those ends of infinity, the Albemarle tenement and the magnificent Hotel Van Buskirk. With her baths, her manicures, her massage, her curling, and her dainty, especially prepared foods, Millicent was exalted above the canine proletariat. She was kissed by Mrs. Walters, held up to the tobacco breath of her "biggsy poppa," who was the irritated Mr. Walters, and to her door there ran an almost unending stream of growling and sullen servants.

It was at this stage of the proceedings in the life and adventures of Millicent that Mr. Walters took to solitary drinking. Like a moving picture vampire, if Mr. Walters can be imagined in such an insidious rôle, he coddled the bartenders of the Van Buskirk, attempted to drink the vile soft concoctions which answered to the former highball and fizz, until finally, in a fit of desperation, he bared his woes:

"Mike," said Mr. Walters, after many hopeless attempts at "Orange Blossoms" and the like, "Mike, I'm the father of it!"

"The father of what?" demanded Mike, picking up the half drained Orange Blossom from the bar and smelling it suspiciously.

"Of that dog!"

"You?"

"Yes," replied Mr. Walters, the tears welling into his voice.

Mike looked around. The few faces at his bar were familiar. He dodged out of sight a moment and then, reappearing, said cryptically:

"Sixteen dollars."

"Take twenty," said Mr. Walters, shoving two tens at the bartender. "I'll be back for another when it's gone."

Mr. Walters took the carefully wrapped bottle and vanished to his dissipation.

It might be argued that a man of the caliber of Judson T. Walters would have walked into suite 908, arranged Millicent carefully upon a mound as a full back would the ball at the start of a Harvard-Yale game, and place kicked the French poodle through the window into the great beyond nine or more floors above the asphalt of obliteration. For Judson T. Walters, as hundreds of New York flat dwellers have occasion to know, is one of the largest, shrewdest, and between the hours of 10 o'clock in the morning and 4 o'clock in the afternoon, hardest of landlords to be found in the area between New Rochelle and Coney Island. Yet, like thousands of other business men, he was of sentimental nature, which only by dint of long cultivation could be subdued during his workday. And his particular sentiment was Mrs. Walters.

Mrs. Walters had everything that Judson T. Walters reveled in vicariously. She had youth, beauty, and what he called "the continental poise." If he amassed the dollars, she adorned them and softened their commercialism. When he drew upon his bank for several thousands, he saw the money transmuted into a lovely woman, gowned adorably, scintillating with just the right jewels, smiling, graceful, and quite the center of all pictures in which she chose to place herself. What he could not understand was Millicent, and yet, a psychologist could have explained Millicent to him in such a fashion that his heart would have leaped for joy.

Diamonds for a Dog.

ONE of the first events in the crescendo chain of Millicent's tragedy was several columns of notoriety furnished the hotel when Mrs. Walters casually stepped into a Fifth avenue jeweler's and purchased a diamond dog collar for Millicent. Millicent flashed her way about the city in the Walters' limousine, and two hours later every city editor in New York had dispatched photographers and reporters to the Van Buskirk.

In the morning Mrs. Walters, her dog, the hotel, Mr. Walters, and Mike the bartender were gloriously displayed upon the first page and "jumped inside." Chambermaids, clerks, bellboys were interviewed, and even the members of the corporation which owned the Van Buskirk. Then an evening paper, the favorite of the stout Mrs. O'Hara back in the Albemarle, appeared with this editorial theme, heavily leaded, down two columns of its back page:

"Bolshevism and Diamond Dog Collars."

"How Silly Women with Too Much Leisure on Their Hands Are Giving Foundation to Anarchists and the I. W. W."

Several effects followed quickly upon these events.

One of the most potent was the bill which Mr. Walters received from Millicent's jeweler calling for the payment of five thousand dollars. Mr. Walters proceeded to raise rents generally, and in particular those of the Albemarle. Also, he became distempered.

Then, whether it was from her sudden leap into fame or from some underdone slices of roast beef, Millicent, like an actress emerging from the white light of notoriety, likewise fell into a distemper. Mrs. Walters found herself at war on all fronts.

I have, since reaching this point of my chronicle, made a special study of distempered French poodles, and my observations lead me to assert that they are difficult to get along with. The virus of distemper is frequently in the teeth and nails and from Millicent it was communicated to one manicure, one bathmaid, one coiffeuse, one dietitian (male), and one bellboy.

From such small numbers grow general strikes. If ever the ghosts of Leon Trotsky and Nicholai Lenin walked through the backways of a New York hotel, that hotel was the Van Buskirk. Unrest seethed like frying fat.

First came the scratching by Millicent of one of the proudest, most exclusive, and haughtiest manicures to be found adjacent to Long Acre Square. That young woman, engaged to marry the head waiter in the grill (another inside revelation as to the carrying on of dynasties), began spreading anti-Millicent propaganda which had a telling effect among the waiters. A similar event occurred with the bath maid, who was in love with the chef de mayonnaise. Then the coiffeuse was nipped by the poodle's sharp teeth, and a week later a delegation waited upon the hotel's manager. The result was an ultimatum, and Judson T. Walters was politely informed by a superlatively affable clerk that the general manager was waiting, at Mr. Walters' convenience, to speak to Mr. Walters. Would Mr. Walters see the general manager now? Boy, show Mr. Walters to the manager's office!

Judson T. Walters, without clairvoyance, understood.

"What's the verdict?" he said, sitting down.

"I'm sorry, Mr. Walters. We'd like to accommodate you and Mrs. Walters here, but——"

"Not the dog?"

"Not the dog."

"Is that an ultimatum?"

"I'm sorry, I assure you. But—well, our help are threatening to quit, many of the guests are complaining——"

Banished.

MR. WALTERS walked out to the elevators and prepared to settle his domestic problem. At heart he had an instinctive sympathy for his wife, but he now prepared himself for a dissembling and hypocritical rôle.

When he entered his apartment his face betokened that of a man just emerged from battle. It was a purely histrionic mask and in a jerky, angry voice he informed Mrs. Walters of his interview with the manager below. It was almost the truth that he repeated to her with just sufficient fiction to place the hotel official in the rôle of a hard hearted, merciless animal hater, a man without respect for his guests, a coward, bullied by his employés and fearing the loss of Mrs. Walters' patronage as a severe blow to the social prestige of the Van Buskirk.

It was a long story he told and Mrs. Walters, holding Millicent upon her lap, listened carefully until her husband, by reason of touching every note from injured innocence to sacrilege, ended with this remarkable word performance:

"You see, dear? Now don't you worry your little head any more. Just listen to me. I raised the devil with the manager about this thing. I told him we wouldn't stay in this place another day. He begged me to be reasonable. Well, I finally said I'd put it up to you. Now, honey, I've got a vacant apartment in the Albemarle—one of the tenants—er—was—quit, and there's four big rooms which we could turn into a wonderful little home for Millicent, and you could get some one to take especially good care of her there. Jacobs could bring her to you here every day, and this blasted hotel would lose just that amount of money we are paying for Millicent's room and bath. What do you say?

The idea of revenge struck Mrs. Walters, but with feminine instinct she drew back for questions.

"Is this place—what did you say it was named?"

"The Albemarle." Mr. Walters almost choked upon the resonant word.

"Is it far from here?"

"It's on Park avenue."

"O, really? Then it must be lovely," said Mrs. Walters, whose knowledge of Park avenue extended not quite so far as the New York Central kept in its tunnel. "I'll take her there myself."

"Now, dear, I wouldn't do that," remonstrated her husband, conjuring up a picture of the tenement. "You're worn out. Let Jacobs take her over in the car." Then, he added quickly, as an adroit afterthought, "I'll tell you what, I'll take the poor little thing over myself."

Again Mrs. Walters' instinct lifted within her, or, in common parlance, she "smelled a rat." After a moment's thought she suddenly rose.

"No, dear, I'll take her there. Muzza won't let her 'ittle pettums get lonesome, will muzza? Would you mind calling the car, dear?"

Walters hesitated. He knew what a revelation the Albemarle would be to his dainty wife when she saw it. Yet his turgid words of "Park avenue" had led him to a point from which withdrawal would seem suspicious. He felt his wife's questioning stare. Well, either way, he was caught. He sighed and went to the telephone.

At the Albemarle.

IT was an hour later that Mrs. Walters glided softly over the cross streets of the city to Park avenue. With Millicent upon her lap, and the limousine filled almost to bursting with the dog's cushions, her bassinette, her soaps, her perfumes, her manicuring set, and a hundred other of the poodle's toilet and dietary necessities, Mrs. Walters puzzled upon the strangely changed attitude of her husband toward the dog. Once she was tempted to return and demand an explanation, for she felt certain the farther up Park avenue the car proceeded and the dingier the buildings grew, that there had been collusion against her and her pet.

Then she decided to gather up all the evidence possible and for the moment Millicent was forgotten as she gazed out of the window of her automobile at the range of railway, where the New York Central lifted itself from the depths of the asphalt into long streamers of glistening rails, semaphores, and periodic trains far into the upper reaches of the city. The car went on, the viaduct blotted out her view to the left, and on her right there reared the red brick tenements with their windows like sugary eyelids, their gaping doorways like the worn and rococo mouths of tinseled Coney Island monsters. She saw the cobbled street lined with pushcarts, with hordes of women bargaining for groceries, for stockings, for lamp wicks; a street that was the longest and narrowest department store in the world.

The sight fascinated her. Never before had Jacobs driven her into this quarter of New York City, nor, for that matter, into any other quarter where the fringe of gentility was even matted or stringy. The long and jeweled sweep of Fifth avenue, the cool curves of Riverside Drive, those boulevards of the city, she knew. But the pushcart district, the red brick barracks, the rumbling viaduct of the Central, this was new land, and something inside of her pained just a little.

The car turned to the left and passed under the viaduct, then went slowly north a few yards, and came to a halt. Mrs. Walters looked out. She saw a half dozen dirty children gazing with awe at her, and one or two of greater temerity came close to the car and rubbed their dirty fingers down the gloss of its paint. She saw a lolling figure upon the stone steps of the building at which she had stopped suddenly straighten when Jacobs, her chauffeur, spoke to him. Then the figure quickly took a pipe from his mouth, removed a soiled and shapeless mass of cloth from his head, and unlimbered in her direction. With a shock as of cold water striking her, Mrs. Walters realized that she was before the Albemarle—her husband's choice of a residence for Millicent!

In the next moment Jacobs had opened the door of the car.

"Beg pardon, ma'am, but this is it. Would you like to speak to the superintendent?"

Again there came a suggestion in her mind to turn back without further effort, and she clasped the woolly poodle closer to her. But a new curiosity was mounting within her, transcending her feeling of outrage, and she nodded assent to the man's question.

The children, meanwhile, had crowded up to the running board and she was treated to a fringe of comment, a pale, childish reflection of parental judgment which caught and held her attention.

"Gee, look at the pup!"

"How d'yer keep her clean?"

"Say, Missus, let me toot your horn, will yuh?"

"Hey, Moishe, she's kissin' it."

"Give us a ride, Missus, will you? We ain't never been in one of the things."

At this remark, Mr. Billett, humbled now that he faced the scintillating wealth of his employer, pushed the children roughly from the car and addressed himself to Mrs. Walters.

"Don't mind them kinds, lady, they don't know no better. Did yuh wanta see me?"

"Are you the superintendent of this—the Albemarle?"

"Yes'm, I'm the janitor. The name's kinda rubbed off, though."

"Is there a vacant apartment in the building?"

"Yes'm, fourth floor." Billett, from force of habit, almost quoted the rental, and was about to invite this magnificent person in when second thought prompted him to wait.

"I should like to see it," said Mrs. Walters, rising from her seat and preparing to alight.

"Sure, missus, I'll take yuh up. It's not what you're used to, I'm thinkin', though."

The Eyes of Children.

AS she passed over the sidewalk to the doorway of the Albemarle, the eyes of the children followed her wistfully. The sight of Billett, however, and the remembrance of his daily curses and threats kept them at a watchfulness, said, "Wuff!" deep in his throat as to an enemy.

"Tige!" said she, "Tige, is it you?"

Whereupon Tige scrambled out of the lilacs on the Westall side and put his paws all over the pretty gown.

"O, Tige," said she, "I wish——"

"Annice!" called her father, standing rotund and splendid in white evening flannels upon the now fading porch.

"Yes, papa," said she, and turned obediently. So neither Thomas nor Tige knew what it was she wished.

Now, the truth of the matter was that she hadn't at all intended to snub Thomas. It was only that she had been so taken by surprise. Indeed, until it was too late, she had not been quite sure. Besides, Thomas was bigger and handsomer than the boys she knew, and different—not to his disadvantage—in so many ways.

She did not know what a grand young lady she was, and how beautiful, and that she had that day broken a country heart, as that sort of breakage is understood.

I don't claim that she would have been sorry if she had known. More likely she would have been highly delighted. As it was, remembering Thomas' handsome face, her own heart ached and she had been about to say something to Tige about how she wished Thomas was the sort of young man that would come to parties.

Lilac Time Again.

ANOTHER six years, and another lilac time, and the Westall house being opened.

But this opening was unlike all other openings since first the house was built. Indeed, it was hardly an opening at all, being no more than a crack for two ladies to slip quietly through for the last time and then out again, forever.

No retainers now, no workmen to make all ready, no servants to open and air and warm the rooms or cars to drive up, and a whole van of trunks. Just Delia and Patrick Callahan, busy in the kitchen when the station flivver drove up through swishing gray rain. But their faces were bright and kind, more so, indeed, than ever in years before.

There was a fire in the living room, and the dust of the sad years between had been removed from all rooms that the ladies were likely to need while they gathered together their odds and ends of treasure to take away before the new owner should take possession. Not, of course, the old ballroom, which was big and bare and its floor covered with fallen plaster. Besides, as Delia sadly said, "It's little dancing they will be doing, I do be thinking."

And Delia had brought her own household linen, there being dearth of such things now at the big house, so there on the luncheon table, undimmed by time or careless laundry, glowed the identical shamrock and violet center piece which long ago had so occupied her attention—along with the horticultural activities of Patrick Callahan—that she had failed to notice what was going on inside the lilac hedge.

"At least, mother," said Annice softly, when Delia had deferentially withdrawn, "at least here's something to keep one from quite losing faith in human nature. They have nothing to gain from us now—and yet——"

She made a gesture to include the dainty food upon the table—fried chicken, muffins, and upon the sideboard, grandly enthroned, a layer cake and a glass bowl of preserved strawberries.

"And the center piece," Annice's eyes grew moist as she smiled. "I suppose it's her chiefest treasure. I remember so well when she was working on it. Yet I was only a baby."

But Mrs. Westall's eyes did not brighten, nor their melancholy gaze turn aside from that steady pour of rain down the glass.

Her trouble was taking her hard—hard! She would not be a coward—not with a daughter like Annice—but she must have a little more time to get her breath. She was too old to swim strongly at once in such a sea of troubles—what was all this the child was talking about faith and kindness? Delia? O, yes. Annice believed in Delia's goodness. Well, let her! She would have liked well enough to believe in it herself, only——

Later in the day, while they were upstairs, and the irritation of rain upon glass became more than she could bear, and when Annice, going about with cobwebs in her hair from rummaging in old closets, was getting a little too preachy about not being downhearted and how good Delia was, suddenly Mrs. Westall let loose upon the girl's brave head the bitterest wind of her knowledge, explaining curtly her lack of enthusiasm about this kindly seeming Delia.

"O, yes, yes!" said she, "a good soul and all that, but——" she held back a moment, and then with a rush, "I've always thought it was she who took your baby jewelry."

"My baby jewelry?" Annice looked up dazedly from a pile of pasteboard boxes which she was gathering together, empty boxes which had once held all sorts of expensive things, pictured and glazed and beribboned, the sort you keep, if you are frugal minded, for children to play with.

"What baby jewelry?" She stood up with a perplexed frown and the air of one striving to make some memory come clear.

"Of course, you don't remember," said her mother, "you were too little. Still—eight years old—not so little. Don't you remember wearing your coral to Sarah Blinn's party?"

"I remember the party."

"The coral wasn't of much value, of course, but it had been your grandmother Westall's when she was a baby. Of couse, I had no real proof against Delia. And I was so fond of her that very likely if I had I should have passed it over. But the day after that party we missed the coral and the baby pins. Delia had dressed you. You remember how she used to come to the house and help out on special occasions after she was married, and you see—who would fancy coral and baby pins except a young woman who had been married a couple of years and had a baby of her own? I tried to think I was mistaken. I couldn't accuse her outright or turn a detective on her—and she with that little baby to look after. I gave her every chance to think it over and bring them back—told her how fond I was of them, and everything. Incidentally there was a rather expensive bar pin that disappeared along with them. It had been requisitioned at the last minute when you shed a button. It would mean something to us today—that bar pin. Ah, my dear! I've been a brute to tell you. Delia's a good soul, and I dare say it was some one else. Keep your illusions!"

But Annice's face had not grown sorry and disappointed; it was joyously clearing. She clapped her hands childishly.

"O, but! Why, mother! Why, it wasn't Delia at all. Wait!" she commanded hysterically. "Wait till I go and—O, how jolly!"

Digging for the Old Days.

THE rain had stopped, but the clouds hung low, and every blade of overlong grass held its teaspoonful of water to pour over her feet as she rushed through it to the lilac hedge, thrust aside the close ranked growth, and entered the little forest. The full blown lilacs had been nearly battered to pieces by the rain and at the roots of the wet, black trunks lay a purple carpet. The cairn was sprinkled with blossoms also. She brushed them away and removed the stones one by one. How it came back! O, how it came back! Her childhood. How she wanted to be little again, as little as that day, playing here with that splendid little fellow and back in the house, dear, dear daddy, so splendid and rich, giving good times with both hands—good times now storm scattered like these fallen lilac flowers, and no more than these to be gathered again.

If—only—among the buried coral and baby pins she could find one of the old days shining up—just one!

Stone after stone! What industry had gone to their piling? But then that little boy had been pretty strong, and, of course, he had done most of the piling. So odd to think he should be the one to buy in the old place when it had to be sold to satisfy the mortgage. Just how had he managed to be so successful and climb so high and strong while dear old dad had been losing his hold at the ladder's top and tumbling, tumbling—O, honorably always—but still—down—

Vaguely she had understood that there was a great farming project afoot, that all these rich bottom lands were to be gravely marshaled into usefulness, little farms absorbed and all waste spaces—and this dear derelict of rich man's folly with its ruined formal garden, its golf links, and its farm, whereas her father used jokingly to say the milk cost him as much as champagne.

Well, no doubt, it was better that these things should change and he had been a very nice little boy and now was doubtless the right sort of a man. He had seemed to be, that day years ago, when she had met him while she was riding and dropped her crop and he had picked it up. If she could have been sure that he knew and remembered her—but he wouldn't, a frivolous thing like her, and he so old and useful and busy a person even then. How strong and capable he had looked, with that great chain slung over his shoulder as if it weighed nothing at all. Since the old place had to go to some one she was glad on the whole the some one was Thomas Rider.

Had he forgotten, she wondered, that he had buried some marbles along with this treasure? She would have to put them carefully back after taking out her own share. Would he ever dig them up and find that hers was gone? Not likely.

And her mother, suspecting poor, honest Delia, all these years. What a shame! What won't children do if they're given half a chance!

Near, but Far Apart.

THE earth was wet and sticky and black under the stones and the fire shovel she had brought with her from the kitchen would not work well, so she grubbed it out with her fingers. Lucky the weather was too wet for men to be at work over in the field or she might be heard and interrupted. Or was that somebody after all squashing about in the mud there? She stopped digging and sat very still. A man was out there. She could see the yellow shine of a slicker through the twigs. Somebody from the mighty association of modern scientific farmers—perhaps Thomas W. Rider himself. More than one, or else he was talking to himself.

"Efficiency, efficiency," he was saying. "After all, old man, that's the watchword for us. Clean cultivation, yes. We must have it, even if we have to root out the old hedge. Well, for the sake of food they let in the Nile upon old Egypt's temples. Clean cultivation, and root out old hedges and old dreams. Dreams are like weeds, old fellow, and some of 'em so pretty its hard to let them go, but we can't let them take up room that something else ought to have."

The listener was a silent one. No reply coming, the scientific farmer presently resumed after a pause, in which he had been idly snapping the wet twigs.

"For dreams of a woman which lead nowhere but to misery we substitute a dream that becomes a fact. Acres of growing things—work our egotism and what we call our trouble into the soil—dig it deep—plow it under——"

There was another long pause. He whistled a rather sad little tune, then——

"Silly pride, spoiled with money, unfit to be the wife of any man with work to do, treacherous—no, no, not that! Just a child, and belonging to a different sort of people. And it was over years ago.

"Like as not she's married by now, at least the papers said—but poor kid, the papers don't say as much about her now as they used. The mighty are fallen and the old order changeth, and old dogs grow blind and ought to be put out of their troubles—only we put it off somehow. How would it do tomorrow, old chap—along with the lilacs? Anyway, you oughtn't to be out now with all that rheumatism. Rabbits? At your age? Come out of it!"

Annice sat very still, as an old, old face pressed through the leaves and looked in. But the eyes turned toward her wore upon their kind, jolly brown, a film that would never pass in this world.

"Come out of it, Tige," entreated the voice from the field, "you old fool, you! I can't help you out if you get stuck there," it worried. "O, Tige, you doddering centenarian. I must put you out tomorrow!"

But Tige was sniffing at his quarry, whining at the hands that stroked his head, while his tail thrashed furiously back and forth against the wet bushes. And suddenly he barked, or said, rather:

"Here, master! I've found something for you, master! Something fine! Here, quickly, before it runs away!"

So Tommy Rider parted the bushes and looked in.

"O," said Tommy Rider.

Annice's wrist was pressed against her mouth—the old baby gesture of trouble and embarrassment, and her eyes above it were wide and as gray as rain.

"I'm digging it up," she said, in a small voice, when she had stared as long as she was able to bear. "Would you like your marbles?"

"Marbles?" said Tommy Rider, "marbles—O, yes."

"You'd forgotten, I suppose," said Annice, growing a little bolder since he also seemed badly frightened.

"Not exactly forgotten," said Tommy Rider. "D-don't you want some help?"

"There isn't room for two people in here," said Annice.

"There used to be." He was beginning to grin a little.

"But that," said she, "was a long time ago."

"All of that," said Tommy Rider.

"Are you really going to tear out this hedge?" said Annice.

"You've been listening in!" His face, which had been rather white, turned a furious red. Annice, also turning red, bent again to her task, working rapidly, as if oblivious of her watchers. Tige, perceiving the nature of this task, thrust his big paws into the hole also and began to dig with her. If it was woodchucks, of course, he must help. His nose said nothing about game there, but her judgment might be sounder than his. Anyway, he wanted to be useful.

Tommy laughed—a short gulp under his breath to tear away foolish spectacle, and began to tear away the bushes that kept him out. But Tige and Annice together had reached the blackened and rotting top of the box before he had joined them.

"You can be the one to take it out," said Annice.

It had become a part of the soil, and a lilac root had wrapped it about, holding it fast, as he had to cut it free with his great clasp knife and then work and tug while Tige and Annice stood respectfully out of the way. At the last wrench its whole side tore away, the wood rotted to pulp and the corroded tin box came neatly out. Rust had sealed the cover of this also, but the great knife made nothing of the tin and straightway the coral, the baby pins, the glittering brooch that would mean so much to two impoverished ladies in black, and a grimy calico bag of marbles lay before them.

"There you are!" said Tommy, pouring them triumphantly into her lap. "Gee! look at those old alleys of mine! I bet I thought my contribution was worth more than yours."

Annice made no answer. She was going to cry. After all these days of holding back and being cheerful with her mother, she was going to do it now. She fought hard—hoped wildly for a moment as the tears came through in spite of everything that they might pass for rain along with the general wetness of things—then gave up suddenly and cast herself down among the lilac flowers, making mournful sounds, while marbles, coral, and brooch were scattered in the trampled mud.

"I say," said Tommy, after a tense silence, "I can't stand this, you know."

Neither could Tige. He whimpered and tangled his rough old tongue in her hair as he blindly sought her face.

"Is—your husband—over at the house?" and as she did not answer, "you're are married, aren't you—there was something in the papers about your going to be——"

She managed to wriggle a negative with her head and shoulders, and as soon as Tommy understood this clearly, he picked her up, all wet and muddied, and with the little fallen lilac flowers sticking in her hair; and she had the rest of her cry against the warm, dry coat inside his slicker.

When the tempest had a little subsided and still her face remained hidden against him, he experimented a little. He kissed her wrist, there being less mud on that than on her hands. She took it very quietly.

He experimented a little further.

"There wouldn't be any going back, would there? I mean to those jolly times we had when we were kids. You wouldn't care to, that is, I mean—housekeeping in earnest and all that. What I mean to say," he floundered, "it's always been you—always."

"We might—try!" said Annice.

Tommy gave a sort of viking shout which sent Tige into a spasm of barking.

"If you won't root up the hedge," bargained Annice.

distance, but the moment Mrs. Walters had disappeared into the shadows of the entrance they crowded in, talking and exclaiming and making childish speculations as to whether the "swell" was coming to the place to live.

Mrs. Walters followed the janitor in. The odor of cooking offended her nostrils and she was amazed at the din that assailed her eardrums as she climbed the three tortuous flights. Then she found herself in a narrow chested set of rooms that seemed to run into each other as if the walls were gelatinous and could hardly hold up. They were covered with a dark brown paper that in places hung in strips or showed grayish where the plaster was revealed in uneven spots.

"Would you mind opening a window, Mr. ———."

"Billett, ma'am. William Billett."

"Thank you. O—Mr. Billett, did you say people lived here and just moved out?"

"Yes'm, they was payin' twenty-two an' we had to raise it to thirty. They——"

"Thirty? Thirty dollars a month for this?"

Her arms gave an involuntary jerk, and Millicent squeaked in pain. Mrs. Walters looked at the dog, and then something on the floor caught her eye. She walked over and touched the object with her foot. It was a doll, a small, celluloid doll such as babies play with in their tubs. It was streaked with dirt and something red and sticky like soft candy or jelly seemed to have been smeared upon its face.

"Was there a baby here, too, Mr. Billett?"

"Yes'm, the Erdmans have a k——a baby. They took a furnished room downstairs——"

"A furnished room—one room—one like these?"

"Yes'm," said Billett deprecatingly. "Some people'd do anything to save money."

"But——" Mrs. Walters' mind was in a confusion of crossed thoughts and pictures, "but how can three—and a baby live in one room? O——!"

And then, as she looked at the separate rooms of this apartment, her mind selected details, evidence against the man who had tried to trick her, who owned this rookery. Judson T. Walters was due to stand trial.

She noted the bathroom, a compartment actually two feet by four, with a tub in which a six year old child would have been cramped. The plumbing shaky and dripping. The tub gray and leaden, the floor eroded by water, the planking loose and soft. In her mind she ticketed the multitude of noises, the water roaches, the lowering clouds of brown paper, the windows, warped, bulging in their frames like things overfed.

As she took in these details, Billett kept up a running fire of remarks, about the work he did, about the work of his wife, which he carefully minimized, the irritability of the tenants, the general uselessness of doing anything for them.

"A tribe of Indians'd treat a house better'n this," she heard the janitor say. "They ain't no use doin' anything for them, Mrs. Walters. They wouldn't appreciate it."

Mrs. Walters finished her survey and started toward the door. She descended the dark and odorous stairs amid the mad symphony of piano, drum, and varied human voices. She shuddered and clutched Millicent closer to her as she emerged, with Billett at her heels, into the daylight of the avenue, into the midst of a score of waiting children, who greeted her and her poodle with more exclamations.

A stout woman with a copy of an evening paper in her hand was also occupying the stone step of the entrance as she passed, and a cutting remark came to her ears:

"The lady ain't goin' to take the apartment. Git out of the way, kids, so the pup kin breathe."

"You shut up," growled Billett, who had also heard the words. "Who'd live here with the likes of you blockin' the door?"

Mrs. Walters walked to her waiting car, but the sting of those last words of the stout woman had brought the crimson to her cheeks and it was almost in a whisper that she directed Jacobs to return to the Van Buskirk. Then she gave the expectant Billett a tip, the door of her limousine was slammed, and in the next moment, to a chorus of childish shouts, she was carried away.

Inspiration.

ON the return trip of her automobile Mrs. Walters missed the panorama of the city upon which at first she had been so intent. Instead, through her mind, as if it were a film screen, there ran a recurrence of the pictures she had left behind her in the tenement. And, like a film, every appearance of words that flashed upon her mental vision burned whitely in this phrase:

"Git out of the way, kids, so the pup kin breathe."

She wrenched herself free from this distressing repetition and tried to think of the more immediate problem that she was approaching at the rate of twenty miles an hour.

What would the result be of her interview with Mr. Walters? She resented bitterly his attempt to get rid of Millicent by placing the poodle in the tenement and she was grim with determination to make him feel her resentment.

And then came these words again:

"Git out of the way, kids, so the pup kin breathe."

She straightened up in her seat. The pain of this phrase brought an idea into her mind like a lightning flash revealing the objects of the night, and it seemed to be one which satisfied several angles of her problem. She picked up the speaking tube and asked Jacobs to draw the machine to the curb. The chauffeur left his seat and opened the door.

"Jacobs," she said, "I'm anxious to find a good home for Millicent. It—there has been an unfortunate occurrence at the hotel and I do not wish to keep her there. Do you know of any one who would like my dog well enough to be kind to her?"

"Well, ma'am," began the chauffeur, awkwardly, "if you'd expect cologne water baths an' cream an' cheese, I don't know. You see, ma'am, a dog's an expense these days. I got a little home of my own an' my wife would like a dog, but we couldn't do what you do for her. We got a little girl, too."

A sense of her own futility suddenly flooded Mrs. Walters. Why did every one speak in terms of children the moment she placed her foot beyond the childless portals of the Hotel Van Buskirk? Children! Then, with no apparent connection to any thought she had in mind, there came, as if upon the air, the name "Lillian." It seemed like the faint tinkling of a bell in her ears and like a vignette she saw dimly a piquant, laughing face and dreamy chiffon and pink rosebud ribbons.

"Jacobs," said Mrs. Walters, rising quickly and placing Millicent upon the pile of cushions beside her. "I shall go back to the hotel in a taxi. You take the dog to your home—and—and give her to your little girl. And then, Jacobs, go back to the Albemarle and ask the janitor to take you to the woman who lived in that vacant apartment. When you see her tell her and the janitor that Mrs. Walters has made arrangements for her to move back and that the rent will be the same as before." She stopped speaking a moment, then added: "When you come back to the hotel please say nothing about these arrangements to Mr. Walters."

It was half an hour later that Mrs. Walters entered her apartments in the Van Buskirk. She found Mr. Walters in the state of a small boy expecting a whipping, and with that inherent psychology of women she knew how to treat with such a mood. He had smoked innumerable cigars, interspersed with a dozen cigarets, and had she kissed him she would have discerned evidence of other fortification.

She leisurely removed her hat and gloves, stood before a mirror, and, still maintaining her silence, watched his reflection narrowly as she went through the maneuvers of arranging her hair and applying some face powder. The air grew heavier as she continued these slow and methodical movements, and she saw her husband begin to pace up and down the adjoining room, casting a guilty glance at her with every turn he made.

When she had given him sufficient time to tie up each separate and expectant nerve she calmly walked to the telephone and took down the receiver.

"Let me speak to the manager, please."

Judson T. Walters halted his pacing.

"Hello," Mrs. Walters called sweetly over the telephone. "Is this the manager? This is Mrs. Walters—yes. I want to tell you that Mr. Walters and I have decided to give up our apartments here. What? Yes. We shall quit Monday. Thank you."

No Place for a Child.

SHE returned the receiver to the hook and faced her husband for a moment and then took a chair. At this Mr. Walters exploded into speech.

"Look here, Martha," he exclaimed, "what is all this about?"

"I should imagine you would know."

She laid a heavy accent upon the word "you."

"It's all over this damned dog."

"What did you say?"

"It's all because of the dog. Well, what could I do? We were ordered to take her out."

"Judson," said Mrs. Walters, evenly, "have you ever been in the Albemarle?"

"Er—occasionally. Why?"

"Why? What a question! You don't deserve to own property!"

"Indeed!" said Mr. Walters with some pique. "Perhaps you could manage it better—and get diamond collars for dogs."

"Judson, please remember I am not at the Albemarle on Park Avenue." Her words cut with their sarcasm. "Yes, I do think I could manage it better, and that is exactly what I was coming to."

"You mean——"

"I mean I want you to give me that building—what do you do, make out a lease or deed, I believe?"

"Now, don't be foolish, dear. You don't want to bother about that place. It's not a woman's work. I'm sorry you—you went there."

"Will you give me that place or not?" Mrs. Walters rose from her chair in the manner of one about to take a decisive action.

"But—dear—why—why do you want it?"

"Because it isn't fit for a dog to live in, if you want to know."

Mr. Walters lit a cigar and allowed himself enough time to ponder upon the strange ways of women and their pets. Suddenly he said:

"It seems fit enough for children."

"Judson!"

Mrs. Walters turned away and walked toward the adjoining room.

"I'm sorry, Martha. Please. I didn't mean to hurt you. Certainly you can have the building. Go into the real estate business if you wish. Fix it up and make it a ken—a private home for Millicent. Do anything you wish, dear, but don't be angry because I was hasty."

Mrs. Walters turned.

"Then you will give the place to me and I can manage it just as I please?"

"Of course, dear, anything."

"Will you make out the papers tomorrow?"

"The first thing. You are going to fix up that apartment you saw?"

"I certainly am. Why Judson, it was awful. To think of even Millicent living there. That bathroom, and those terrible windows, the floors—ugh!"

"Do as you please, so long as you love your husband in the bargain. I shall make that part of the deed. The consideration, we call it. 'In consideration of love and affection upon the party of the second part, the party of the first part deeds, conveys——'" Walters laughed in relief, and came to his wife. He placed his arms about her, then, suddenly remembering, he asked:

"But honey, why do you wish to leave the hotel?"

"Because," said Mrs. Walters, slowly, and with a strange look in her eyes as she held her gaze up to her husband, "this hotel isn't a fit place for a child to live in."

"No, suh; no, suh; I ain't 'quainted wid nary size dog by dat name." Nat was now free. He executed a couple of back steps, and glanced behind, to make sure that his running room was clear.

"Stop! Stop!" Razilly ordered. "He's the man you were talking about with Dr. Humphreys? Just came home from Central America?"

"Who? Me? I ain't spoke no word 'bout dat man."

"You do know him. Where is he? I'll choke it out of you."

Flight.

HAVING already had an overdose of choking, Nat failed to remain and let that crazy Frenchman grab his throat again. He made one jump, and Razilly's arm missed him, as Nat whirled, snatched off his hat and retired from that section of the United States. Razilly also got a flying start, but gave up chasing a rabbit that also had wings.

Only once did Nat glance back and saw Razilly rushing toward the steps where he'd left his rifle—which supplemented Nat's speed. It would have taken a swift bullet to catch him before he dodged behind the hedge of cherokee roses, and squeezed through a hole in the fence, which was known solely to Nat and the dogs. Never did a hole come in handier.

"Dere now," he gasped, as he tumbled on all fours into the pasture. "Done got my bizness in a jam. I ain't gwine to tarry an' 'splain nothin'. Mister Razzle ack too hasty."

Clayton's bungling go-between had unundoubtedly got their business in a jam. Things might have continued to rock along lazily at Bennington, if Nat had only slipped the note to Adelaide instead of placing it in the hands of her husband. A lady always understands, but husbands are very dense.

Of course, if Mr. Razilly would listen to no explanation, Uncle Nat felt compelled to depart. Which he did. It was not a leisurely nor a dignified departure, but a duck legged hustle across the back yard, and a headlong dive through the hedge. Nevertheless he succeeded in departing.

For one tense moment Uncle Nat crouched behind the cherokee roses, and batted both eyes to observe what further action Mr. Razilly proposed to take. Mr. Razilly had already taken so much action that Uncle Nat was willing to let the whole thing drop right where it was. But the Frenchman showed no desire to let the matter drop; he was fixing to do something else, fixing to do a whole lot of things, but didn't know exactly what. Nat could see him charging around the back yard, frowning and swearing and undecided. First Mr. Razilly seemed to be studying the note, and glaring into the house as if he had half a notion to rush in and settle with Mrs. Razilly. Then he gazed towards the hedge behind which Nat disappeared, and considered the bay filly under saddle.

"Lordee," Nat groaned, "ef he gits on dat hoss, I'm bleeged to reach de big woods."

While Nat was limbering up for another heat, he saw Razilly glance again at the hedge, then rush to the steps and snatch his rifle. Whereupon old Nat rose like a quail and resumed his departure.

"Tell the Truth!"

INSTEAD of chasing the runaway Nat, Mr. Florian Razilly went bounding up the back steps, and raced along the vast hallway of Bennington House. From afar off Adelaide heard him coming. Her door stood slightly ajar, and through its crack she saw his insane fury. Never had Florian seemed so maddened, and Adelaide thought of fleeing across the hall to take refuge with Barbara. Too late. The demented husband might catch her. Of course, she could clear herself if he would only listen; and the terrified little figure hesitated as she glanced about for a hiding place. No. She must face him, be calm, and gain time. Like many volatile women, Adelaide got excited over trifles, but could summon the most amazing composure to meet an actual danger. Frightened as she was, she sat down quickly at her dressing table and became occupied with some intricate rearrangement of hair. A mouthful of hairpins would serve as her pretext for silence, while Florian talked himself out. Then she could handle him.

Her door opened violently, and Adelaide first saw the muzzle of a rifle; not that Florian planned to threaten her, but the weapon chanced to be in his hand. Then Florian himself towered like a god of vengeance upon her threshold. One moment he glared in crushing stillness, before producing the proof as he accused her:

"Madame, here's a note from your lover."

Adelaide had meant to be self contained, to hold her temper as well as her tongue; but when French met French she sprang up with face as white as his was red, and exclaimed:

"My lover! You insult me!"

"Spare your theatricals, madame," he mocked. "I've caught you. Read that!"

"Let me see it!" She held out her hand for the note, but he snatched it away.

"So this is what you've been doing! This is why you've been taking long rides? Meetings at the lake? With a criminal?"

"Hush, Florian, hush. People will hear you."

"I want them to hear! The whole world! I shall proclaim it!"

"But listen to me, listen——"

"Why listen? Can I not read? Can I not see?" He tossed the rifle on their bed, kicked his helmet into a corner, and moved, crouching, toward her, with convulsive fingers working like a strangler's, "Did you meet Stuart Clayton?"

"I'm not sure, I——"

"Not sure? Mon dieu! Madame is not sure!" This set Razilly wild again, ruffling his hair and raving like a madman; which had the effect of steadying Adelaide as he whirled and thrust his face into her own.

"Madame, I command you to tell the truth."

She threw back her head and laughed, hysterically, "How can I tell the truth, until ——"

"No, mon dieu! You cannot tell the truth."

"Not until I see the note," she finished.

"Ah! His note. From his dear hands! No! I tear it up! I trample it under my foot! I spit upon it!" But Florian did not tear nor spit; he only trampled, and struck tragic attitudes, until Adelaide knew that he was running short of breath. So she reached out again and said, almost quietly, "Give me the note."

"There! Take it!"

He folded his arms and devoured her face as she received her condemnation. It might well have been a laundry list, for Adelaide never batted an eye nor showed a tremor of guilt while she tried to decipher the scrawl. He grew impatient, he flung apart his arms.

"Well! Well! Have you no defense?"

"What is this word, Florian?" she inquired, with the tip of a polished nail pointing out the puzzle.

"That?" he answered scornfully. "Those words are plain. 'Our last meeting.' What about your last meeting?"

"It's too funny," she chuckled. "Of course, this is 'our last meeting,' but it looks more like 'one lost mutton.' Florian, really you must complain to the postoffice authorities. This note is not for me."

"Not for you?" His dark eyes contracted to a keen little point, sharp as his question, "You think to trick me like a fool? See! There's your name, A-d-e-l-a-i-d-e." He turned over the envelope and showed the address. "Now, Madame, no more of your lies. Did you meet him?"

"I? Tell you a lie? Now, I tell you nothing." Adelaide fronted him defiantly, and repeated, "Nothing! Nothing!"

"You will tell me! I must find out!"

"Then find out for yourself—or ask Barbara."

The husband fumed in helpless rage. He could not strike her, nor shoot, nor choke; and even his muddled senses realized that no human power could force Adelaide to talk.

"Madame," he said, "it is shameful to inquire of strangers, but I shall ask Barbara."

Then they both turned as Barbara's voice came to them from the opposite room, "Oh, Florian," she called, "did you speak to me?"

"Yes, Barbara, yes." Adelaide answered quickly. "Do come here, please, please."

Now Florian saw that Adelaide's resistance was nearly gone, that she was calling for help.

SKIN DEEP

By Mildred Frisby

A Skyscraper Romance in Which a Married Man Collides with a Flapper's Philosophy of Life.

"YOUR eyes are like an old, old memory!"

Larry Kane slipped from his typewriter the piece of paper on which he had written the single sentence, folded it into an oblong, and walked self-consciously to the switchboard at the far end of the office.

A glamorous girl smiled up at him.

Wordlessly he put the folded sheet on her desk. She nodded understandingly.

A moment later he watched her read it, watched from his own corner, watched with the exquisite hurt tugging at him like sentimental banal things—moonlight, a white hand in the dark, rain.

There was a time when Larry Kane wasn't spoken of as "Old Larry." He was "Young Kane" then, promising, cynical, pointed out. The promise still lurked in his eyes, the cynicism had brought a droop to his mouth, but he was no longer pointed out.

"Young Kane" had startled his world with a group of short stories, "Miseraria." You remember? All about such hitherto unspoken things as sordid old men, vile women with hearts of gold, virtuous women with souls of dross.

But another day and Larry was forgotten. A newer, smarter generation had arisen, a generation of knowing babies who prattled of everything and disposed of everything with a gesture. They tabooed Barrie on the ground that he was "sticky"—"saccharine." And Larry had read his beloved "Sentimental Tommy" eleven times!

Just now "Old Larry" was writing advertisements for the brisk and ever expanding firm of Hedgewirth's Advertising Agency.

Not that it ever was of importance to Larry that "Gladstone's Pig Knuckles Are the Tastiest Tid-Bit for the Table," or that "Fanny's Frocks Are Fashioned for Flapper and Forty Alike." He was just fair and a plodder and he liked the game.

There was a Mrs. Larry, a flat somewhere on the west side—and Daphne!

Perhaps Daphne should have been introduced at the beginning. Surely there was no one quite like her. A goddess fashioned of Babylonian clay! She had breezed into the office in April. Larry had shyly hoped her name would be April. When she told him it was Daphne Forrest he laughed at the brazen theatric quality of its sound, Daphne Forrest! It was even better than he had hoped.

Her face veered sharply from the moving picture type of beauty that is becoming a national standard—see Gus Weinkopt's gallery of screen stars de luxe. The artist Larry noted her fine hair line, patrician ankles, and the faint circle girding her neck.

Renaissance, he thought, was the name for her soft mouth, and her clear eyes with the oriental lift at the corners.

And her hands! Larry had once scribbled: "With such hands as these was the music of the lyre first heard!"

In reality they saw but little of each other—unfinished notes, mysterious messes at the luncheon hour (known to the initiated as Mrs. Stein's famous Irish stews), a bit of a smile caught from ascending or descending elevators. It was enough. A minute is an age in Arcady.

Often and more often Daphne would talk garrulously of her gentleman friend. The image of her friend clotted in Larry's mind—a tall young man with large teeth, three straw hats, a ruby ring, and a ruthless knowledge of the insurance business.

O, Larry knew the type—"Yes, sir; yes, sir, I agree with you. But have you ever considered an insurance policy as an investment for your old age, for the kiddies, the little wife?"

What a child Daphne was!

Today as he watched her a desire scorched Larry, a desire to tell her of his love. Of course, there was Ethel. He would never leave her. Ethel was—Ethel. A fellow would be a bounder to leave a woman like her.

But to tell Daphne of the love that flowed through him like clean air—no harm in that. There might even be a sad little scene of renunciation. She would see him no longer. A gauze of tears over her dear eyes as she told him that.

Then again she might rise quickly—she had a pretty habit of doing that—reach for his hand, and tell him she would go with him.

The Pyrenees. Her white hands bronzed by the sun's alchemy. Buenos Aires. A sensuous tropical river pleached by pink flowering trees.

Larry stopped thinking. He was a fool. The first scene was more to his liking.

At 4 o'clock Daphne left her desk and walked out of the office. At a minute and a half past 4 Larry followed. The bookkeeper, reformed roué that he is, made a smacking sound with his thick lips. The office boy snickered.

At the doubtful table in the sweet shop downstairs Larry and Daphne faced each other. Daphne smiled mildly.

"I went to White City last night; I'm so tired," she began.

"Daphne, what would you say if I told you I loved you? Truly! Dearly!"

His shoulders hunched toward her. Underneath the table one of his hands tightly clasped the other. He had an odd feeling that he was shaking hands with a stranger.

"Of course, you know about Ethel. I never would want to hurt her. But you ought to know. You do know."

Daphne arose quickly, looked at him in puzzlement.

"Where do you get that stuff at?" she almost shouted—the purest Chicagoese. "And you a married man! I like that! Can't a girl eat a strawb'ry soda without being took for a vamp? Huh!"

She turned from him elaborately.

Closing hour.

Larry stood at the door of the building and watched the rain spattering the world with clean scent.

He had forgotten something.

He felt in the pockets of his one coat. Pipe, matches, change. They were all there.

His rubbers! That was it. O, yes, it was raining!

He entered the outer cubbyhole of the office and turned to smile at Rudie, the owl-eyed office boy.

A voice was floating over the partition, indignant, triumphant, feminine.

"Can you im-a-gine him? The old boob! I wonder what he took me for. It isn't as if he had any class. And say, Lil, you oughta read all them crazy notes he put on my desk. Really, Lil."

Larry's hand seemed weighted on the doorknob. He turned to go. A Parthian shot caught him as he reached the corridor.

"Just as if I'd even think of an old fool like him when I got Fred."

The elevator man smiled at Larry. But Larry jerked toward the stairway.

Closing hour.

Larry stood at the door of the building and watched the rain tapping on the walks like the silver heels of dancing girls long dead.

He had forgotten something.

He felt in the pockets of his one coat. Pipe, matches, change, keys. They were all there.

What was it?

O, yes!

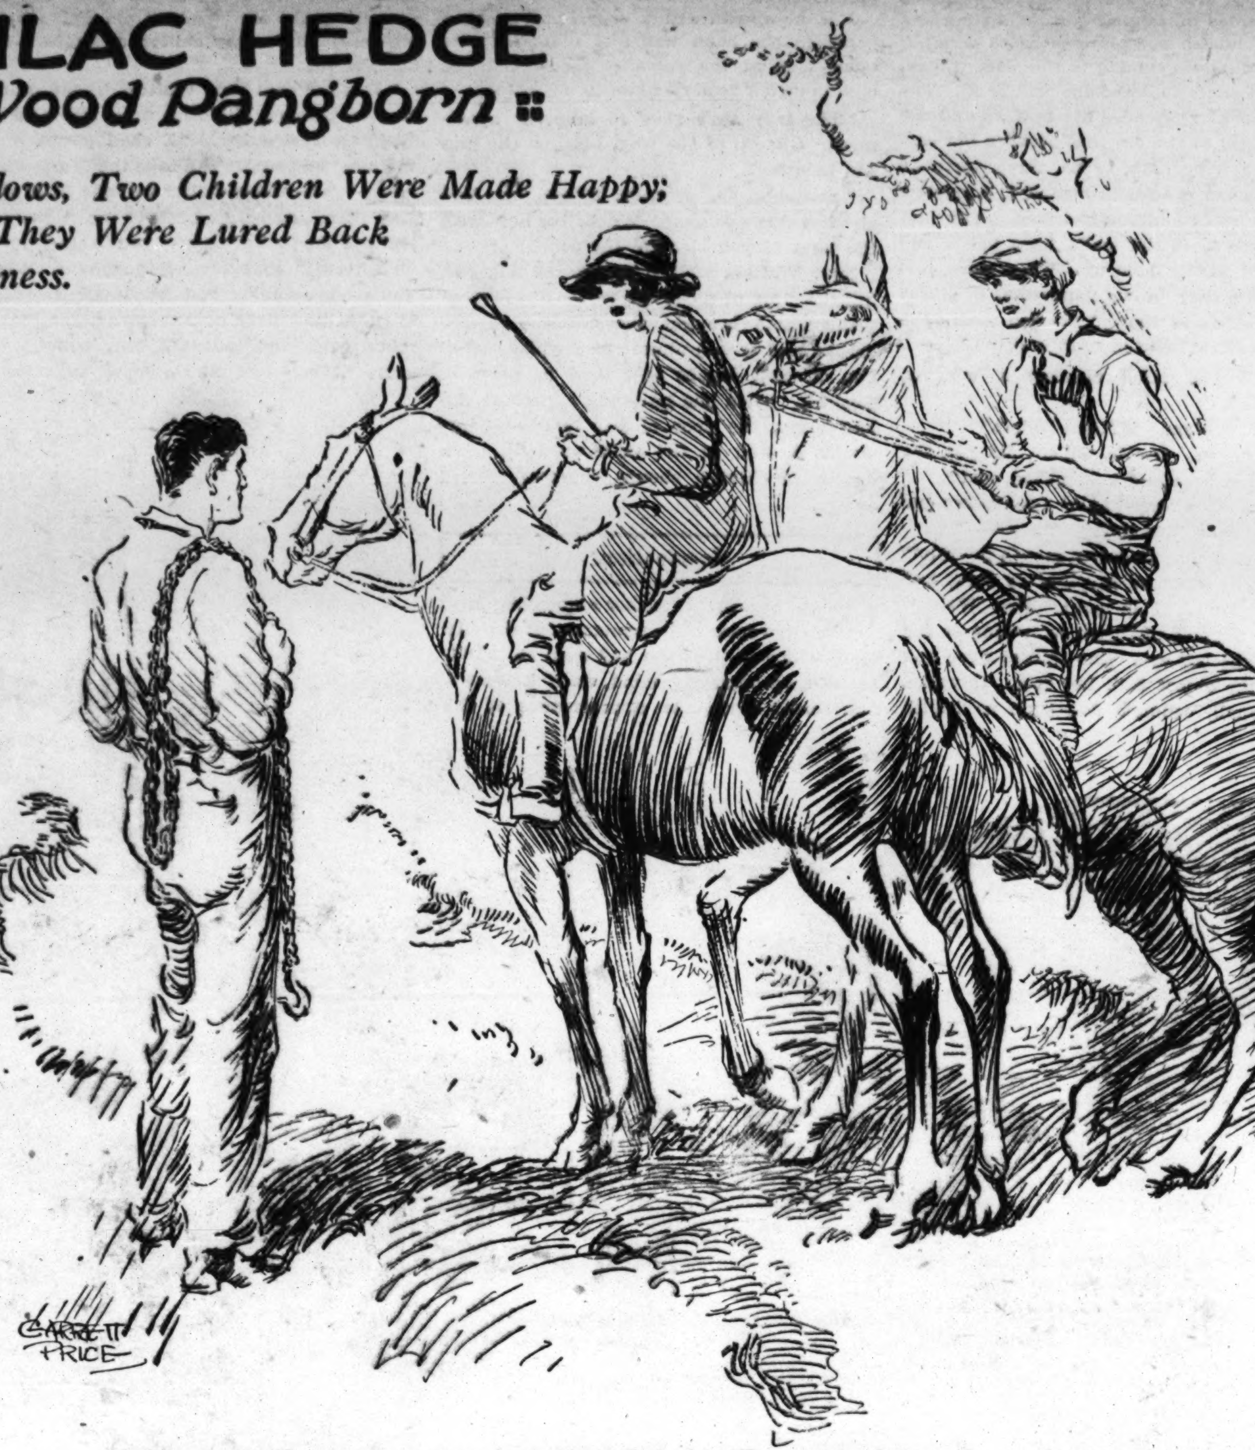
"Her mouth—poppy petals against the cold moon of her face."

He put the words away. A sorry smile shuttered his face. He turned the shabby collar of his coat around his ears, and lifted his face to the silver splinters.

The LILAC HEDGE

by Georgia Wood Pangborn

Playing in Its Fragrant Shadows, Two Children Were Made Happy; Then, as Man and Woman, They Were Lured Back to It in Search of Life Happiness.



Perhaps he would even have ventured upon some little friendly, reminiscent remark . . . but his grin faded.

WHO planted the lilacs, and when, no one knew. They were certainly there when the Westall house was built. Presumably they went back to the founding of the Rider house, between which and the Westall house they made a glorious thick wall, twenty-five feet at least from side to side, and extending for a distance of two hundred feet from the street toward the wood lot.

At the building of the Westall house they had been pruned back even to the surveyors' line between the two properties and held there with iron precision, so the Riders had them all now.

But Annice Westall knew and cared nothing for boundary lines, neither did Delia—neither did the fragrance of the lilacs. Annice had made it clear that she would be really good and allow Delia to go on with her embroidering only when allowed to play down by the hedge, so Delia had the gardener put a rustic seat there, and it became an established custom. Besides, they were in full view from the Westall window, and Annice's mother could always know where to put her finger on them.

Then Annice found that she could get inside the hedge. Along its outer edge the suckers stood as close as basket work and limber with sap, but, once pushed aside, you got to where the real trunks of the trees were, crooked and black and rough, and about their roots clear patches of forest floor when the small fry of suckers had been banished for many years. There were flecks of short piled green moss on the smooth bare earth, and that was all, except endless forest, and, far overhead, above the heart shaped green mottling of the leaves, a sky of amethyst; for the lilacs were then in full flower.

As Annice sat there with the back of her wrist against her mouth and her eyes very large, desires and plans ran riot within her; also dim race memories of jungle life, its dangers, and the valiant meeting of them by her very remote ancestors.

"Come out av it, darlin'," said Delia's voice, as her round red face peered anxiously through the close set suckers at the indistinct pink blur of Annice's rompers. "You'll be gettin' yourself all dirthy," Annice made it clear that so long as she stayed where she was she would be good, but if she had to come out she would be naughtier—and that in quite new and dreadful ways—than Delia ever saw her before. Besides, she said, this dirt was not like other dirt, but of a peculiarly clean variety, even beneficial to clothes. Delia turned these things over anxiously, glanced toward the house and at her bright embroidery, lying on the grass.

"If I put a rug in there, will you sit on it?"

Annice said that she would. She would also like her pink tea set, her little iron cooking stove with the real lids, her kindergarten beads, and all the tiggywinkle books. Delia brought these and inserted them through the crevice in the hedge as a moving truck delivers furniture at any other door on a May day. And thus Annice moved in. It was tenancy that was to last off and on for a long time.

At first Delia's face used to appear warily at the aperture once in so often, but as time went on, and Annice was always good, it came less and less often. Delia embroidered happily, and sometimes the gardener came and joked.

But by degrees Annice was exploring that forest. By degrees she was enlarging her secret domain, and working the rug with her tea set, the beads, the tiggywinkle books, and a number of other treasures that she had been gradually collecting there, farther and farther toward the other side of the hedge.

There was a sunny greenness over there which attracted her, and sounds which she had always heard from time to time, but had never quite understood, were nearer. The man that so constantly said, "Whoaup! Get in, Charley!" and the click-click-click of a tongue against the roof of the mouth, accompanied by the stumbling thud of great feet plunging through soft soil and the clink of small stones against steel. Now she could see the cause of all this, and learned just how Mr. Rider did his cultivating—with the help of a fascinating hen and eight half fledged chickens following busily after up and down the green beginnings of potato plants, brilliant against the brown of the stirred up brown earth. No wonder she was good with all this to watch!

Enter, The Boy.

AND then came the boy. He appeared one day shortly after that epic of the cultivating, and he brought a tin can nailed to the end of a stick, and with another stick he played little tunes on the tin can so that white powder snowed out of its bottom upon each green rosette of a potato plant. And while he did this he whistled through the place where a front tooth was gone, and his hair stuck up like yellow flame through the crown of his hat. Annice's wrist went to her mouth, and her eyes were immense as she watched the boy.

For there was something about this boy—glamor—a something.

Perhaps it was the way he whistled through the gap in his teeth; perhaps it was the color of that tuft of hair as the sun blazed upon it where it thrust through the crown of his hat; or the freckles; or the capable way in which his slim brown hand held the stick and beat little tunes out of the tin can along with the white dust.

At any rate, when he was joined by a yapping, round stomached puppy which had painfully trailed him from some distant point and now floundered, whimpering, over the plowed ridges to wallow in adoration about his bare feet, Annice's spirit invisibly kept the puppy company and wallowed also.

She pressed closer and closer to the thin edge of her forest, her face flushed, her gray eyes wide and bright. The boy had stopped to converse with the puppy, whose name was Tige, when suddenly it became aware of something alien in the hedge, something from which its noble master must be protected, which must be challenged, rooted out—slain. It essayed a bark better suited to a larger dog and charged furiously at Annice.

"Rabbits?" said the boy.

He came forward and pushed aside the lilac barrier.

"Gee!" said the boy. "A kid!"

He stepped in and saw the rug, the tea set, the dolls, the books.

"Gee!" he said.

He sat down opposite Annice on her rug and looked about. The secret reaches of the forest stretched a hundred feet in either direction—a vista of gnarled lilac trunks with plenty of space beneath for the smaller portion of the human race to walk upright at ease.

"Nice and cool," he said. "Gee, it's hot outside!"

Then his face grew grave. He eyed her sternly.

"I suppose you know that is all our land in here?"

Her glowing face paled and a frightened look came in her eyes. They filled and she shrank away, her wrist pressed to her lips, which threatened to part with terrible sounds.

"O, say!" said the boy anxiously, "don't do that, kid! I didn't mean nothing. Honest! Say, I tell you what I'll do, I'll give you half of it. Think of that, now; won't that be nice? And then we can both play in here, and nobody'll ever know where we are. I'll—I'll give you half of Tige, too——"

She was smiling at last, but it had been a very near thing. There was salt water upon her lashes and her breathing was gusty. He smiled benevolently, approvingly, as he would have smiled had it been a baby rabbit or a fallen fledgling which Tige had started up. For he was that nice kind of little boy from whom weaker things than himself have nothing to fear.

Annice clasped her hands and wriggled, then with a sudden inspiration—an abandon of worship—gathered up all her books and laid them at his feet. He stretched out in the middle of her rug and began at once to read, and Annice perceived that he was reading, not the pictures, but the printing matter, exactly like grownups. He read straight on silently for an hour, while the puppy, wearied by its long pursuit of him, having turned around three times, went to sleep.

Then Delia, who had been talking to the gardener at the other side of the lawn, called her for luncheon, so she went away, leaving him reading, and that was all for that day.

Or perhaps not quite all. That night as she was going to bed she made a remark. Quite apropos of nothing she came out with it, and her mother heard it, too.

"Gee!" she said.

It led to no end of trouble, for it was not the sort of word she was supposed to have in her vocabulary, and her mother looked so sternly and questioningly at Delia that if the wages hadn't been very good, and if Delia hadn't been very fond of Annice, there's no telling what might have happened.

Explanations.

AS it seems at first sight a little strange that such an affair as this between Annice Westall and Thomas Rider could go on all summer without Delia's suspecting anything, it may be well to explain a few points.

In the first place, Annice had always been prone to monologues. She talked not only to her dolls and to herself but to invisible companions by the hour, changing her voice and manner variously to indicate the other participant in the dialogue.

In the second place, if upon occasion the boy's voice rose indiscreetly plain, why should Delia not take it for granted that it came from its proper habitat upon the other side of the hedge, and that its union with Annice's was apparent and accidental? But as to that, if she had suspected, had known all about it, in fact, she would not have regarded it as a hanging matter—at least so long as Annice's mother did not know. So long as the child was good and happy and no trouble, what was the odds? So I won't insist that Delia was ignorant. And yet she was by way of being terribly absent minded, and that's a fact. This wasn't her fault, but Patrick Callahan's, the under gardener, who was usually doing something within range of Delia's vision and distracting her thoughts. As it happened, the embroidery with which she was so busy was a centerpiece with a design of shamrocks and violets, the most vivid green and purple that modern dyes can compass (which is pretty vivid!), and as she wrought she kept envisaging a dinner table, all as gay and festive as the centerpiece. But who was the gentleman sitting down to it so comfortably in his shirtsleeves for to carve the Sunday roast? Sure, it was that same Patrick Callahan she kept seeing until it was fair unchancy, the plainness of him!

If the sangaree could not entice Mrs. Razilly away from Miss Barbara, maybe the garage door might tempt Miss Barbara away from Mrs. Razilly; which amounted to the same thing, and Nat would get rid of the note. But the girls only paused long enough in their bumble-bee talk for Barbara to say:

"I have already looked at that door. It is quite right."

"But I means de back do'."

"The garage has no back door."

"Egzactly, Miss Barbara, egzactly."

Again he disappeared, temporarily, pending his punctual return bearing the majolica pitcher and two glasses, with much reddish slop spilled on the tray.

"Look at that, Uncle Nat!" Barbara scolded. "Aren't you ashamed to serve a sangaree in any such style? Get a cloth"

This gained a few more seconds, while old Nat shuffled in, and out again with a dishcloth. The tray was wiped, and he continued to hang around.

"Now, Uncle Nat," Barbara suggested, "it's time for you to go out and feed these cute little new puppies."

"No'm," he answered, sitting down comfortably on the step. "Dey ma's feedin' 'em. Dem pups is all puffed up wid feed." Then he mopped his face with the claret stained cloth and tried to hear what they were saying. In a moment he had another idea, and proposed it.

"O, Mrs. Razzle, dat puts me in min'—hadn't you better come 'long wid me an' lemme he'p pick out yo' pup what de major's aimin' to give you? I'm a fust class picker when it comes to pups. Now, ef a pup's got big feet, an'——"

"No thank you." She sawed him off. "Mr. Razilly wishes to select that puppy for himself."

Barbara could think of nothing more to invent, and in their awkward silence all three could hear the put-put-put of Neezer's motor boat, towing home the fishermen. Both girls lifted their heads with a jerk, and listened half frightened, as a scary mule listens when he thinks the train is about to run over him. But the major's approach threw a rope to Nat. He thought of another scheme to separate the Siamese twins.

"Here dey comes, Miss Barbara," he reminded her. "An' yo' pa sho will need his toddy when he 'rives in."

There Nat had her. Everybody on Bennington knew that Major Stark permitted no one else to mix his toddy, which constituted their afternoon function for the thirsty. In preparation for this routine old Nat sprang up and moved toward the pantry.

"I'll lay out ev'thing fer you on de table, Miss Barbara, so you kin have dem toddies waitin', wid de frost on de outside."

"Thank you, Uncle Nat. But never mind. They'll be ready when father comes."

"But yo' pa's mighty nigh here."

"Then where's his mail?" she sternly demanded. "Uncle Nat, if Major Stark comes in and does not find his paper lying right there on that table, well, I'd hate to be in your shoes."

Nat's feet were in his shoes,, and he set them both in the driveway, one ahead of the other, just as swift as he could, with his funny duck legged waddle hustling for the mail box.

"Dat's hellagin, as major say," Old Nat grumbled to himself. "Fust thing I know I'll git cotch wid dis note."

The Blue Envelopes.

HIS two big feet scattered gravel, and Nat's coattails burned the wind on his way to the mail box. He must rush back and empty that dynamite note from his pocket before Mr. Razzle came meddling, and got Nat's business all cluttered up. Then Nat thought of Mr. Stuart, mashed down on his accelerator, and flew. Mr. Stuart must be already waiting for him in the old Fearne graveyard, tramping up and down amongst the cedars, and slashing his leggins with a whip. Nobody named Clayton could ever sit still and be quiet after he got his mind set on doing something.

"Dar now!" Nat halted with his hand in the mail box. "Ef I don't tote dat answer mighty brief to de graveyard, Mister Stuart sho will tote hissef up here. He'll jes nacherly march to Bennin'ton, major or no major, husban' or no husban'. An' den—an' den!"

Awed by the awfulness of what he foresaw, old Nat grabbed his mail and started back to the house. Almost before Barbara could miss him she saw him returning with the letters in his hand.

"Anything for me?" she asked without interest.

"No'm. Nothin' fer nobody, 'cept major's paper, an' two o' dese blue letters fer Mister Razzle."

Those particular blue letters came so regularly from New York, and had such a peculiar medallion in one corner, that old Nat grew to recognize their envelopes, and always tucked them aside for Mr. Razilly. Now he stuck both letters within his coat, in perilous proximity with the penciled note from Mr. Stuart Clayton.

Bounding up the front steps, Nat could see through the broad hallway to the back gate, at which the fishermen were already entering.

"Yon dey come, Miss Barbara," he pointed. "Gee! Yo' pa's got a fine string. Better run an' look."

He figured that Mrs. Razilly, being indifferent to fish, and so tired, would probably remain where she was, and he could slip her the note. But she didn't remain. She got up and went with Miss Barbara, just as if she were afraid to be left by herself. Arm in arm both girls hastened through the hallway, with old Nat tagging behind and muttering:

"Huh, ef dis was a million dollar bill, she wouldn't 'low me nary chance to give it to her."

Old Nat felt like the organ grinder's monkey, with a hot penny that he dared not drop. The note was scorching him, but he saw no sense in trying to deliver it right under the eyes of Mr. Razilly. So the disgusted Negro shuffled down steps into the back yard, while Barbara and Adelaide halted on the back gallery to meet their men.

First through the rear gate marched Mr. Florian Razilly, wearing his white cork helmet and carrying a rifle. Although he stalked toward them as if he were posing for an episode in Darkest Africa, the wife detected a certain jerky motion which betrayed his mental disturbance. As the ladies were observing him he must continue to dissimulate. At the proper time his capture of the much wanted Clayton would burst upon them.

"Uncle Nat," he spoke with clever nonchalance, "tell Seymour to saddle the bay filly. I'll give her a tryout."

"Yas, suh; Seymo's gone to town, but Ed kin do it."

While Nat hurried to the stables, Razilly set down his rifle against the steps, and gave an imitation of having nothing on his mind.

"Oh, Florian, dear," Adelaide bent over the railing and spoke her prettiest. "Did you catch me a nice little fish?" But the anxious question in her eyes did not concern a fish; she only wanted to feel sure that he had not caught her at the lake.

"Yes, we had good luck," the husband nodded.

An appreciative man would have glanced a second time at those lovely young women in their riding habits; yet Razilly barely glanced the first time, then turned away to the kennels and began inspecting a new litter of pups.

Barbara pinched Adelaide's arm and whispered: "I'm afraid he suspects something."

"Yes; but not us. Mon dieu! If he suspeeted that!"

This was old Nat's day for hunches. Hustling back from the stables he now felt a hunch that Mrs. Razilly was watching her husband.

"Huh!" he snickered, "dat shoe oughter be on tother foot."

All that the ladies saw and all that Nat saw was a husband who knelt beside the kennel, and gave his undivided attention to one of old Sally's pups. As Nat approached, Razilly glanced up from this engrossing occupation to inquire, "Is the filly ready?"

"Jes a minit, suh, soon as Ed gits her curried."

Meanwhile the major, with Dr. Humphreys, had paused in front of Miss Barbara's garage to look at her new car. From there the major called:

"Nat, where's my mail?"

"Here, suh. Comin' suh." And Nat moved over to the garage, keeping one eye skinned for whatever Mr. Razilly might be doing. "Better step light in dis bizness," he warned himself.

Tragedy!

HEARING Major Stark call for his mail seemed to put Mr. Razilly in mind of his own, for he, too, called out, 'Uncle Nat, have you some letters for me?"

"Yas, suh. Got two."

"Let me have them, please."

"Suttinly, suh; suttinly."

When Nat went back to deliver those letters things began to happen. Mr. Razilly continued to kneel before a pen in which the major's favorite pointer was suckling her pups. The ladies had already gone inside; and the two old crony fishermen were just disappearing through the door. Uncle Nat and Mr. Razilly had the entire back yard to themselves. It was peaceful out there, with no sign of trouble, and Nat never even got a hunch.

He shuffled across the yard, fumbling in his pockets for the blue letters.

It was not Uncle Nat's fault if Clayton's note, being so small, got sandwiched between the two big envelopes. So Nat bent down and gave Mr. Razilly three documents instead of two.

"Here's yo' letters, Mr. Razzle. I hopes bofe of 'em brings good news."

With this gentle wish, and to show that he never meant a bit of harm, that he wasn't afraid of anybody. Uncle Nat squatted down side and side with Mr. Razilly, and began talking to him for his own good about the puppies.

"Mr. Razzle," he advised, "ef I was you I'd pick dis he-dog, wid de spotted ears——"

At first Mr. Florian Razilly did not observe the note, but took his letters carelessly in hand while he continued choosing amongst the pups; and Uncle Nat proceeded with his discourse:

"Dis little pot bellied feller, he ain't liable to grow nigh as big as dis spot ear. De way to prophesy a big dog is to jedge accordin' to his feet. Dis spot ear pup sho will turn out a whale——" Serenely he gabbled on without noticing that Mr. Razilly had risen and become omniously quiet.

"One time," Nat never looked up. "One time I had a liver an' white p'inter——"

But Mr. Razilly didn't hear him. Razilly couldn't hear anything, couldn't see anything, couldn't think of anything except some penciled words on a bit of paper at which he was staring, and wondering what they meant. He read the note twice before seeing that it was addressed to "Adelaide."

"Now dat liver an' white p'inter o' mine——" Nat continued the history until Razilly broke in.

"Where did you get that?"

"My ole dog had dat pup, her own sef. She had ten of 'em at one time."

"Not the pup. This note?"

"Dat note?" with an innocent raising of the eyes.

"Yes. This note."

A clutching hand grabbed Nat's collar and jerked the Negro upright. Nat saw the two blue letters drop to the ground while Razilly shoved a smaller scrap of paper at him and demanded:

"Where did you get this infernal note?"

"Dat note?" Nat felt his pockets, he searched all his pockets, he rummaged them one after another, two at a time, over and over again. Mr. Clayton's note was gone, and Nat could see it in Razilly's hand. Furthermore, Nat saw something else in Mr. Razilly's face which set the trigger of his legs for traveling; but the hand in his collar held him hitched. Involuntarily he made a grab for the note, which Razilly jerked away and demanded, "Where did you get this?"

"Git—git—git which?"

"This piece of paper?"

"Dat? Oh, dat piece o' paper? Huh! I never had it."

"Don't lie to me, old man!"

The infuriated Razilly gripped Uncle Nat by a stranglehold, while the Negro's popping eyes stared around for somebody to help him get loose. What he craved was a severance from this enraged white man with the blazing eyes. Or if he couldn't get a severance, he needed time, more time to prepare his pleas. But the yard was empty; no first aid showed up. Folks never seemed to care how much trouble Nat had. Even his best friend, the lazy fat pointer, kept wagging his fool tail as if he failed to realize what a particular fix Uncle Nat was in. It appeared like Mr. Razilly didn't know how to do anything except to choke niggers, and keep saying,

"Don't lie to me, old man. You did have that note."

"No, suh. Not me."

"But you gave it to me, just this minute—with those letters?"

"O! Wid dem letters? Suttinly, suttinly. You means dem blue letters?" Old Nat gazed blankly upon the ground as he studied the pair of blue envelopes which lay at Razilly's feet.

"Mr. Razzle," he spoke doubtfully. "Cose I ain't 'sputin' yo' word, suh, but is you certain sho dat I give you dat paper?"

"Sure? Of course I'm sure." Razilly's words shot from him with the spiteful crackle of a machine gun. "Look at it. See it?"

"Egzactly, suh, egzactly. I sees it now." A light burst upon Uncle Nat and a grin overspread his countenance. "I sees it good. But lordee, Mr. Razzle, dat little ole piece o' paper, hit don't 'mount to shucks. Us was talkin' 'bout dis spot year pup—an'—"

"Damn the pup! I want to know the scoundrel who gave you this note."

"Which scoun'l?" His innocent face puckered into a network of brand new wrinkles as Nat strove to clear his thoughts. "Mr. Razzle, dat sho is puckculiar. At de same time you was axin' me dat question 'bout de note, it jes fell in my min' to wonder how come sech a little piece o' paper ever got in Major Stark's letter box."

"This never came through the mail," Razilly snapped. "Some infernal hound sent it by you. Who was it?" By shaking Nat until his teeth rattled, Razilly shook out a rattled answer:

"A white gent'man—give it—to me."

"Who? Who? Tell me the truth."

How could any Negro tell the truth, or tell anything else, while he was having the very life throttled out of him by a wire fingered Frenchman. Then Razilly eased up and let Nat suck a whiff of breath.

"Who is the man?"

"Tain't no man, Mister Razzle. No, suh! He never give it to me. You skeered me so bad dat I overspoke myse'f."

"I'll do worse than scare you." Razilly mended his grip while trying to decipher the hastily scribbled signature. His voice steadied with wrath as he looked up. "Old nigger, do you know a man named Stant Clopton?"

"Clopton? Clopton? Tain't no Cloptons livin' in dis neighborhood, suh. Ain't never heerd o' such a man."

Not once did Florian Razilly let go of Nat's collar as he puzzled over the illegible name, then turned the paper and saw an address typewritten on the other side.

"Señor Stuart Clayton, Salamanca. That's the name!" he exclaimed, and in the surprise of it forgot his hold on the prisoner, who promptly backed out of reach.

"Uncle Nat, do you know a low dog named Stuart Clayton?"

So she would think upon this phenomenon till she was fain to wander over to his side of the lawn and get a better look at his jolly face that she might compare it with this of her dreams.

At such times, of course, the children could and did play as loud as they liked. They kept close watch and always knew. Usually, also, it happened just after the car had gone purring down the drive with Annice's mother off for the afternoon.

Now, aside from the land on which the lilac forest stood, and the invaluable services of Tige, the boy contributed other things to that partnership. One day he appeared with a great quantity of tinware which when adjusted proved to be a practicable railroad with an engine that would run on it when wound up, and cars that would carry things in them—even small dolls—behind the engine. And at another time he brought some seeds, and they made a garden in the heavy shade of the trees—not but that he knew quite well that no seed of any kind whatever would ever grow there, but it was fun to plant them and then pretend while you looked at the glowing pictures on the packets. Besides, for all one knew, natural laws might not be immutable, and if they should change overnight, and things come up and grow and blossom, how very nice it would be!

And Annice, to help out, brought some orange seeds one day, planted them very deep, and tramped them down. These succeeded admirably, for they came up and blossomed and bore fruit that same day. At least, she said that was where the two oranges came from that they shared.

In short, they were as happy all that summer long as it is possible in this world for any two human beings to be.

And then came winter. Winters are almost interminably long for people of that age. There is time from November to the first of May to forget a great deal and to grow a great many inches.

The Treasure Is Buried.

THE next summer, when lilac time ushered in the Westalls, their servants and vans and trunks—and then, with a flourish, the true Westalls in their great stage coach of a car—Thomas Rider had been lying in wait for some time before Annice appeared.

She escaped as soon as she could the nursery governess who had taken Delia's place (Delia had married Patrick Callahan about Christmas) and found her way once more to the lilac hedge.

He saw her coming from the moment that she started across the lawn, demurely pretending that she wasn't going anywhere in particular. But he had not thought her hair would be so long. And she wasn't wearing rompers any more, either. She was mostly legs, and her brief gown was blue now instead of pink.

As for him, the space where his tooth had lacked was now beautifully filled, and he had a new haircut, very tight, a style he could stand better than most boys, because he had such an admirably shaped skull, high and broad and long—the kind that it has taken thirty thousand years to make—a thoroughly up to date skull.

But in spite of these changes it took only a moment, once they confronted each other under the lilacs, to get adjusted, and presently their second glorious summer was in full swing.

Yet the forest seemed to have shrunk a little. But this was more than made up for by the gorgeous preparations which Tommy had been making, preparing with forethought and skill as spring waxed.

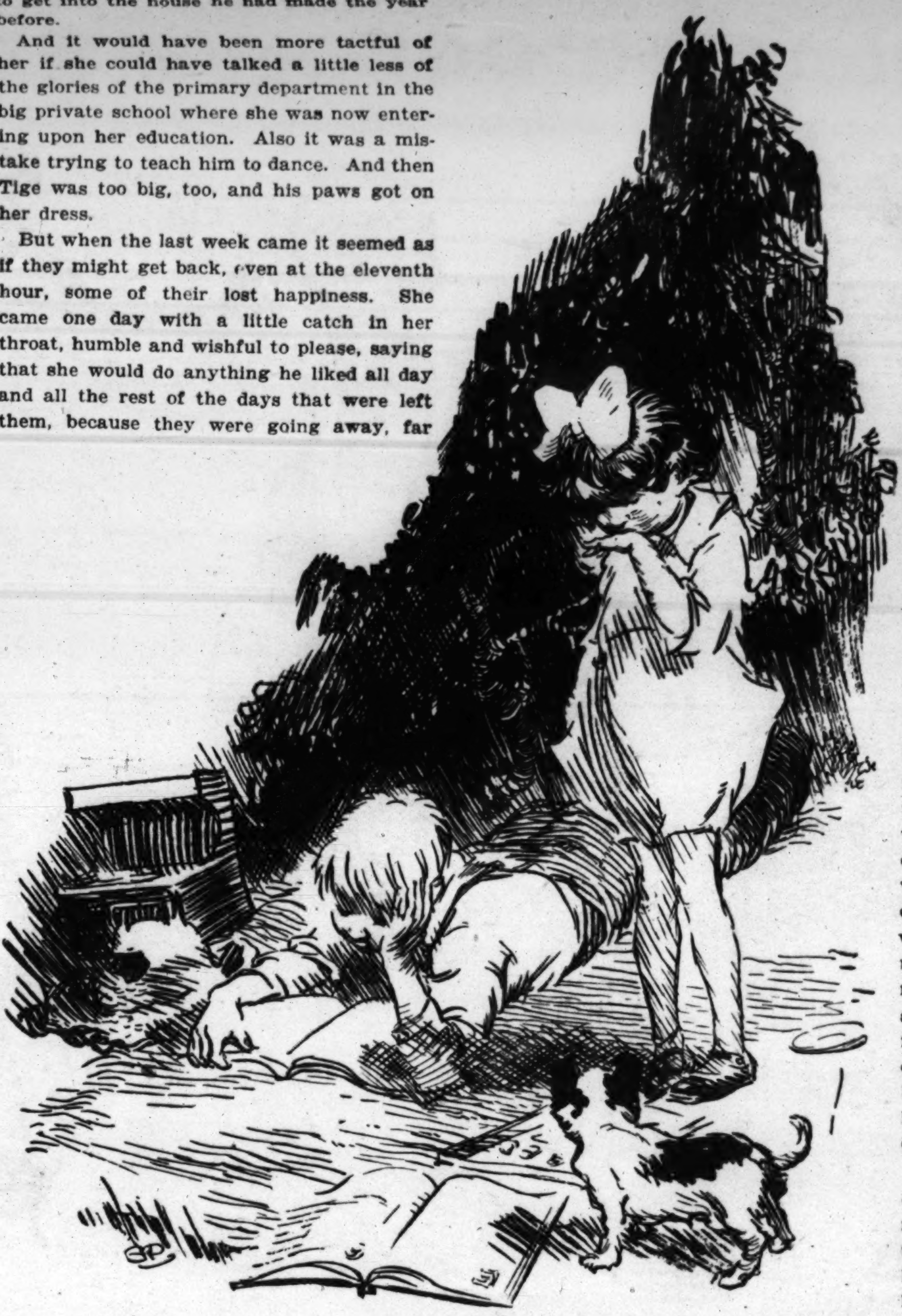
Perhaps his chiefest triumph was the basketwork screen of suckers with which he had fended off all possible espionage from her side of the hedge—from his own, of course, there was nothing to fear. And then, also hidden by this screen, he had built a real house with hammer and nails and packing boxes. A veritable mansion it was, and then he had gone ahead and laid in supplies. Butternuts and hickory nuts and the last of the winter apples. Annice did not disappoint him with any lack of appreciation, not she! She put both hands over her mouth to keep back shouts that might be overheard by alien ears, and danced furiously for quite a long time.

And the second summer went as beautifully as the first. A pity, is it not, that time could not have halted a little longer there? The third summer was different, somehow.

Really, it wasn't Tommy's fault that his feet and hands were growing beyond all reason and that he no longer fitted the wood like Oberon to her Titania and had to scrooch to get into the house he had made the year before.

And it would have been more tactful of her if she could have talked a little less of the glories of the primary department in the big private school where she was now entering upon her education. Also it was a mistake trying to teach him to dance. And then Tige was too big, too, and his paws got on her dress.

But when the last week came it seemed as if they might get back, even at the eleventh hour, some of their lost happiness. She came one day with a little catch in her throat, humble and wishful to please, saying that she would do anything he liked all day and all the rest of the days that were left them, because they were going away, far beyond—in fact, abroad—when this summer was at an end. To stay until she was almost if not quite grown up.



Ann perceived that he was reading, not the pictures, but the printed matter, exactly like grownups.

"Huh!" said Thomas. "Good riddance!"

But he did not meet her eyes as he said it, and she understood and was not offended, not in the least. She went on brightly to say that they could play robbers, and she had brought for that purpose some treasure. They would bury it and not dig it up again until she returned. Years and years it would stay there.

"It's my baby jewelry," said she, "and some other things of my very own, so 'tisn't stealing."

She dumped it out at his feet—baby pins, a coral necklace, and a glittering brooch thing which had been given her for a special party and hadn't been returned yet to its proper abiding place with her mother's jewels.

"It's real treasure," she said proudly; "gold and diamonds."

So he on his part contributed a real tin box and inclosed it in a real wooden one which he nailed up with many nails until you could hardly have told it from a real pirate treasure chest, and they buried it as deep as they could among the lilac roots and stamped it down and piled stones on top so there would be no mistaking the spot. But first he added to it, not to be outdone, a whole bagful of brilliant marbles, his best and choicest.

The day they were going she ran in for farewell and found him seated gloomily upon the cairn above the treasure. He looked at her with suffering eyes, and she put her wrist to her mouth in the babyish way she was beginning to outgrow. There seemed nothing to say.

"Annice!" called some one. The car was at the porte cochère. She suddenly caught him around the neck and kissed him, then ran away very fast. And so the golden age came to an end.

After Six Years.

AFTER six years of drowsing behind its boarded windows the Westall house was being reopened. All the latter part of March the decorators were busy, and then a landscape artist appeared, at whose command perfectly good trees were cut down and others planted according to some principle that thoroughly irritated and bewildered their neighbors.

But the crown of his efforts was the formal garden which he laid out along the lilac hedge. For he realized the beauty of that ancient growth and played up to it. There were to be rose walks and hedges and a fountain in the middle of his garden; statues, too, and a sundial, and stone seats. It looked very fine when he finished with it, though of course for the present season much of its beauty would depend on annuals. Later the perennials would take up the tale and you would be able to judge of what a really capable landscape artist can do when he starts in.

But Thomas Rider senior could see no beauty or sense in it. Prettying up good onion land was not his idea of agriculture. Thomas Rider junior hadn't much use for that sort of thing, either. They strolled over at dusk one evening to look at it before the Westalls came, but turned scornfully away to their own pursuits.

Young Thomas at that time found it difficult to coax his thoughts to any distance from his pen of pure bred Duroc Jerseys and the large fortune he was about to make from blooded stock, and roses and sundials are worlds away from Duroc Jerseys. So are Westalls from Riders. Still, remembering that portion of his life which had been lived under the lilac hedge, he was inclined to be kindly disposed toward the Westalls and their foibles. He even detached his mind from his Jerseys long enough to wonder pleasantly what Annice had grown to be like. And once, sedate and aging Tige at his heels, he had parted the lilacs and grinned in at that ancient cairn which marked their plunder.

"Gee!" he said, "she'll have forgotten all that by now."

A slight pang of wistfulness surprised him. He would have rather liked to shrink to a size that could go in there and roam around in that forest—to meet there another small creature.

"I should worry!" he said sharply, and let the lilacs swish back into position. When one becomes a man he must put aside childish things.

And yet he could not but be aware when the Westalls themselves arrived, when the sounds of workmen ceased, giving place to light laughter, purring motors, the staccato of the feet of the saddle horses, and in the evenings music for the dancing of young people. For they came flocking like bees to honey just as soon as the cover was really off the honey pot.

"Kids," said Thomas disapprovingly, "acting like grownups in novels." For it will be remembered that Annice was only fourteen by this time. And Thomas' mother agreed with him, shaking her head.

"There won't be anything left her when she gets to be a young lady if she goes on like that now," she said.

Yet all that they heard was really only the sounds of a jolly house party, and the music to which they danced was merely the kind that comes in a box of hard rubber discs, until, of course, the last evening. Then they had the real thing.

Snubbed.

ANNICE did not come into the lilac hedge at all that year. If she looked in from her side as Thomas had done, and smiled and sighed to see the pile of moss grown stones and the forest grown so small, he never was the wiser.

It was in the road that they finally met. At first neither one knew the other. Thomas saw two young people coming gayly on horseback, but his trained eye was busy with their mounts, not with them. Of course in a general way he connected them with the crowd at Westall's. And Annice saw with half an eye a tall young farmer who carried over his shoulder as easily as if it were a mere trifle a length of heavy iron chain, part of his stump pulling apparatus, which he had just taken to the forge and mended all himself. But then Harvey Merrall said something funny, and she laughed and dropped her riding crop. The young farmer stooped quickly under his jangling chains and handed it up to her, lifting his hat with quite the proper gesture, and then his blue eyes met her gray ones. Eyes don't change much with the years.

He started to grin. Perhaps he would even have ventured upon some little friendly, reminiscent remark. But the grin faded and the remark died upon his lips as she fixed him with a wide, gray eyed stare, thanked him curtly, and, touching her horse's flank with the recovered crop, sprang forward so quickly that he had to step back quickly out of the way.

"I say!" said her young escort, "what had the poor chap done?" In fact, Harvey was a bit shocked and ashamed of her, being himself a kindly lad and democratic. He turned about in his saddle to shout a companionable "Much obliged, old man!" and what he saw in Thomas' face troubled him still more.

For there he stood, oblivious of the young fellow's greeting, turning pale and red with hurt and anger.

"O, all right—all right!" he whispered fiercely as he strode across lots into his own land. And seven devils went with him; poor Thomas, who had been so at peace only five minutes before with his Duroc Jerseys, his father's broad mellow acres, old Tige to follow at heel, his mother's cooking to come home to, and a tired young man's deep sleep at night—all spoiled now!

Tige had no further word or pat from him that day, and he plowed until he could not see, and the stars came out and the horses slept in their tracks. And when he finally sought his pillow there was no sleep at all in it, so he left it and dressed again and went out to the lilac hedge and crept within it, Tige following, and a close, uncomfortable fit they found it.

The music over at Westall's was plain from there, for it was that last day of the house party when they had the real orchestra and a great crowd of young people from miles around. And all this made his heart more sore and angry than he had supposed was possible. Not, he kept saying, that it mattered—not a button. They were nothing to him—nothing . . . little spiteful piece of fluff!

It was after the cars had rolled away and the orchestra was gone and the lights of the ballroom turned out; at one o'clock, in fact, this being a mere flapper's affair, held under sensible, hygienic rules, that he saw her coming across the lawn alone among the Chinese lanterns—now being gathered like fruit from the trees by a houseman and a maid.

The formal garden, not being fairly started yet, was chiefly in the hands of annuals and the fragrance of petunias ruled where later on there would be roses. She stooped and picked a handful, holding them against her face as if they had been a cloth of cool and perfumed silk. He inched nearer to stare and Tige, sensing his hostile and bitter

THE WANTED MAN

Blue Ribbon Fiction

THE STORY THUS FAR.

ON opposite sides of Lake Marmion, in Mississippi, are two large estates—Bennington, owned by Maj. Kenneth Stark, and Marmion property of Gen. Bob Clayton. Following a bitter feud, Gen. Clayton has fled to Salamanca, Central America, with his son Stuart. Stuart returns on a mysterious mission after many years and as the story opens federal detectives are hunting him. Uncle Nat, Maj. Stark's aged servitor, goes to Marmion to warn Stuart, but is greeted so coldly he suspects the youth is an imposter. Barbara, Maj. Stark's beautiful daughter, and her guest Adelaide, wife of Florian Razilly, a jealous creole, keep a tryst at the Lone Oak with a mysterious horseman in love with Barbara, who has told him she is "Adelaide." Uncle Nat reveals his suspicions regarding Stuart, with the result Barbara greets Stuart, who is the mysterious horseman, coldly when he arrives. He clasps her in his arms, and to escape him she tells a falsehood—that she is married. The girls flee as Razilly approaches. Uncle Nat bobs up again and this time recognizes Stuart, who gives him a note for "Adelaide" and arranges a rendezvous in an old graveyard near Bennington.

FIFTH INSTALLMENT.

Creole Jealousy.

THIS business of transporting high explosives gave Uncle Nat the fidgets as he shoved off his dugout and started for home before Major Stark could get near enough to send him on some other errand. The dangerous note scorched his hide, and he sweated to get rid of it. With all charity for the skylarking propensities of young men—and being somewhat of a philanderer himself—the Negro knew that certain breaches could not be tolerated. Once a daring youngster tried it, and wrote to a married lady—but niggers had better keep their mouths shut about what happened to him.

"O, Nat! Nat!" the major shouted, "tell Neezer to come and tow us home."

"Suttinly, suh, suttinly," Nat called back, and his paddle flew. With every stroke he cocked his head from one side to the other, cogitating like a wise-old owl. But the nearer he drew to Bennington, the colder grew his feet.

Neezer did not suspect him as he delivered the major's message at the wharf; the fat cook let him pass her kitchen without a question; and the lazy pointer dog gazed into Nat's face with virtuous confidence that such an innocent appearing old person would never act as a go-between. Yet his guilt was manifest in every furtive movement as Nat sneaked around the north side of the house, where he discovered Mrs. Razilly and Miss Barbara on the front gallery, sitting jammed up together in the swing, and talking excitedly. He could not make heads or tails of what they were whispering about, because they hushed when Uncle Nat settled himself upon the steps and opened both ears. The most that Nat caught on to was that Mrs. Razzle seemed riled about something, while Miss Barbara kept saying it was all right, and trying to pacify her. So far as Nat could see there wasn't any chance to slip Mister Stuart's note to Mrs. Razzle without Miss Barbara catching him. By some hook or crook he was obliged to get them separated.

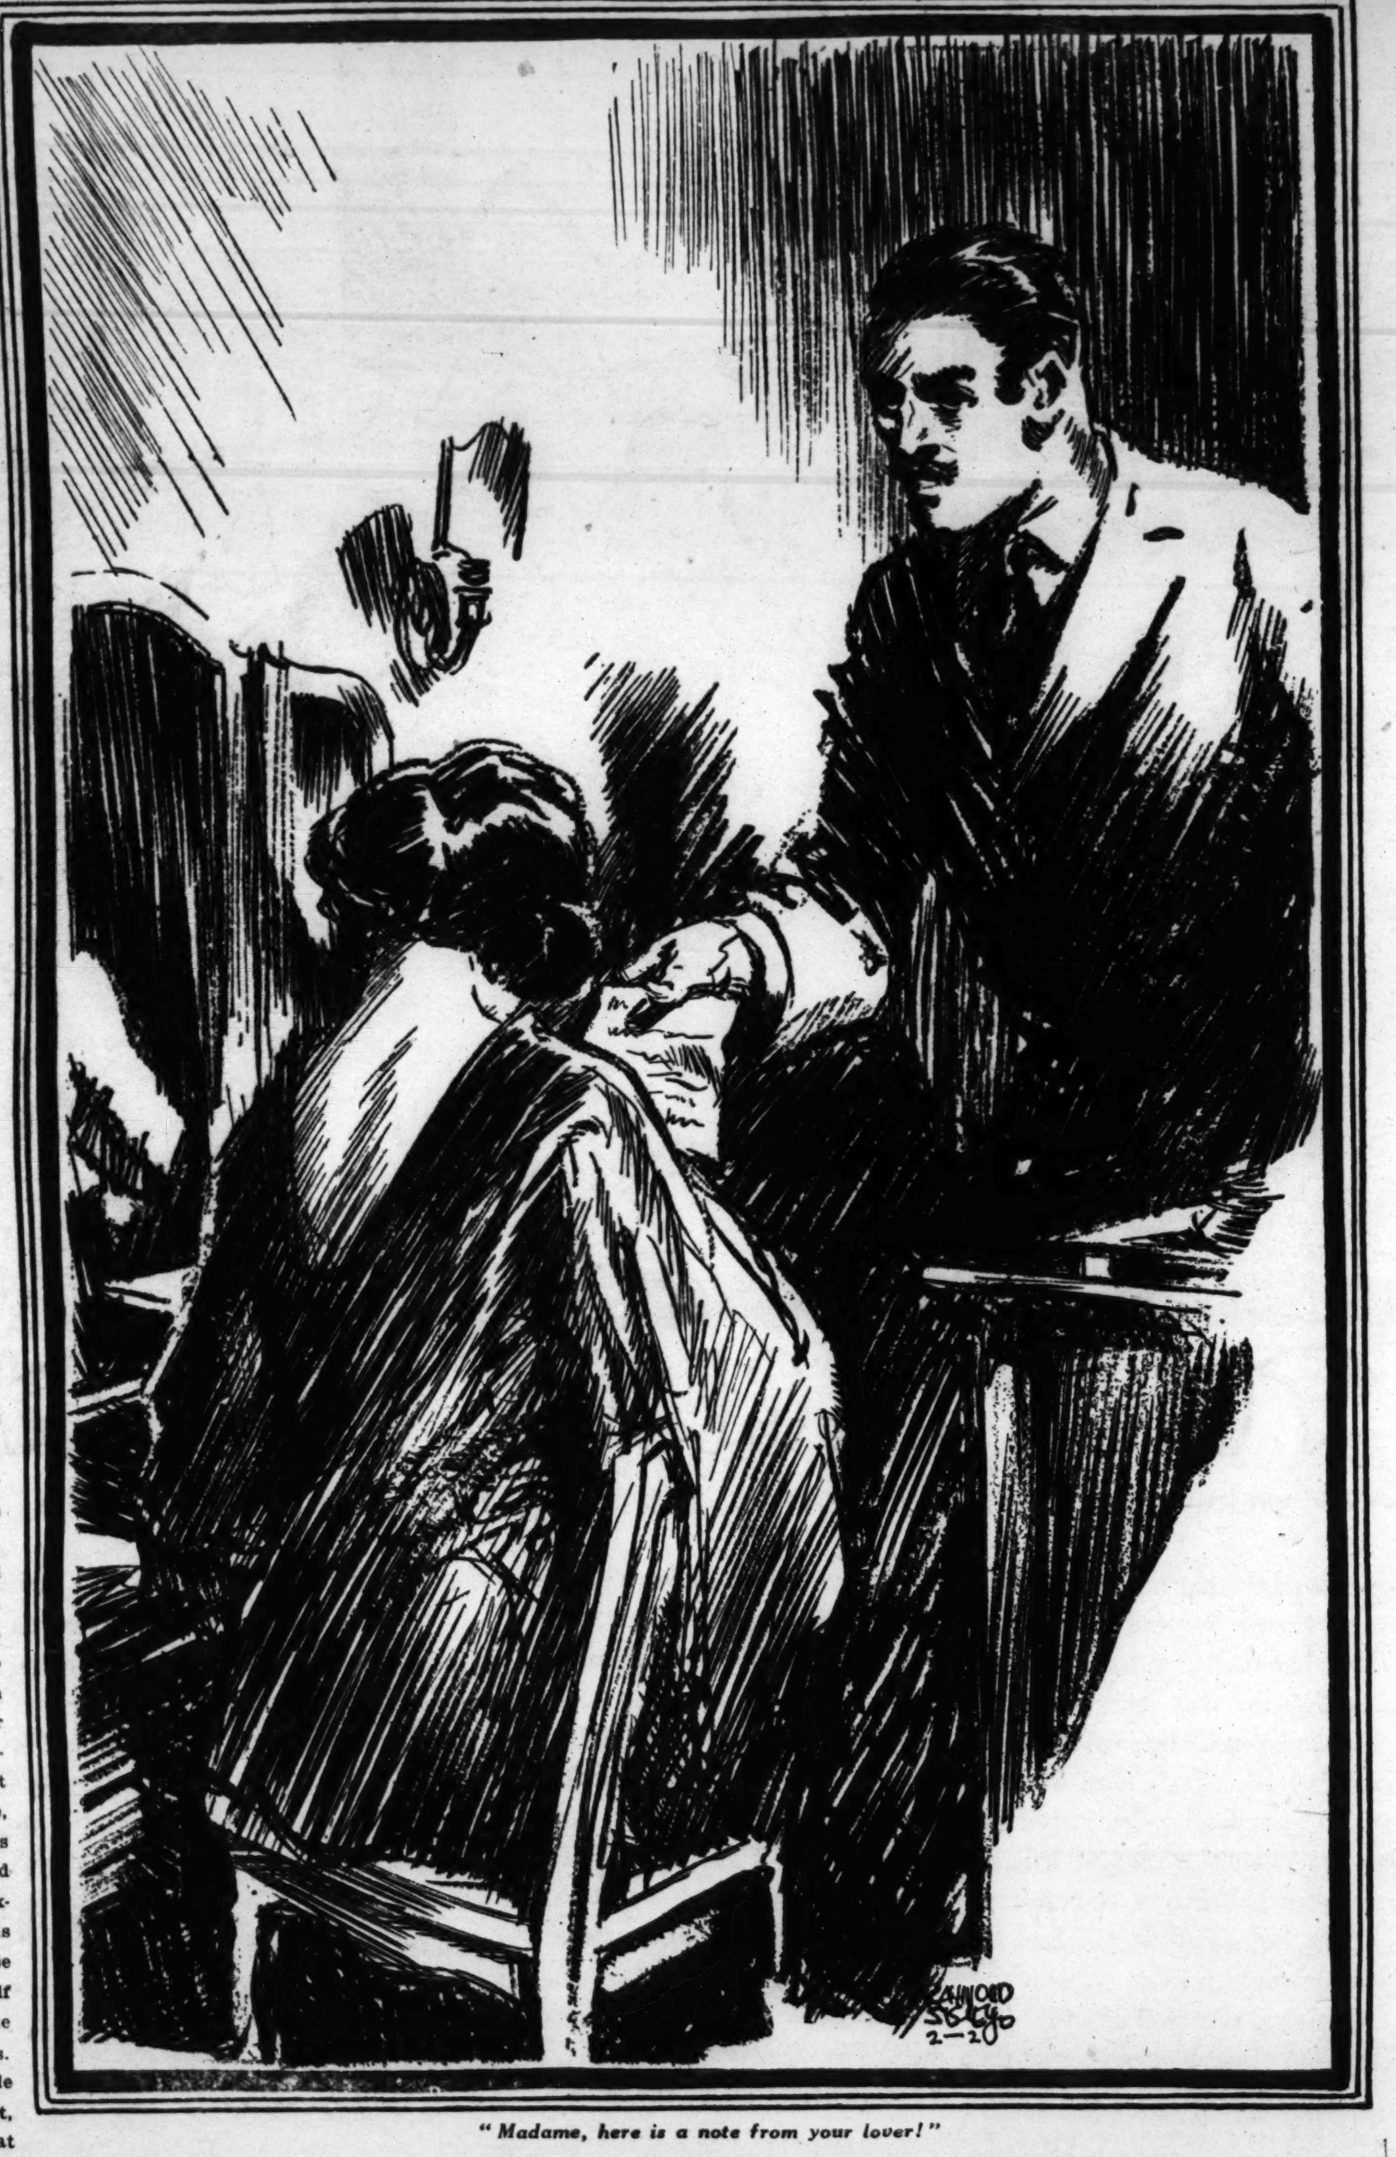
The ladies had not yet changed their clothes, which was always the first thing that Miss Barbara did when she came in from a dusty ride; and this omission justified Nat's hunch that something important must have happened.

"Pow'ful warm dis evenin'," he remarked pleasantly, sitting down and fanning with his hat, while that burning message in his breast pocket kept the sweat trickling in the gutters of his back.

"Very sultry," Miss Barbara agreed. "We are dying for a pitcher of ice water."

"Suttinly, Miss Barbara, suttinly."

"Very well. Go fix it."



"Madame, here is a note from your lover!"

"Yas'm."

As the reluctant Negro made a balk to get up, Barbara changed her mind and suggested: "No. You'd better make some lemonade. Aunt Calline will give you the lemons."

The old man dropped back and refused to budge, knowing perfectly well that she did not want the lemonade, except to get rid of him. And Barbara could not imagine why Uncle Nat should be so stubborn.

"O, Uncle Nat!" she sat up straight with a brilliant inspiration. "Here's the idea. I want you to make Mrs. Razilly one of your justly celebrated sangarees. Everybody's crazy about your sangarees. Use half a cup full of claret to that big pitcher, and——"

"I knows 'cisely how much claret goes wid dat big pitcher."

The obstinate Negro might have continued to sit, if the reverse end of Barbara's proposition hadn't swung round and hit him. Up he jumped with roused enthusiasm and suggested,

"Dat's de ve'y thing, Miss Barbara. Jes' dis mornin' de major he say to me, 'Nat, I 'zires you to show Mrs. Razzle how you makes dem sangyrees, so she kin tell her N'Yawleens folks. Nobody can't beat Uncle Nat when it comes to makin' sangyrees. Nat,' de major 'spressed hissef right strong, 'Nat, you got to show Mrs. Razzle how you medjers yo' claret, an' how you medjers yo' sugar, an' 'cisely how you stirs it.' Dat's what major say. Come 'long, Mrs. Razzle, come 'long." Uncle Nat got half way to the door, but the irresponsive lady failed to follow.

"Not now, Uncle Nat, thank you," the creole answered languidly. "I'm too tired. You may bring a glass out here if you please."

"I kin fetch it all out here an' make dat sangyree right befo' yo' eyes." And Uncle Nat had already started to do this when Miss Barbara stopped him.

"And get my gallery all spattered up," she objected, "when Mandy has just scrubbed it? And draw a million flies? Not much. Make your litter in the pantry. Hurry. Hurry."

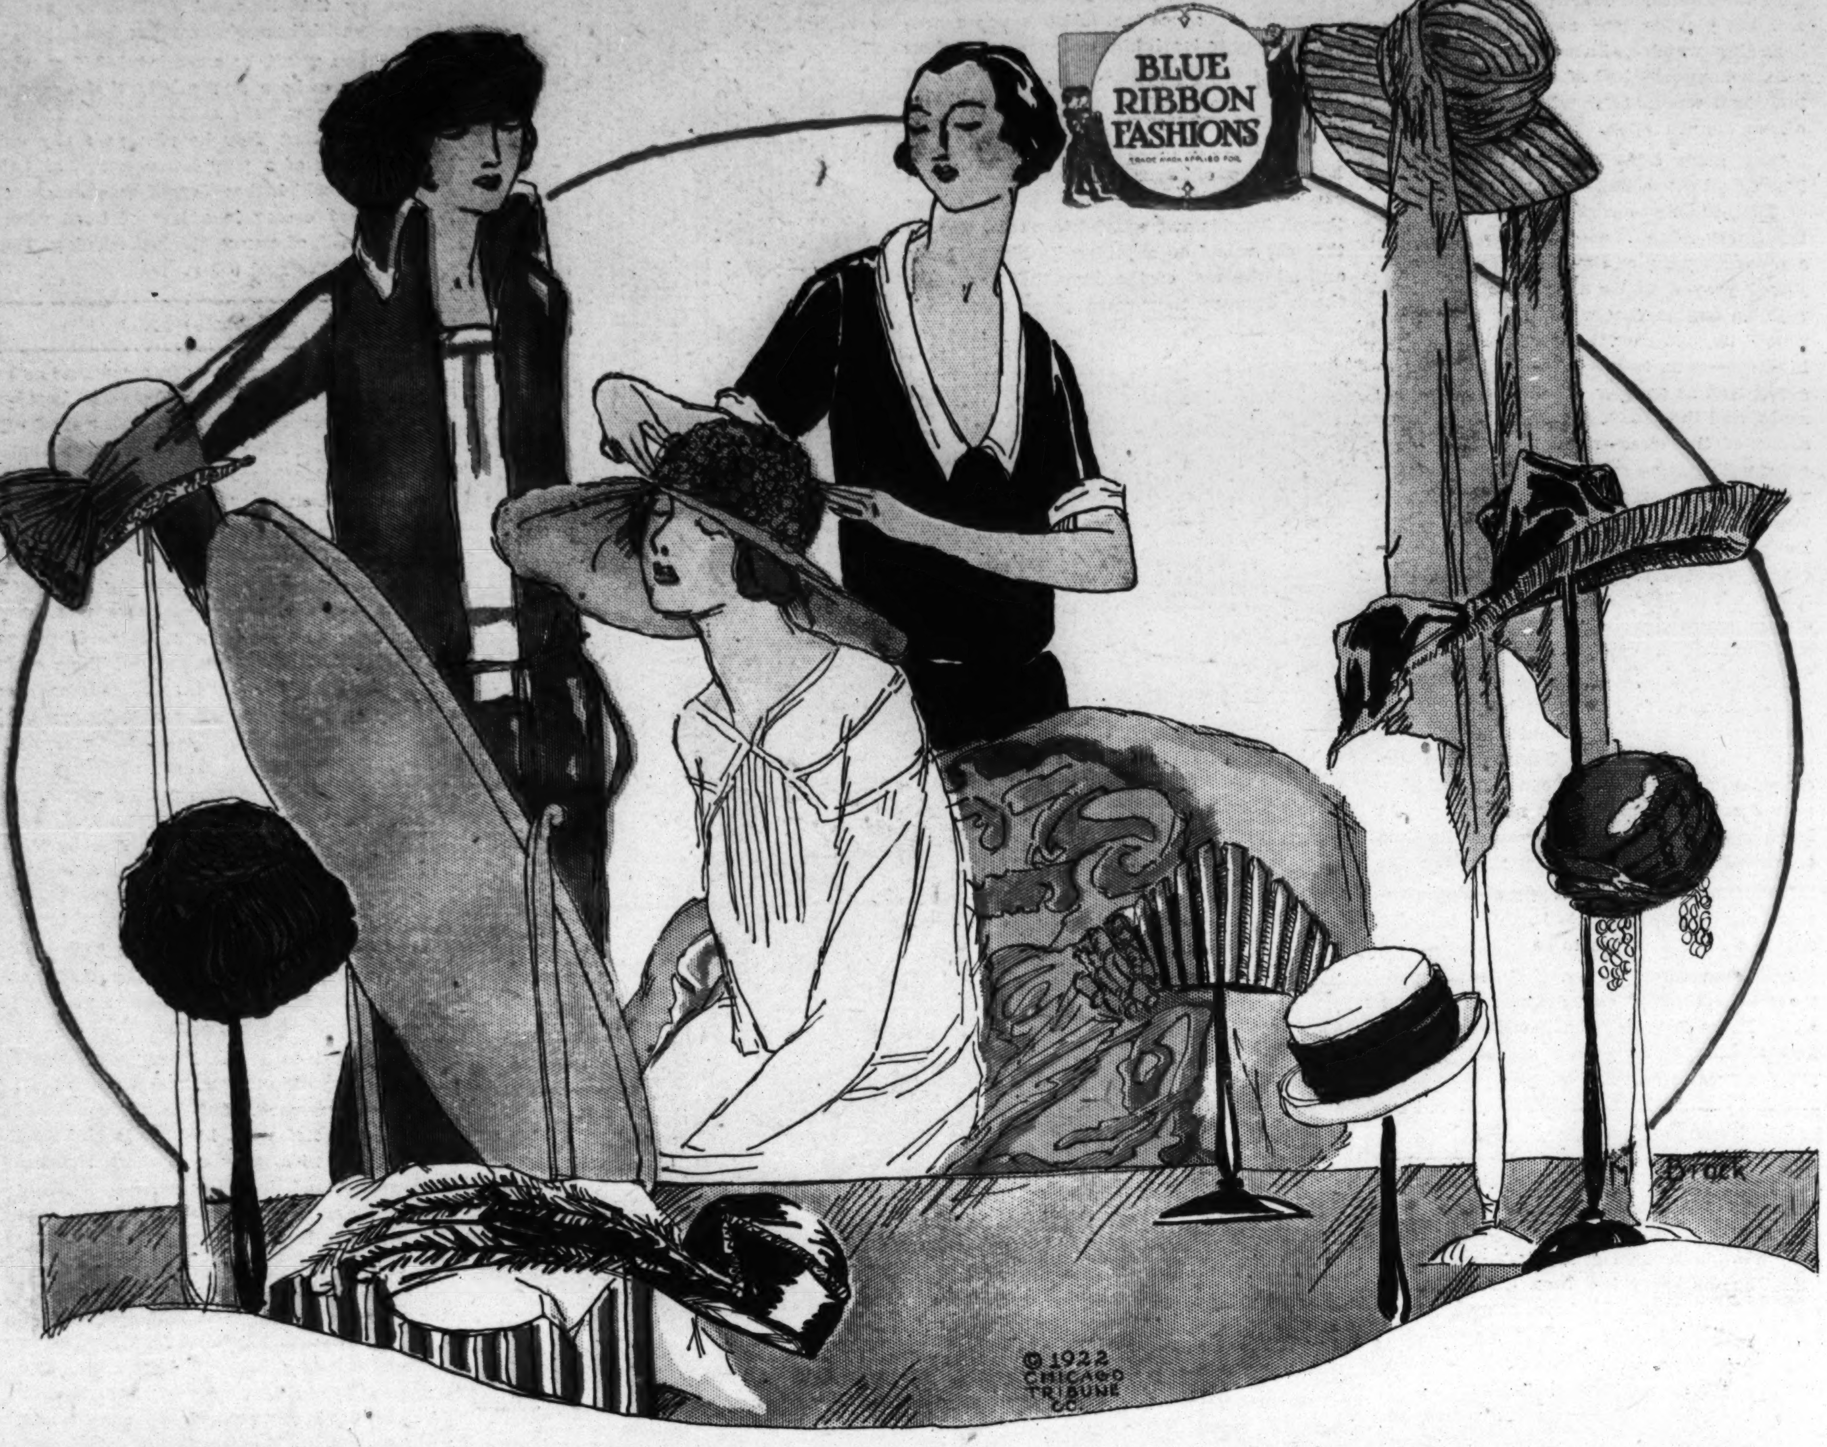
As old Nat grudgingly shambled through the front door, Barbara called after him, "And stir it a long time, a good long time."

"Egzactly, Miss Barbara, egzactly."

Reaping the reward of duplicity, they had barely got their whispering under way again before the crafty Negro thrust out his face and said, "O, Miss Barbara! I nigh forgot! Dat carpenter lef' word for you to come out an' 'zamine de way he hung yo' garidge do', so's not to scratch yo' nice little new car, Better come 'long right now, befo' it gits too dark."

PLENTY OF COLOR IN OUR SPRING HATS

by Corinne Lowe



AT the extreme left a hat of beige felt faced with straw finishes off with georgette band and rosette of plaited georgette. Below this on the table is a hat of rough red straw trimmed with two layers of red fringe fastened underneath. On the first standing figure is another red straw hat with cocarde of grosgrain ribbon. The seated figure tries on a lavender georgette whose crown is massed with lilacs and cherries. In the foreground on table a black satin with half of brim turned back gives an opening to an aigrette. Next, a black Milan trimmed with blue grosgrain ribbon is followed by a white felt sports hat scarfed in cerise. At extreme right is a turban of gold colored horsehair twisted with strands of beads. Above this, a large black straw finds ribbon its only trimming expedient. Last, a hat of beige fancy straw is wound with scarf of georgette.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—"I'm dressing in hats this year," announced the girl who always looks well. And, of course that explains her reputation. For what woman cannot look well in a $40 hat, a $16 pair of shoes, and a last year's frock?

The temptation to concentrate on millinery was never stronger than this spring. In the first place, black has gone out, and the black hat will have to hunt new fields of activity. Red—a vivid, saucy shade, at that—is the first color emphasized in the new collections. But it doesn't have charge of the whole outburst. For there are many rust colored hats, some blue ones, and a number in the wood tones.

Of course, I don't mean to say that the black hat itself is out. But the hysterically black one is. From all one can gather at present, the millinery which looked like Uncle Remus in a dark cellar carrying a bucket of coal is just about to become extinct. For our black hat nowadays is relieved by generous touches of the colors which I have just mentioned.

In addition to the color, one notes many metallic effects. For example, I saw a woman recently wearing, with a black crêpe and lace gown, a charming, wide brimmed hat of golden horsehair trimmed with foam green ostrich tips, the ends of which had been dipped in gold. Then there are the metallic weaves, which are usually draped in turban effects so that they get the becoming downward sweep at the sides. Such hats as these doubtless owe their inspiration to the bands of gold and silver tissue which fashionable Parisiennes have worn for evening head dresses all winter long. Be that as it may, these graceful little turbans are a decided contribution to our afternoons and evenings.

Among the materials which are metallized for this purpose is haircloth. And, by the way, we go ahead happily upholstering our modern heads in the same way our grandmothers did the parlor walnut. Haircloth is much to the fore, and it comes not only in black and white and the metallized tints of which I have spoken, but in such winsome tints as rose. Indeed, a stunning hat designed by Lewis is a pink tam o' shanter shape with flat wild roses at the brim. Milan is perhaps the favored straw just now, and it is found in combination with both fabrics and other straws. Also there is a vast deal of fancy straw braid going on around us. As for lisere, the soft, supple variety is now much more sanctioned than its roughneck brotherhood.

Say it with flowers—this is a suggestion to which many of the French designers have proved more than susceptible, and not only are the big brimmed models the beneficiaries. Stunning turbans are made of flowers. And such flowers! Burbank would be crushed if he could behold the mother-of-pearl blooms, the new glassed foliage, the flowers which are made of silk and felt in blending tones. And among the novelties are berries and fruits in half sections which permit that essential to millinery chic—the applied effect.

Ostrich continues to prevail, and is found in some new forms. Who could deny it after seeing that calcimined ostrich quill on the visca turban which I beheld in action the other day? Then there are all sorts of exotic looking plumage, such as duck's feathers whittled into the guise of a chrysanthemum. Fabric wings also rage, in which capacity—whisht, there again we have our haircloth! But of all the trimmings, ribbon seems to be most urged by the smart shops. Grosgrain ribbon, in particular!

But they are awfully versatile about their ribbon, and they can find as many things for it to do as can a farmer for a small boy when he wants to go swimming. Thus Lanvin places on the cuff brim of one of her small black straws row after row of the tiniest grosgrain ribbon. O, yes, it's all gathered on by hand! That's why the salesgirl says, "Seventy-five dollars—this," as kindly as if she were telling you about your great aunt's legacy.

I illustrate something of the general manner of this hat in the black Milan hat on the table right next the white felt sports hat with its cerise scarf. Here you see the same tiny ribbon bands on the brim, abetted by more lusty ribbon at the side. This is in contrast with the big black straw right back of it. This is trimmed with a full length bow of black grosgrain ribbon and—nothing more. They are doing a great deal of this with the large hats, and one of the most fetching had one loop drawn through a slash at the back of the brim.

There are a great many large hats, and the brims of these are irregular as the skirt hems. You can't tell where they are going to be turned up or slashed or project. When you depart from these large shapes you find a great many of the small hats with the round, head fitting crowns. Of draped turbans there are no end. Poke shapes—stunning ones in horsehair faced with flowers are especially notable—have come up punctually as the crocuses. And the good old Breton is practiced in various forms. As for the tricorne, this continues, but there is now usually an effort to make it flat in the back.

THE TEENIE WEENIES.

REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.

THEY WERE MIGHTY HEAVY SKATES, BUT THE LITTLE FOLKS MOVED THEM.

BY WM. DONAHEY.

IN one of the big houses, not far from the rose bush under which the Teenie Weenie village stood, lived a little girl. Elizabeth was her name, and she was a lovely little girl, but she had one bad habit—she was most forgetful.

It was almost impossible to tell how many school books, hats, gloves, handkerchiefs, and other things she had lost. She didn't mean to lose them—she would lay something down and then go away and completely forget where she had left it. She always felt sorry when she forgot something. Sometimes she had to hunt a long time before she could find the thing she had lost, and often she never could find it.

One day she couldn't find her roller skates. She hunted the house from cellar to garret, and then she cried—how she did cry!

It's hard to tell how the Teenie Weenies heard about the matter—a bird, or a mouse, or a puppy dog, or a cat might have carried the news under the rose bush; well, anyhow, they did hear about the lost skates, and they found them just where Elizabeth had put them.

They were quite a distance from Elizabeth's home, but nevertheless the Teenie Weenies decided to get them over to her house, where she could find them.

The skates were terribly heavy for the little folks to handle, but with the aid of Teenie Weenie trucks they were able to do the work. The two tiny trucks, which had been stored away for the winter, were taken out of the Teenie Weenie garage and put into tip top shape. Putting a few tools into the trucks, several of the little people climbed in and drove over to the place where the skates lay. The skates were fastened to each of the trucks by a tow line, and the little engines started. It was slow work, but the tiny trucks chugged bravely along, pulling the huge, heavy skates after them.

"Can we ride on the skates?" asked the Dunce.

"Yes, you may," answered the General. "But remember there is to be no jumping on and off while the skates are in motion. If you should slip and fall under one of those big skate wheels there would be nothing left of you but a Teenie Weenie grease spot."

Several of the Teenie Weenies promised to be careful, and when the trucks stopped to cool off their tiny steaming radiators a few of the little people climbed on to the skates.

Every now and then the Teenie Weenies had to stop and shovel the sand away from in front of the skate wheels, for they were so heavy it was about all the little trucks could do to pull them.

It took a long time to haul the two skates to Elizabeth's house, but just before dark and while the little girl was at supper the Teenie Weenies drew the skates up and left them beside the back steps.

The next morning Elizabeth found her skates, and she wondered a great deal about the matter.

"Some one must have put them there," she said to herself. "I would have seen them while I was looking yesterday, for they are right in plain sight.

"I'll bet I left them somewhere, and some one found them and brought them home."

She would have been a much surprised little girl if she could have seen the two skates being hauled up the night before by the two tiny trucks.

Elizabeth's banty rooster saw it all, but he never said a word about the matter, and to this day the little girl never suspected the Teenie Weenies had anything to do with it.

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

THE LINE OF MARCH FOR THE MANNEQUINS.

By Mary Brush Williams.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS.—(Special Correspondence.)—You never saw as many people together in your entire life as assemble every afternoon to watch the passing pageant of spring at Jenny's. When I left this afternoon they were fighting for place on tables, and traffic policemen in the form of chic young French girls were "defending" (as the French say it) narrow passageways where people insisted on planting their chairs, because there had to be maintained a certain line of march for the mannequins.

There are, I believe, 329 model costumes, all of them in black where there used to be colors, and in colors where they used to be black. A sleeve, after pursuing a course perfectly consistent in color and line with the remainder of the costume, launches out for itself in a bell shape, and is black from a point just above the elbow. Yokes are in black, and you know that in the past if any spark of color was ever permissible anywhere on a gown it was in this department. Some embroideries are in black, and on pale tints—just after I have finished proclaiming that the French are fond of the barbarous colors. And so they are, I insist upon it, the pale colors are up merely because in the roll of fashions it has come their turn.

But that is merely where we Anglo-Saxons win, for we have always loved them. They are just as becoming as ever, and the French are getting a pale, washed, dust color into them that makes them more beautiful—just as the French always improve artistically on anything to which they turn their wondrous gifts of taste and hand.

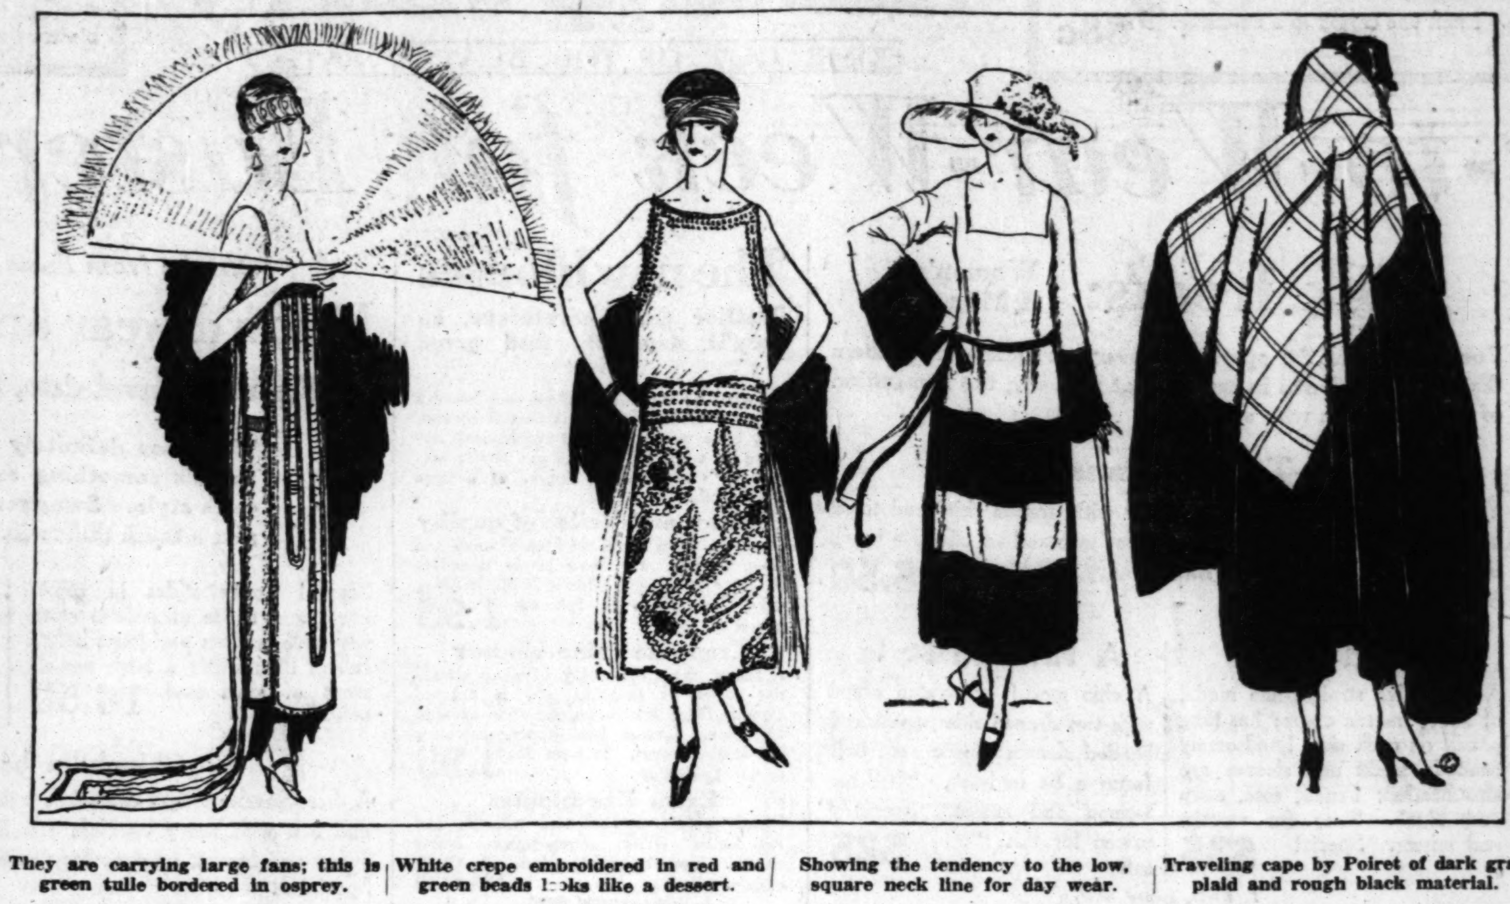
There is a coat of washed pink lined with washed blue, for the sake of which I should be willing to confine my activities to the Bois for the summer. They say that is as near Paris as you can wear it, but I fancy you could come down to the Etoile, and that's far enough. Besides, others of more speculative minds say that before the summer is over you will wear it on trains—such is the spread of the color movement.

Dressmakers now are trying to get clients into an occasional robe of black, but without avail. We're out of mourning, and they can't pull us back into it, the movement for colors having got beyond them. Now they are complaining that the buying public cannot take a joke, for in their souls the French people, particularly the dressmaking half of it, always preferred black.

As to fans—they are carrying them rather large. The accompanying illustration comes from life itself. When you hold the structure up to your face your head should shine through "le material tres legere" like a cameo. In fact, your own neck and shoulders in silhouette are supposed to furnish the decoration for its plain background of green tulle bordered in osprey. Hebe, the beautiful model, carries it robed in a gown of regal loveliness, by Molyneux, of white crepe de chine, consisting of a panel back and front beautifully embroidered in pearls and rhinestones. The one in the back descends into a graceful train. The low ceinture is studded in rhinestones.



They are carrying large fans; this is green tulle bordered in osprey. | White crepe embroidered in red and green beads looks like a dessert. | Showing the tendency to the low, square neck line for day wear. | Traveling cape by Poiret of dark gray plaid and rough black material.

The second costume shows in concrete form the inclination toward embroidery in gellatin beads. They are in red and green on white crepe morocain, in an apron effect over white plaited tulle, which shows in a full effect on the sides. The ceinture is studded with the beads and rests low on the hips. The blouse is entirely devoid of sleeves and the deep armholes are embroidered in beads, three rows deep, which take their boat shaped course round the edge of the neck. A hat by Lewis accompanies the costume. The crown looks like a sheaf of Canadian wheat. It is of straw, bound tightly, or sheafed, in crepe morocain, which ties over the right ear. The ensemble makes an effective costume.

The third offering tells in part the story of the Riviera. It is of white crepe de chine with black crepe de chine collar, cuffs, and hemstitched horizontal stripes across the skirt. Many of the belts are not so wide any more, and this one is in the current fashion. There is a tendency to extremely low decolletage for day wear this season, and the costume depicts it, the neck being cut low and square. Two panels run down the sides of the skirt from the waist. The hat, in the popular shape of great width, is of horsehair and trimmed in a bunch of violets.

The fourth model shows Poiret's notion of a costume equally good for motoring, sports, or serious travel—such as getting from Philadelphia to New York when I was back home. You could even get from Chicago to New York in it and from New York to Paris. It is of darkest gray plaid and heavy black rough material, accompanied by a tiny brown hat.

A FRIEND IN NEED

By Sally Joy Brown.

When information is wanted by mail a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send parcels to The Tribune, but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

Plea for Wheel Chair.

"I am making this appeal in behalf of an elderly woman who has not had the use of her limbs for twenty years. Her granddaughter supports her, but is unable to buy a wheel chair for her, as she has all she can do to keep up the home. This woman must sit all day long at a back window facing a switch yard. She longs for a wheel chair, so I have come to you; you have been so kind to others.

"MRS. T. C."

Of course, there must be a wheel chair in some dark corner, which may bring comfort and a happy smile to this patient woman.

Will Bring Back Health.

"Through your helpful department I plead for a coaster wagon for a 6 year old who is not only deserving but who must be helped to such outdoor amusement for health. There is no way for the child's parents to buy the wagon, and I am interesting myself to seek one. I am not able to help in as many ways as my heart desires, but in this case I will gladly come to Chicago and arrange for the transportation of the wagon. MRS. K. K."

Somebody must remember an unused coaster that this little fellow may have roses in his cheeks and sturdy little legs. The thought of his improvement should bring replies.

They'll Find Homes Soon.

"I have two cute fox terrier puppies which I would like to dispose of.

"R. M."

My telephone will tinkle all day today, R. M., with queries for these little cuddly pups. You will hear from me.

Left Alone All Day.

"I am a girl, 11 years of age. I have been sick, and I must stay in the house for a long time. My mother goes out to work and I am lonely. A girl friend gave me a doll, and if you would try to get a doll buggy it would make me happy. VERONICA."

Bless your heart, Veronica, for such a nice little note. I hope this brings a smart doll carriage so you may take your little girly for a walk, even if it does have to be in the house.

Without Home Ties.

"I wonder whether there are some other wretchedly lonesome young women in Chicago who would enjoy the companionship of one who is fond of long walks, lectures, and would take up golf. It is strange, that in a large city one can feel so completely isolated. I am sure there are many persons with the same feeling, who have no way of meeting desirable companions. The sickness of loneliness is real. Do you suppose that little wonder corner of A Friend in Need might accomplish a meeting of a few lonely persons? I shall be ever so grateful. My best wishes to you and success to your corner. C. D. K."

Your letter created a pleasant glow, C. D. K., and I hope that some women in Chicago, without home ties, and with kindred tastes, will see it and thus cause to be established acquaintances of real value to you and to them.

Sanitary Couch Offered.

"We have a sanitary couch which we will be glad to give to Mrs. N. S., who asked for a bed and springs. Perhaps you could find some boy going to high school or man who could use a chemistry outfit, complete, all but a few articles, which we are also glad to offer. L. J. S."

Mrs. N. S. has received a couch, thanks to another kind friend, but I am sure a place can be found where yours will fit nicely. And won't some ambitious boy be hapy to know he can procure such an outfit to help in his studies?

Supporting His Parents.

"I wonder if among your wide circle there is any one willing to help a deserving boy, the only support of a mother and invalid father? The father has been sick for months, and the burial last month of an older sister exhausted their slender savings. The boy works where it is necessary to be well dressed, and this he cannot do unless some kind hearted person gives him a suit, size 36. The father is commencing to get about the house, and sadly needs clothes. He wears size 40, and a last year's summer suit would be just the thing for him. NEMO."

Boys who support their parents need all the encouragement they can get, and there ought to be replies from any number of perfect 36's and obliging 40's to help this boy and his father.

Request Is Modest.

"I have five small children, and my husband has been out of work nearly all winter, which leaves us without any means. I would be thankful if you would ask some of your readers to let me have a cook stove, as the one I have is no good any more and I have no gas oven. I will appreciate the generosity. "MRS. C."

For one with your problems, your request is a modest one, and I trust that before this is off the press many hours that your husband and children will have biscuits from a better oven.

WHY I TOLD MY LAST LIE

Why did you tell your last lie? – Was that the "easiest way" out or did it get you into a worse fix? Tell what happened and how you felt about it. Perhaps you told what wasn't true to help somebody else out of a difficulty. Tell what impelled you to do it. Address your letter to Lie Contest Editor, The Tribune, Chicago. One dollar will be paid for each letter printed.

Chorus of Approval.

It happened as we were embarking for home from Brest of unhallowed memories. Do you remember Brest, with its rain and mud and slush and sleet unending—the place we said that God forgot?

On one of the evenings of the voyage back there was for the moment a lull.

Then one man had a brilliant idea. "A prize," said he, "for the man who tells the biggest lie!"

Every one took a chance. It came my turn.

"Why," I exclaimed, in my sincerest manner, "the place I would like to be in just now is Brest."

"You win!" all the other contestants chorused. And the prize was given to me immediately. J. L.

Sister Spills the Beans.

I have a rich old bachelor uncle, of whom none of us is over fond. He is proud of his name—Ebenezer Henry Jones—and he has always wanted a child in the Jones family to be named for him. However, his wish has never been granted.

One day we received a telegram from him saying he would be going through our city on his way to South America, and stop to visit us.

We have a bright youngster of a year about whom he'd never been told, so an idea struck me. I told my wife we would manage to get little Billy a good sized check from uncle, if she would help me. We planned to tell uncle that the child had been named for him. He would probably never return from South America, and never know the difference.

When uncle arrived we announced the good news and managed to address the child by his new name every few moments. Uncle announced I was the only sensible relative he had, and out came the check book, just as I had thought it would.

But alas! Our 3 year old daughter, who had been studying the situation, overcome by her curiosity, inquired shrilly: "Daddy, why you call baby that funny name? That's Billy."

Billy didn't get his check and uncle even forgot us in his will. C. D.

Part of the Cure.

My dearest friend had the flu. Then she developed pneumonia. I took heroic measures to save her life—even the doctor had given up hope and so had I. She looked so hopelessly at me and begged me to tell her the truth. I couldn't, and I told her she was better than the day before. It seemed to cheer her.

How many times she would ask, "Am I going to get well?"

Always my answer was, "Why surely."

I worked harder than ever and prayed that my lie might be but the truth. Her hopefulness led to cure. She is on the road to recovery and my last lie did it. C. T.

How to Make Grapefruit Jelly

Anyone Can Do It In Few Minutes Time — Serve It Tonight For Dinner.

Grapefruit jelly is delicious; gives just the right tang to the winter meal. Anyone can make it. You will need three or four grapefruit according to size. Grate off the yellow part of the rind into a dish. Cut the fruit in halves and squeeze out the juice. Mix the juice and grated rind and squeeze the mixture through a strong, fine cloth to remove rind and pulp. Measure carefully 3 cups of juice and 7 level cups (3 lbs.) of sugar into a large saucepan, stir and bring to a boil. Then immediately add one bottle (scant cup) of Certo, stirring constantly. Continue to stir and bring to a hard boil for one half minute, constantly stirring. Remove from fire, skim and pour quickly into glasses. This will make about 12 big six ounce glasses at a cost of only a few cents a glass.

The above recipe, as well as recipes for quickly and easily making Apricot Jam, Grapefruit and Orange Marmalades and all kinds of jellies and jams from bottled fruit juices, canned fruits, dried fruits and all fresh fruits, are found in the CERTO Book of Recipes. Get a copy today from your grocer or druggist or write for free copy to Pectin Sales Company, Inc., Dept. E, Rochester, N. Dr. West's TOOTH BRUSH

It isn't just an ordinary kind of tooth brush to be used mainly for brushing the grinding surface of the teeth. Any brush will do that.

Dr. West's Tooth Brush is purposely small. It has only nine rows of bristles, but the bristles are set differently. Notice how they're braced near the top and how the convex brushing surface conforms to the shape of the teeth. Sale price, 39c.

"How Many Calories in Your Menu?"

asks Antoinette Donnelly

What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet, or a set of exercises for what ails you and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply, send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, The Tribune, Chicago.

NEW YORK.—[Special correspondence.]—If you cannot converse reasonably fluently on calories as you slowly masticate your 100 of them out of the bread you put into your mouth, your prestige is threatened. Naturally, I cannot have any of my beloved readers taking a back seat while others launch forth on this topic of food science.

So today I present you a table of caloric values which you may study at your leisure, so that you will not only be able to join the Merry Calorie chorus, but that you, too, may know more about what foods to eat and what not, considering what may ail you. Or, being neither fat nor thin, what may keep your table rations and likewise your system in a well balanced state.

If you are fat and wonder why, look under pies and see what one-sixth of a piece, a fairly average home helping when it is not duplicated by a second piece, means—350 calories. Then try to double it, and imagine how quickly you might hope to get thin with a strong appetite for pie. Or take baked beans! Mayonnaise dressing on your salads! Look the list over carefully for the secret of that increasing waistline. Then study the list for substitutes.

Amount Required Varies.

If you are thin the reverse eye is turned on the table. Eat two balls of butter where you have before been eating one. Take olive oil more generously, cream, and so on.

If you are right and want to remain perfect, balance your menus fairly and squarely.

The amount of food required by the individual varies with height, age, and muscular activity. But the average person of sedentary occupation requires no more than 2,000 calories for the entire day. Occupations involving standing, walking, or work where there is more muscular output, as in housework, may require as high as 2,500. The woman at home with little or nothing to do requires between 1,600 and 1,800. And the woman who would reduce would better keep her food consumption for the day down to at least, 1,500—1,200, if possible.

Beauty Answers

MRS. J.: THIRTY IS THE PERIOD of full maturity, and keeping the weight approximately at what it should be at that age according to you height will keep you in good condition. Watch the scales. When the weight goes up the food portion must be decreased and a little more active exercise is recommended. Most women after 30 have to keep a "figure eye" on the scales.

UNHAPPY: EQUAL PARTS OF peroxide and ammonia will bleach the hairs on your arms if you will keep up the applications consistently for a while.

CHEERIO: THE SECRET OF washing a camel's hair puff is to make a suds of warm water and soap; let the puff soak a couple of minutes, then swish it around in that well. Then rinse in soapy water, not in clear. It will issue forth a soft, caressing young affair after drying. The washable gloves, too, by the way, are better for the soapy rinse.

That First Love Affair

"Puppy love, calf love"—
That is what the older folk unfeelingly call the first golden love affair of the boy and the girl. But to youth it is a serious matter. Sometimes it shapes lives. Sometimes it deepens into tragedy. But most of the time it is just a roaring comedy of the teens—a comedy that will bear telling now that its principal actors are older, with perhaps a bit of frost in the hair.

What was your "puppy love" affair? Can you tell it now without a wrench of the heart—with a laugh, say? If so—

The Tribune will pay $5 for each story published on "My 'Puppy Love' Story." Write on one side of the paper and make your story brief. Address Puppy Love Editor, The Tribune, Chicago.

MEN WERE INCONSTANT EVER.

I WISH I could describe Willie to you and do him justice. When I first knew him he was just a fat little dumpling. His clothes were handed down to him from his older brothers, who could not boast of Willie's dignified dimensions, and the result was a rather comical combination of dangling limbs and bulging fat.

Now Willie was my first valentine. Who can describe the ecstasy of a 6 year old lassie upon receiving her first valentine? Willie rang the front door bell, and when I opened the door handed an envelope to me and ran for dear life. It was a dirty wrinkled envelope, and addressed "To One I Love." To me it was the grandest, most wonderful thing that had ever happened. I hid it under my pillow at night and finally stored it away in the most sacred place my childish mind could think of—the family Bible. And I wonder if you can imagine the teasing I was subjected to from my elder brothers and sisters, but I held my head as proud as a peacock and dreamed of Willie.

In the meantime Willie and I sailed boats together on puddles and shared all our childish joys and sorrows. Every year when Valentine day rolled around, Willie was there with his token of love, each one prettier than the other.

Finally one day, six years later, I met my rival. Pretty curly headed Loretta moved into our upper flat, and Willie promptly fell victim to her charms. Nobody could help but love Loretta, but we quarreled constantly, for I was jealous. I had lost my cavalier, and when Valentine day came around again this is what I got:

Roses are red,
Violets are blue,
Loretta Spicer is purtier than you.

Many years have passed since then, and I have received many valentines, but none that pleased and hurt as much as Willie's. Willie and Loretta are happily married, but I sometimes wonder if Willie ever thinks back to the little pigtailed lassie who still cherishes that first valentine. M. W.

PIMPLY? Well, DON'T BE

People Notice It. Drive Them Off with Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

A pimply face will not embarrass you much longer if you get a package of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. The skin should begin to clear after you have taken the tablets a few nights.

Cleanse the blood, bowels and liver with Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the successful substitute for calomel; there's no sickness or pain after taking them.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do that which calomel does, and just as effectively, but their action is gentle and safe instead of severe and irritating.

No one who takes Olive Tablets is ever cursed with a "dark brown taste," a bad breath, a dull, listless, "no good" feeling, constipation, torpid liver, bad disposition or pimply face.

Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil.

Dr. Edwards spent years among patients afflicted with liver and bowel complaints, and Olive Tablets are the immensely effective result. Take one or two nightly for a week. See how much better you feel and look. 15c and 30c.

Happiness in Every Step

Have you said, "Every step is torture," when you walked in ordinary shoes that bind the foot and fail to provide the support which the arch needs? A change to Cantilever Shoes will relieve your foot troubles.

There is room for the toes, and the natural inner sole line permits them to point straight ahead in their natural position. In a shoe that twists the foot to turn the toes outward all the weight falls on the weakest part of the arch and pain soon results. But in the Cantilever Shoe the weight is shared by the heel, the ball of the big toe and the outside of the foot, thus taking the usual unnatural strain off the arch.

The flexible shank of Cantilever Shoes bends with the movement of the muscles. The foot is not restrained by a metal appliance nor by a rigid sole, but is free to exercise and strengthen in walking. Using the muscles which surround the small bones of the arch prevents and corrects flat foot.

Cantilever Shoes are good looking.

Dutch Colonial Executed for the Servantless Household

·SECOND·FLOOR·PLAN·

WHAT could be more inviting than those two comfortable seats which one comes upon at the end of the flagged walk leading to the main entrance of this Dutch colonial house?

The skillful housewife who wields the scepter in this servantless household, and who hasn't had time to tidy up before Mrs. Smith runs in of a summer's morning for a few minutes' chat, will detain her neighbor here, in the fresh air, and thus preserve untarnished her reputation as a spick and span housekeeper.

To balance the attractive arrangement just described, there is a glazed-in side porch on the opposite end of the house. French doors flood this little porch with a wealth of sunshine. Also, it is an ideal rainy day plac for the children. If it be floored with six inch by six inch square red tile set with large dark mortar joints, the porch is doubly attractive and can readily be tidied.

The living room, upon which one gains direct entrance from the main entry and which connects with the porch just described by means of French doors, is carefully proportioned and well lighted.

Facing the entrance is a large brick and tile fireplace with a tile hearth to which a bed davenport is a fit companion piece. Four large double hung windows, each with a large number of small panes, a good place for a built-in window seat, lend cheer to this arrangement.

Jutting off from the living room from which it is quite separate, as only an ordinary sized door connects, is a 14 foot 6 inch by 14 foot dining room, one side of it opening on the glazed-in porch previously described, another facing a simple but decorative garden arrangement, and another leading to the kitchen from which it is separated by a butler's pantry.

This suggests that a hinged table which can be folded down against the wall would be a handy article to place up against the wall and under the small window which lights the pantry. When guests are expected, the side dishes and desserts can be placed in readiness on the table, a built-in china cabinet being within easy reach.

Off from the kitchen is a pantry closet, a broom closet, and a separate compartment for the icebox which can be iced directly from the entry without entering the kitchen. Being in a room separate from the kitchen, although at the same time, close at hand, rapid melting of the ice on baking days will not be experienced. Relief from this common drawback of old style kitchens will be appreciated by the economical housewife.

Stepping down from the rear porch at the kitchen one is greeted by a well kept lawn centered about a sun dial set in a bed of flowers. Surrounding the lawn is a border of flowers. Here, too, we find the yard which can be divided into a vegetable patch and drying space, the remaining portion being given over to a garage and drive.

Reëntering, we find three bedrooms upstairs. The master's bedroom, which is 12 feet 6 inches by 16 feet 6 inches, has a large window seat built-in. If made of red cedar or other mothproof wood it makes a convenient place for unseasonable clothing.

Each of the other bedrooms has a fair sized closet, and all are only a step from the bathroom, which contains a linen closet.

Down in the basement we find furnace and coal room and a laundry. The coal room has an unusual feature, its bottom being hopper shaped to facilitate coal shoveling. Another interesting point which should be mentioned is that the ceilings over the coal and furnace room have been plastered on metal lath for added protection from fires at these points where fire is most apt to originate.

The Dutch colonial style, used by Architects Schwab and Cameron of New York City, who prepared the plans for this house, is handsomely executed in clapboard and shingles or may be carried out in stucco.

The smartest style note ever seen in boys' blouses

YOU can tell a Kaynee blouse the instant you see it on a boy. It has that air, that unobtrusive nattiness which immediately stamps it as out of the commonplace. This is because Kaynee designing, cutting and fitting are done by style originators for boys.

Then the fabrics! Kaynee blouse materials have an individuality and quality all their own. You'll find nothing better in the finest shirtings for men—exclusive patterns; the new fashionable neat stripes; tasteful solid colors all tubproof and sunproof; fine white madrases; oxford cloths and silks appropriate for boys. The little things of particular workmanship are apparent—patterns matched in the seams, accurate sleeve lengths, collars that fit precisely.

Kaynee blouses and shirts for boys and Kaynee washtogs for little chaps are sold in your town.

MY MOST EMBARRASSING MOMENT

Awoke Just in Time.

Once I visited my friend when his wife was at home alone. While waiting for my friend, his wife played piano, and I listened. I noticed that her face became white, and soon she fell in unconsciousness. I took her on my arms, carrying her to the couch. While I had her on my arms, her husband came in.

He seemed to be angry, and he said, "What does it mean. I see my wife on your arms?"

I tried to explain, but he cried, "Get out from my house."

When I was about to leave, she recovered and explained to him.

BILLY.

A Doubtful Retreat.

When I was 16 years old my timidity about being out alone at night was the cause of an embarrassing incident. I had spent the evening at the home of a friend, and about 9 o'clock, starting for home alone, I was much frightened. I was still several blocks from my home when I noticed a car running slowly close to the curb. I hurriedly left the sidewalk and went up on a lighted porch, where I intended to wait until the car had passed.

To my horror it stopped in front of the house. I realized I could easily be seen from the street, so I went to the door and, leaning over, pretended to look for the keyhole.

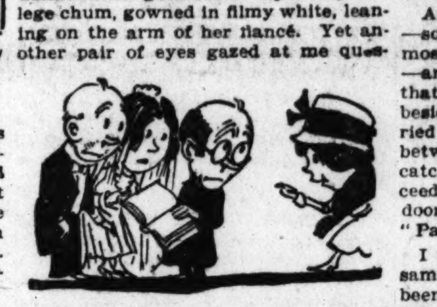
I heard a step behind me and there stood the owner of the house, angry and surprised. I was obviously trying to enter his house. I rushed past him and fled homeward, imagining I heard him running after and calling "Stop, thief!"

J. S.

Dumfounded.

Two weeks ago one of my dearest friends invited me and my fiancé to Sunday night tea. She and I have been dear friends since our college days, and are engaged to men who have always been good friends. Some trivial incident resulted in our being a few minutes late, and I rushed up the steps of her home most informally, flung the door wide, and, seeing her brother near, cried gayly: "Hello, there, Reed! I s'pose Helen thought we were never coming."

A horrified look in his eyes silenced me immediately, and, looking quickly around, I gazed into a veritable sea of reproachful, questioning eyes, and my dumfounded gaze rested upon my college chum, gowned in filmy white, leaning on the arm of her fiancé. Yet another pair of eyes gazed at me questioningly—those of our minister—and then his continuing "take this woman" told me all too quickly that my gay hello had interrupted nothing less than a wedding!



A card from Helen on her honeymoon says, "And were you really surprised?"

Surprised! I flush hotly whenever I think of my most embarrassing moment.

J. P.

Comes of Superstition.

Going downtown one morning I took a seat beside a man who seemed much engrossed in his newspaper. On the seat opposite us sat a young woman reading some kind of a textbook, and in the empty seat next to her was a large package of books, tied together by means of a leather strap.

At one of the stations the girl arose—somewhat hurriedly, as she had almost been carried past her destination—and hastened to the door. Noticing that she had left the books in the seat beside her, I picked them up and hurried after her. Other passengers came between us, and I had a hard time catching up with her, but finally succeeded just as she had reached the door. Touching her shoulder, I said, "Pardon me—your books!"

I felt a hand on my shoulder at the same moment, and the man who had been sitting in the seat opposite us faced me as I turned.

He panted: "Young woman—where are—you—going—with my books?"

It was certainly a most embarrassing moment for me when I handed him his property in the midst of a number of passengers who were leaving and eyed me suspiciously.

Zymole Trokeys Soothe Your Throat

A cough or dryness and tickling in your throat means irritated throat tissues that can be relived by the cooling, soothing effect of Zymole Trokeys.

These mildly antiseptic throat lozenges are a perfected combination of Menthol, Oil of Eucalyptus and Oil of Thyme, in a soothing base which dissolves and forms a temporary protective covering over the throat, thus helping to prevent the penetration of disease germs and giving the delicate membranes a chance to recover from irritation.

Not A Cure

Zymole Trokeys are not offered as a cure for serious diseases of the throat. Such cases should have the immediate attention of a competent physician.

Trokeys will, however, relieve an annoying and embarrassing cough, throat dryness, hoarseness, "Smokers' Throat" and other minor irritations which may lead to dangerous infections unless checked.

Safe For Children

Although Trokeys are not "candy," they may be given to children with perfect safety. They have a pleasant taste and are entirely free from harmful drugs and narcotics.

If you have not yet enjoyed the throat relief and throat protection which Zymole Trokeys give, get one of the handy, pocket-size, sealed boxes today at any drug store.

The TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

MADE FROM RICE.

Whatever favorite cereal we may not be able to find in the market on a given day, rice will be there almost to a certainty. Whether you want to prepare the simplest of meals, or the most elaborate, rice can be used from the soup to the sweets. Whatever be your physical condition you can eat rice. It is often the first food given to those who have been down to death. Perhaps if they had eaten more rice they would never have raced down that slope.

If you want to make a menu highly representative of some country you can almost surely use rice appropriately. The Indian curry and the kedgeree, the Turkish pilaf or pilau, the Chinese dishes of the type of chop suey, the Italian rice dishes like the saffron rice or risotto of Milan, the Spanish rice dishes with peppers and tomato, the French and German "milk rices," and the French "gateau de riz" which is the same as our old fashioned rice pudding baked in a great sheet—these are a few of the nationally characteristic things made from rice.

Has Many Possibilities.

If you want to extend some meat or fish or even a gravy, make it go a long way, use some rice with it. If you want a rice dish that is fully equal to meat, use cheese with the rice. If you want the most elegant setting for any creamed preparation, serve it in a rice border, formed in a ring mold. If you want something almost equal to an ice cream, steam rice in milk and chill it for a pudding to be served with a preferred sauce or cream only. If you have to be economical, and still want to have fine seeming dishes, there is nothing that will serve you so well as rice.

If you want to eat the simplest foods for health's sake, for religious motives, for thrift motives, or because you have time only for preparing the simplest things, use rice. Learn to use it in all its wondrous variety, and first learn to cook it simply. If you want to make rice water for a soup, make it, but do not cook rice in a lot of water. It is not necessary. The rice is then more than likely to be soggy, perhaps gray and repulsive looking, and unpalatable. You have wasted some of it, and this is not necessary.

If you are using the oven, you can cook your plain rice in it for a mold, for use with cheese, and for topping with a number of preparations which may be added to it after it is so cooked and further baked to finish. A creamed mixture, if not too thick, will combine with it excellently.

Oven Boiled Rice.

Butter baking dish of right size. Put three times as much water to boil as you are intending to use of rice. Pick over rice and wash well, then drain. Put drained rice into baking dish, pour the boiling water over it, add salt to taste, and cook in hot oven. The water will be so rapidly absorbed that the oven will not be steamed up any more than in baking old fashioned rice pudding.

Creole Boiled Rice.

Pick over and wash rice and put it to drain before putting water to boil. Use three times as much water as rice. For one cup of rice put three cups of water to boil in a kettle of the right size; add salt and any other seasonings, like butter, if you want them in. Add the drained rice slowly, so that the water does not stop boiling, if you want the most perfect effect. Let cook for five minutes with the cover off, then cover and cook over a small amount of fire for fifteen minutes. Uncover and dry off for five or ten minutes. It should be sparklingly white and dry, and not jellylike a bit on top, if you have been careful. Use it in no end of ways.

Vegetarian Rice.

Before putting the rice into the boiling water prepared for creole rice, you may put in some green pepper cut fine, carrot sliced thin or grated, onion, and some bacon fat. Be sure the water has boiled up again before adding rice.

Border Mold of Rice.

This may be called a halo for a dish. For a border mold nine inches across one cup and a half of boiled rice will be required. This mold is large enough for a large chop platter. It may be the halo for curried chicken, or curried lamb, creamed fish, pilaf, creamed vegetables, and for other mixtures. Rinse out the border mold with cold water before packing in the boiled rice, pack the rice into it solidly, and invert. With a spoon one may bank rice around on a plate so as to make a crater for a creamed mixture, if a border mold is not at hand.

Solid Mold of Rice.

A melon mold of solid rice, with a gravy or creamed mixture around it, may be quite elegant, or the mold may be of any shape preferred. For creamed fish it might have the shape of the fish.

Other Molds of Rice.

Line any mold with boiled rice, packing it down slightly so as to leave a well in the center. Fill center with prepared meat or gravy, cover with rice, set mold in hot water in oven, cover with a plate, and bake for half an hour until the mixture is boiling hot at center. Serve from dish or mold, or turn out. Many of the Turkish ~~pilaf~~ receipes call for the burying of cooked chicken in a great mound of rice like this.

Border of Rice for Stew.

One of the least expensive of stew recipes I know of came to me, with others—one in which plain boiled and seasoned beans were served with a border of rice—kidney beans in a good amount of liquid with rice have been much used by the creoles for children. The recipe for the stew in question reads: Two cups of potato, one onion, two tablespoons lamb fat, one teaspoon salt, one cup carrot, one small turnip, one level teaspoon flour, water to cover. Slice or dice the vegetables, and cook until tender with the lamb fat, covered with water. When done drain off liquid for use in sauce, and shake vegetables over fire for minute. Thicken liquid with the flour, and let the vegetables simmer in it a few minutes. Serve on hot platter with border of plain boiled rice. Instead of this inexpensive mixture the finest of chicken fricassee may be served in the same way. Perfectly cooked rice and chicken gravy are a most palatable mixture.

Chicken Curry.

One pound of cooked chicken, cut in small pieces; one onion, two tablespoons of butter, one sour apple, one-fourth cup of ground fresh cocoanut—if you can get it—five cardamom seeds, six cloves—these can be dispensed with—one teaspoon of curry powder, one-half teaspoon salt, a knife point of cayenne pepper, two tablespoons of browned flour, one cup of water. Fry the onion and chicken and apple gently until the chicken is brown—twenty minutes to one-half hour—stir in the flour with which has been mixed the curry powder. Shell cardamoms, and tie them with the cloves in a bit of new well rinsed cheese cloth, and add with the water to the fried mixture, stirring until the sauce boils and is smooth. Add the cocoanut, and simmer for an hour. Serve with boiled rice and condiments.

Rice and Cheese.

A little less than one cup of rice put into one cup of cheese sauce and used as soon as the two are blended, or baked in the oven, may make a most palatable dish, but the sauce must not be too thick. More than this measure, or half, may be used. In combining rice and cheese by this method, the cheese is evenly and perfectly melted, as it is not by other methods, in every case. By this method the cheese seems to go twice as far, and every rice kernel will be soft and savory. A tiny bit of curry powder may be used in seasoning the sauce. The combination should have the consistency of a heavy batter. If to be finished in the oven, butter a baking dish, put in mixture, cover with bread crumbs, and bake twenty minutes.

Quick Creamy Rice Pudding.

Like unto the rice and cheese is this imitation of the long baked old fashioned rice pudding. Make a white sauce of one level tablespoon of butter, one level tablespoon of flour, and one cup of milk, with a bit of salt, and sweeten it with two tablespoons of sugar. Flavor with nutmeg or any other flavor. A little preserved ginger is good. Stir into the sweetened sauce one cup of cold boiled rice, breaking up the latter if necessary, so that the two will form a homogeneous mass, and cook as gently as possible for fifteen minutes. Serve hot or cold. If cold, use whipped cream and garnish it with a bit of fruit or candy.

Chilled Rice.

A dessert approximating ice cream may be made by folding whipped cream into cold rice so cooked that each grain is expanded to the utmost, and then packed in ice and salt as in making a mousse. Serve with thick maple sirup or something of that nature. Rice steamed perfectly in milk is perhaps the most ideally cooked for this dessert.

Doris Blake's Answers to Love Problems

Have you a perplexing love affair on which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake, care The Tribune, Chicago. If you wish a personal reply please send a stamped, addressed envelope.

Don't Spoil Him.

"Dear Miss Blake: I have kept company with a boy one year. Lately he has been speaking about a girl who was his sweetheart three years. This girl claims that her love for him is great, and so is mine. Kindly advise me what to do. A. D."

Whatever you two girls do, do not acquaint the young man of his flattering position, else it may go to his head and ruin him absolutely for the survivor—whichever of you two it may be only time and the young man's fancy will disclose.

It Amuses Her.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a young man of 20 and I am going with a girl of 21. I love her and she loves me. When we are at a dance hall or any public place she seems to know quite a number of young men, whom she points out to me to be her former sweethearts, but says she does not care for them any more. Trouble occurs when we are sitting down at a table. She flirts with quite a few, but when I try to tell her not to do so she seems to be quite amused and continues same until we leave the place. Now when I am at her house I remind her of what she does, and she tells me she only wanted to have some fun. Please tell me how I can cure her of this habit. ANXIOUS."

The way to cure a habit like that, Anxious, is to ignore it entirely. She knows it teases you, and that is her idea of having fun, which is not my idea, however. You could make her see how unflattering such conduct is by doing a little flirting yourself some time.

Just Before Christmas.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a young girl 16 years of age and went with a fellow three years my senior for two months. We showed much affection for each other, but three weeks before Christmas he stopped seeing me for what reason I could not understand, as we always got along wonderful. He has recently called me up and claims he had a cold during his absence and wishes our friendship to continue as he says he could never love any other girl. Miss Blake, will you kindly advise me what to do, as I am much puzzled, and also whether you think a girl of my age should go steady with one fellow. BILLIE."

I do not think a girl as young as you should have one young man to absorb all her time. Don't you think it would be nicer to have a number of boy friends, and thus give yourself a chance to be better able to judge men when you are older and you have the problem of "the one and only" to settle.

Would Share Trouble.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am keeping company with a girl who believes in sharing my troubles. Recently my brother died and according to our religion I am not supposed to enjoy myself for a year. She remarked that she will also be without enjoyment for the year. How can I convince her she is unjust to herself, or is she justified? "T. O. B."

Perhaps it gives her more pleasure to be of consolation to you in your time of mourning. I should not urge her. Let her decide for herself. She is what you would call a true friend, is she not?

THAT'S always the first thing they think of when it comes to renting a spare room.

Nothing is more appreciated than a good bed spring and clean bed clothes. It's much cheaper to buy a DOWNY REST Bed Spring and make your guests really comfortable than to have new guests coming and going constantly.

When there is more than one occupant, a DOWNY REST assures individual comfort on every double bed, wood or metal—the sensitive surface responds to every movement—yields to the slightest pressure without disturbing either occupant.

And after many, many years of service, even under severe usage, the DOWNY REST Spring will be just as good as the day you bought it. Ask your dealer—ask him today.

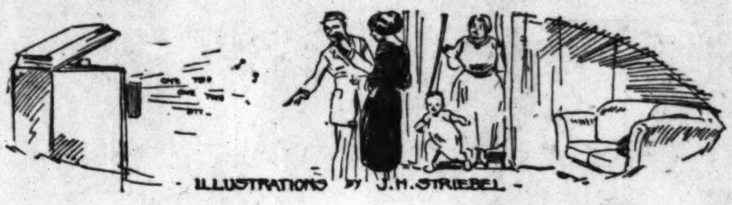
THE POTTERS

by J. P. McEvoy



ILLUSTRATIONS BY J. H. STRIEBEL

A woman, says Remy de Gourmont, can remember her first kiss long after a man has forgotten his last . . . and as in love, so also in war . . . a man has forgotten the last spat when a woman is still fighting the first one . . . she can make up her face much quicker than her mind and either one quicker than a quarrel . . . especially if, as in Mamie Potter's case, she has decided to let the man make it up first . . . all of which is by way of introducing the information that Red Miller and Mamie Potter are reconciled again after the spat which resulted from too much attention paid Mamie by an artist friend of Red's during a recent studio dance . . . according to Samuel Butler, life is merely one long process of getting tired . . . but to a lover life moves not in a complacent circle but in a mad, mad spiral.

Scene I.—Bill Potter Starts Something.

Eleanor, who, you may recall, is Bill Potter's friend, has been visiting Mamie and has had dinner with the Potters . . . Bill was on his best behavior, keeping his elbows off the table and not reaching (much) . . . after dinner (Ma still calls it supper in unguarded moments) Mamie stayed back to help clear off the dishes (the girl must not be feeling well, thinks Ma) while Bill and Eleanor adjourned to the living room, where we follow in spirit . . . are you with us? . . . good!

BILL (at door):
Gosh, it's dark! . . . waddye say
We have some light on the subject . . . eh?
(Undoubtedly that was a clever one once.)

ELEANOR (with a quaver in her voice):
O, I' afraid of the dark . . . good night!
Where is the button, Bill? Turn on the light!

(Bill, being comparatively unsophisticated, will probably find the button . . . this may be one of the occasions he will look back upon some day as another wasted opportunity.)

BILL (running hand over wall):
Holy gee, it's black as a cat . . .
Button, howdy! Where at are you at?

(Murderous glare of light from ceiling suddenly rewards Bill's efforts. It requires astounding genius to combine all the bad lighting effects one can find in the usual apartment house fixtures.)

ELEANOR (seating herself on couch and considerately leaving plenty of room for Bill . . . girls are so thoughtful that way):
Elmer was asking about you today;
Wanted to know if you're going to start
Taking that mail order course right away.

BILL (doggedly):
Have a heart, Eleanor! Gosh, have a heart!

ELEANOR (continuing imperturbably):
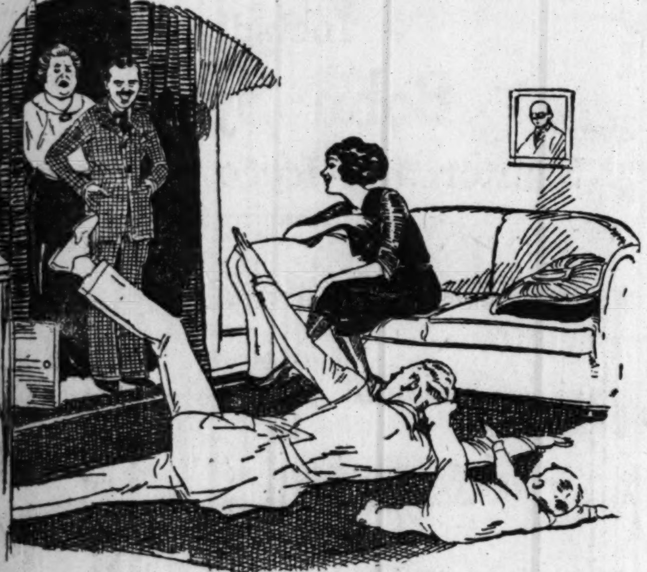
Elmer was saying that course "How to Sell"
Helped him a lot and would benefit you.
Why don't you take it? You could very well.



"That home brew stuff sure goes to one's head."

BILL: But, Eleanor, golly! I know how to sell.

ELEANOR: Well, mayble you do, but these lessons are swell;
The Secret of Selling—Scientific and New.

BILL (resignedly):
Well, I'll take the course if you're wanting me to.

(Those Eleanors always get what they want . . . but maybe a course like this will be the making of Bill . . . such things have happened; it says so in the ads . . . doorbell! . . . voices . . . Mamie's and a familiar deep one . . . it's Red! . . . rapture—for Mamie.)

BILL (brightly):
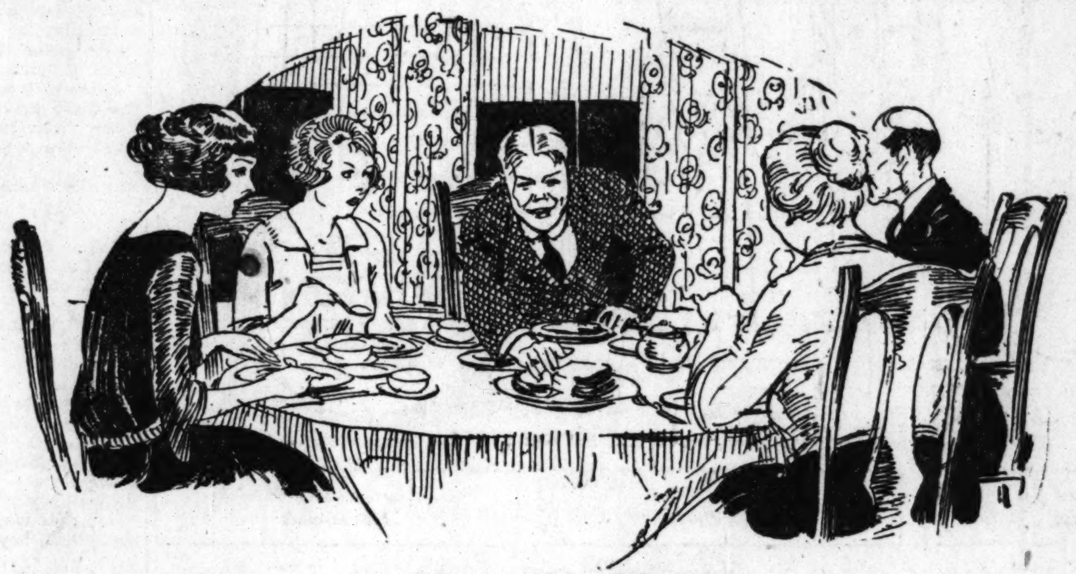
Here comes Red . . . c'mon, let's go.
They'll both be hanging around, you know;
We'll go to the corner and see the show.

(Hustles Eleanor into her coat and hat . . . gets his own and both breeze by Red and Mamie, who are too occupied with each other to more than barely notice their departure.)



Bill was on his best behavior.

Scene II.—Bang! Goes a Secret.

The Potter living room, disclosing Red and Mamie this time, instead of Bill and Eleanor, who evaporated, Bill being adverse to Mamie's critical analysis of his technique with the other sex . . . well, only a few of us can have that strange power over women . . . Red and Mamie have discreetly left burning only the little light which illumines the record in the top of the phonograph . . . undoubtedly the invention of a perspicacious petter . . . well, so long as Love is blind, anyway, what's a little light more or less among friends?

MA (entering Cimmerian darkness with firm, unmistakable tread):
I think you need some light in here.
Couldn't you find the button, dear?

(Cruel but not at all unusual . . . mothers seem to have a passion for light, especially mothers with growing daughters.)

MA (snapping on light and continuing remarks):
When I was a girl I couldn't sit
In the parlor at night with no lights lit.

MAMIE (snappily):
You probably had a coal oil lamp—
That's dim enough for any vamp.

RED (willing to change the conversation . . . when mothers start the "when I was a girl" stuff it is time to reef the mains'l and stand by for a squall):
I feel like a dance . . . let's start the vic'—
Give us a piece that's got some kick.

(Goes over to machine, winds it, gives record already on it a spin, and starts her . . . grabs Mamie as machine gets under way . . . meanwhile Ma sits down to visit a spell.)

MACHINE: Grr . . . Grr . . . Grr . . . first lesson first exercise sit down on the floor place your hands about a foot and a half behind your hips bend your right leg on the count of one . . .

MAMIE (stopping dead in her tracks):
What in the world is the matter with that?

RED (listening a second):
It's one of them records they have for the fat.

(Ma, who had forgotten to take the record off and hide it with other how to reduce by music records she has been keeping secret from the family, is turning a bright red.)

MACHINE: Lower it on count of two legs stiff ready begin one two one two up down up down . . .

MAMIE (gleefully):
Are you reducing to music, Ma?
Gee, that's rich! I must tell Pa.

MA (with righteous wrath):
Don't be giving yourself any airs—
Just you mind your own affairs.

(Baby, awakened by record, recognizes poisonous little waltz . . . climbs out of bed and comes into living room in his night pants and begins to go through first exercise gravely, just like Mamma does it every day.)

MAMIE (noticing Baby):
Lookit the Baby; isn't that sweet!
(To Ma) I betcha you can't do 'em so neat.

(Ma, who would have given a young Liberty loan if this had never happened, is in no mood to reply . . . what will Bill say? . . . and Pa! . . . they'll never get finished kidding her . . . and she has just been giving him such a wifely laugh about his gymnasium . . . the little birdies do come home to roost!)

RED (struck with brilliant idea):
Let's play the records one by one
And I'll go through the stunts for fun . . .

MACHINE (which has been batting right along):
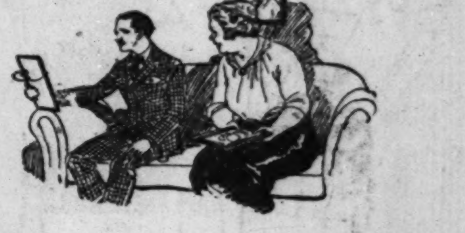
Third exercise lie down on your right side and extend right arm upwards raise left arm and leg as high as possible on count of one lower on count of two ready begin . . .

(Red suits his actions to the words and begins exercise gleefully . . . Baby, lying down behind him, following suit . . . Ma bright crimson with embarrassment . . . doorbell rings . . . Ma hurries out to answer it and returns almost immediately with . . . whom do you suppose? . . . none other than George, the artist, who has come to see Mamie.)



Showing George some watercolors her girl friends made.

GEORGE (very dapper and artistic, pausing to view strange appearance of Red on floor, gayly raising left arm and leg as high as possible and lowering them to weird music):
Good evening, Mamie . . . H'lo there, Red—
That home brew stuff sure goes to one's head.

RED (who is now even more embarrassed than Ma was):
Why, I was just . . . just . . . I was just . . . just . . . I—
That is I was just . . . I was just, just . . . why . . .

MAMIE (saving situation sweetly):
These exercise records are loads of fun,
Aren't they, mother? You've done every one.

MA (to George):
I was going to keep them a secret, too,
And surprise them all; now what'll I do?

GEORGE (sympathetically):
Why, you don't need them at all, I'd say;
You're well proportioned enough this way.

(Is he not a knowing lad? Yes, he is a knowing lad! That's right, children!)

RED (making one of those quick decisions which go with that shade of hair . . . they say primitive men were all red headed, hence the survival of the fittest):
I've got my car outside, you know—
C'mon, I'll take you to the show.
Get your things; c'mon, let's go.

(The car is one of those little go-to-the-devil two seaters . . . there'll be no room for George this night, ah, no . . . Mamie sorry she must leave, but what can she do? . . . George has nice eyes, but she is really in love with Red . . . she found that out after their last quarrel . . . makes profuse excuses to George and exits with Red to car, leaving George a bit bewildered with the speed of it all.)

MA (settling herself for a nice cozy chat with George):
So you're an artist! Isn't that grand?
And you paint real pictures all by hand!
Where do you get the ideas you get?
You make them up out of your head, I bet.

GEORGE (dazed . . . so that's the way she treats him when he came to see her! . . . well, well, they're all alike. You can't depend upon any of 'em):
I make 'em up out of my head, I guess . . .
O, yes . . . yes, yes . . . yes, yes . . . O, yes . . .

(Scene closes with Ma showing George some watercolors her girl friends made in school . . . it required only this to make George's evening complete.)

(And that's that—until next Sunday.)

TOP COATS ARE NOW REPLACING ULSTERS

By A. T. Gallico.

This department will be glad to answer any questions regarding men's fashions and the correct thing to wear on different occasions. Address communications to A. T. Gallico, Chicago Tribune, Chicago. Inclose stamped, addressed envelope for personal reply.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Spring is the time of year when man finds within him the greatest craving for change, but, unlike the dumb animals, who unconsciously grow new coats of fur or shed old skins, he must pack up the winter's heavy coats in moth balls, put them upon high shelves until another winter comes, and replace them with the lighter topcoats of spring.

Not that there is anything strikingly new or different in the coats of this season. In fact, it is not necessary to buy a new coat in order to have a change, for the difference between a heavy interlined dark overcoat and a skeleton lined topcoat, lighter in texture and sometimes in color, is enough to make one realize that the blustery, chilling season is over and the time for balmier winds has come. It is a common experience to put away in some remote recess of the closet a garment of which one tires and thinks to give away and then one day to pull it out and wonder why one hasn't been wearing it all along. It is the same with a spring coat. Perhaps you have already done so; if not, get out your last year's coat and see if the effect isn't novel.

And yet, if you need a new one, or can afford one whether you need it or not, you will find many good looking coats that will appeal to you, perhaps more than the one you have. In my observations around the shops I have seen in the conservative coats no innovations in cut or style. As with the winter great coats, England sets the standard for the topcoats of the day worn by the conservative and best dressed men of this country. In the highest priced stores the models are imported directly from England, and English lines are copied, to a great extent, by the manufacturers and tailors on this side.

The loose box coat, unbelted, is perhaps the predominating style among the conservative dressers. These are the slip-on variety, often with raglan or kimono sleeves, and they are not at all shaped at the waist, but have straight up and down lines, with plenty of sweep and fullness.

Those men who in the winter favor a standard Chesterfield will turn in the spring to the slightly form fitting topcoat of the Chesterfield model with, of course, no velvet collar. These coats have always a fly front, meaning that the buttons are hidden, instead of buttoning through the goods. Such a coat is distinctly for city wear, and would not be as practical for an all around coat as the slip-on, which is proper for town as well as country, or even for motoring.

Since the desire in spring clothes is a relief from the bulkiness of winter great coats, most of the models are single breasted, although some double breasted are to be seen. Collars are inclined to be a trifle broader this season. On the loose coats patch pockets are most common, with or without flaps. A small cuff is almost always on the sleeves. The fitted Chesterfields, on the other hand, make no attempt at trimming of any kind.

As for belts, although English coats do not have them, there are many coats designed on this side which make use of this form of decoration. It is only the young men who demand this style. Perhaps it is a hankering after the military. At any rate, the loose belted topcoat is in popular demand this spring, but the plain English box coat is still the conservative wear for young and old. The belted model gives more the effect of a sport coat for the country or motoring.

Materials outdo each other in softness and beauty of quality. For this, however, we turn first of all to the looms of England, Scotland, and Ireland. The Irish homespuns, Scotch cheviots, and English tweeds, in plan patterns or in herringbone, featherbone, or barleycorn design, are the favorites for the slip-ons. The materials differ from the winter stuff in being much thinner, although of the same weave. The colors tend towards light grays and tans. For the fitted coats darker colors predominate, such as oxford gray or black, but they are also to be had in the lighter goods. Covert cloth, a fine weave stuff, is often used for these Chesterfields. I saw some extremely good loking top coats in what is called a crombie velour, a velour finished cheviot of light weight, soft and fuzzy.

You will see here and there unconventional slipons of a knitted cloth, which is something like jersey cloth but looks more like a regular woven material. The coat second from the right in the drawing is such, used as a sort of drizzler. It is of dark green. Coats of an overplaid pattern, as the one at the extreme right of the illustration, make their appearance now and then.

Real Love Stories ♡

Do you know a real love story—one that is stranger than fiction? It is the idea that is wanted. No attention will be paid to literary style. The Tribune will pay $5 for every story published. No manuscripts returned. Address Doris Blake, The Tribune, Chicago.

UNLIKE MOST HEROINES.

I OFTEN grow tired of reading love stories about beauties, gorgeous young creatures with exquisite bodies, magnificent hair, dazzling eyes, and all the rest of it; and am glad that the most romantic love story in the history of our town was that of a plain little old maid, close to 40 years of age.

Dr. Mary Holden was actually homely, not one of the type so often portrayed in romantic fiction, who is hideous in the first chapter, and then washes her hair, takes some exercises, and a facial massage, buys a new dress, and presto, is a dazzling beauty. Dr. Mary's French maid can never transform her thin, mousey hair into a crown of glory, no modiste can alter her wiry little figure, stooped in the service of her neighbors and her country, and, God willing, may nothing ever dim the twinkle in her nearsighted eyes or repress her big, irregular smile.

Out town forgot that Dr. Mary was homely, and resented it when a stranger reminded us, for she was a ministering angel for years, and her skill pulled many of our little ones out of the shadow. It was a pleasant and familiar sight to see her bobbing down Main street on her large flat heeled shoes—for she never charged or collected enough to afford a car.

When the war broke out she went to France, returning after it was over, more lined and more stooped than before, but with all the honors our country awarded its women for heroic service; and in a few weeks she had slipped back into her unassuming place of caring with untiring patience for the lame and the halt and the blind.

While in the service she had been sent from France to Serbia in charge of a party of about fifty nurses. As a result of the hardships endured during a year there, one of the nurses became so ill it was necessary for Dr. Mary to take her back to Paris. Somewhere on the journey, near the English lines, the girl became delirious, and the doctor was compelled to appeal for help to some English officers, one of whom accompanied them back from the front. Their experiences on that perilous journey were harrowing, but during those black days and nights Dr. Mary learned much of this man and his eventful life, and he no doubt soon came to appreciate the strength and fineness of character of the plain little woman. He was about her own age, an English baronet and a widower, whose wife had been an actress and a noted beauty.

Before their destination was reached, he was summoned back to the front, and the last words he spoke to her before leaving were: "Little doctor, I love you, and when this ghastly conflict is over I am coming to you."

She had news later that he was seriously wounded and could not write to her, and she had never heard from him again. Those were the only words of love that were ever spoken to her, but when she confided them to me, I was sure that a halo shone round her which made me forget that she was not a radiant young beauty of 20.

It was only a few weeks later than this that the town was stirred with rumors of cablegrams to Dr. Mary, and then Sir John Forrester, as romantic and as unbelievable as a knight of the Round Table, materialized at the end of a long quest for our own Dr. Mary. He had been blind for two years, but now his only blindness was that of love.

It was not long before her title was changed from Dr. Mary to Lady Mary, and there never was such a wedding in our town. You must have seen pictures of it in the supplements of the newspapers, for Sir John is a personage whose marriage was a matter of international importance. Perhaps when you looked at those pictures, Dr. Mary's horned rimmed spectacles looked ridiculous under her wreath of orange blossoms and her priceless veil, an heirloom in Sir John's family, but to us she was the loveliest bride the sun ever shone upon.

Bright Sayings of Children

Robert found a stray dog and took it home, saying:

"Mother, please can I keep him? He hasn't got any place to go or nothing to eat, but he has got feelings, mother. Come look how sorry he looks."

G. M.

She was talking over the phone with her cousin, aged two. He cannot talk much as yet, and kept saying, "Da, da, ma, ma, da," etc. When she finished she turned to her mamma and said in a disgusted way, "He talks so foolish an' I talk so won'aful."

L. S.

Robert's parents owned a car and of course he was quite familiar with the method of starting it and also enjoyed the many rides which the family took.

He had, however, never been on a steam train and one day his mother took him to visit his grandmother many miles away, and this necessitated a journey by train.

After they had taken their seats and the train began to move, Robert slid down from his seat, looked up and down the aisle, then turned to his mother and said, "What I'd like to know is where they crank this thing."

J. H. S.

"How do you race about this morning, Bobbie, indoors and out, and up and down stairs all in a minute. What is the matter with you?"

"O, I don't just know, mother, unless it's cause my feet feel so light hearted."

R. G.

A childless couple who live not far from us have a whole yard of pets which are a delight to the children of the neighborhood. Ellsworth, on his return from there the other day, heaved reminiscjently and remarked: "My, that would be a nice fambly for some little boy to be borned into."

M. O.

Tommy had a little brother and a little sister.

One day a neighbor again met him going to the market and pleasantly asked: "Are you the only child?"

"Nop," he importantly replied, "but I'm the only one working."

F. J.

Mildred did not want to go shopping with her mother—she wanted to play with her cousin, who lived about a block from her house, so her mother told her to go over to Aunt Mary's and ask if she could stay until she came home. Mildred said: "Aunt Mary, mother wants to know if you will please borrow me until she goes shopping."

G. M.

My granddaughter, Mary Elizabeth, while out walking with me recently, noticed a woman who was wearing an old fashioned dress as long as those worn some years ago. Looking up at me with a queer smile on her face, she said, "O, look at that lady, dressed to her feet."

1324—Woman's house dress. Sizes 36, 40, and 44 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 4¾ yards of 36 inch material.

1313—Woman's and miss' dress. Sizes 16 years and 36, 38, 40, and 42 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 4¼ yards of 36 inch material.

HOW TO USE THE PATTERN

THERE seems to be no end to the variety of aprons, and each one in its way is attractive. The one shown here is simple to slip on or off, which is a great advantage for a housewife.

This pattern, No. 1295, is cut in one piece, and any of the usual materials, from galatea, sateen, or percale, to one of the cotton crêpes, will be appropriate. It is a good plan to hold the pattern up to one before cutting, so as to be certain that the length in the front will be right. The shoulder straps, as can be seen from the picture, cross in the back and button to the body of the apron at the waist line.

The apron edges may be finished with a binding, or an inch and a half wide facing stitched to the right side. But in addition to this a small piece of linen tape should be hemmed to the wrong side of the apron, right under the place where the buttons are to go. Finish the apron first and then cut pieces of tape about one and one-half inches long, turn in both ends neatly, and hem by hand to the wrong side of the apron, directly under where the buttons are to go. Then when the buttons are sewed on make a deep enough shank of the thread to allow the buttons to go through the material easily. Some women place a tape needle or something of the kind between the button and the material so as to be sure about the shank, but it should not be necessary.

The straps may be made double, stitching in a seam on the wrong side and turning right side out.

If a right side facing is decided on as a finish, a true bias strip may be used, stretching it on the lower edge so it will fit around the apron curves on the upper edges. It probably can be made to fit smoothly almost every place. Where the curves are greatest it may be necessary to lay one or more small plaits, and if so they should be uniform in depth.

Pattern No. 1324 is attractive for some of the thinner materials. Chambray or batiste would seem to be especially suitable. The waist is simple to cut and make. It buttons down the front under the surplice collar. The skirt is a two piece, straight gathered model; nothing can be more simple.

Pink chambray with ruffles of the material edged with footing would make a charming dress. These ruffles when finished should not be over an inch wide and to them a two inch wide ruffle of footing should be whipped by hand. A ruffle is set in the skirt seams by basting to one edge, then baste the seam together and stitch. The ruffle will make the skirt dressy and will be becoming to any one. The edge of the collar and turned back cuffs are finished with the same sort of ruffles, and it would be pretty to cut the pockets deep enough to turn over and finish them in the same way.

This pattern is equally well adapted for one of the light weight woolens, serge, cheviot, wool serge, or crepe, and instead of any ruffling use some effective embroidery. If the lower section of the sleeve is used cover with some design embroidered in bright colors, using a little on the ends of the sash also.

Pattern No. 1313 consists of a one piece straight gathered skirt and a kimono waist that closes in the back. There is a cape collar that transforms the dress into one of the most up to date of the season's models. It is suitable for almost any material one may care to use, from the new chudda cloth or ratine to taffeta, satin, or one of the crêpes.

Bright colored linings and facings are used with excellent effect, and would add to the beauty of a dress of this kind. The cape, sash, and under sides of the lower sleeve sections could be finished with some contrasting color. Jade green, red in one of the many beautiful shades, or tan would look well.

The skirt could be finished with a conventional border design in outline, Kensington or other embroidery stitch, and the lower sleeve sections could be decorated in the same way.

Take time to do the work well on every part of the dress, and it will always be satisfying. Nothing ever looks well when carelessly done. A garment that is made properly will never need a stitch in repair unless, of course, one meets with some accident.

What Science now tells women about Occlusia

How Impurities Clogging the Facial Pores Are Removed, and the Entire Complexion Beautified in Sixty Minutes!

EVERY human being is born with a perfect complexion. Not until the pores grow sluggish with the years do impurities blemish and coarsen one's skin. Occlusia (occluded or clogged skin pores) is, as science has learned, the one and only cause of sallow, dull, or colorless complexion.

And now, a young Englishman has dealt Occlusia its death blow. His discovery ends the condition in sixty minutes. While three women in five have occlusia, none need longer let it obstruct the natural beauty behind it.

McGowan has produced a compound that physics the skin clear through! Each of the million pores of face and neck are purged to their depths, left serene and clean, and aglow with the health of childhood! Do not confound his discovery with the "beautifiers" of which there are so many—for McGowan has given us a skin laxative. Applied outside, it acts on all three layers; the action is gentle, but thorough. All impure matter is loosened and passed through the pores, and wiped away as if it were but surface soot.

Your first experience with Terradermalax, as this new element is known, will be a distinct surprise. Mind, the application and results are the matter of one, short hour—and you will be astounded at the change wrought. Not only can you feel the new, deeper cleanliness of skin through and through, but the face will have its full tinge of color—natural, glowing color—color that will stay.

I will never forget what I saw through the scientist's microscope. It gave me a shock to see what an unclean accumulation is choking the skin that would pass for clean. No fastidious person could view it and not be everlastingly grateful for this positive means of moving the pores. Nor could any woman who sees the new texture and color, after one blissful laxation of the skin, ever again let it become unlovely through failure to function.

The application of this new element is not difficult, but a delight. For it comes in a marvelously fine clay, the mere spreading of which starts laxation. Wiped off an hour later, the wholesome effect is seen in the clear color and super-smooth texture of the skin. Not a blackhead, pimple or any form of dirt, seemingly can resist the purging.

Those who want a supply of Terradermalax should write the laboratory where were first discovered, developed and demonstrated the miraculous things it can do. A compound for general use has been perfected, but it is of limited life, so each jar is dated and sent the user direct. You might be glad to pay liberally for such a boon to beauty and aid to hygiene, but a modest laboratory fee of $2.50 is all Mr. McGowan requires. Pay it on delivery—or enclose it if apt to be out when the postman calls. Either way, the fee will be returned if you are not gratified and simply astonished by the results. Use this form:

DERMATOLOGICAL LABORATORIES,
329 Plymouth Court, Chicago.

Please send two months' supply of freshly compounded Terradermalax soon as made. I will pay postman just $2.50 for everything. My money to be refunded if asked. (81)

Is Marriage a Failure?

Why do so many marriages go wrong? What are the underlying causes of happy marriages? Are there any happy marriages? What is the matter, if anything, with marriage, the institution? W. L. George, the English novelist, investigated 150 marriages. One hundred and sixteen cases he eliminated as unsuccessful; in five cases the husband was unfaithful; in ten it was the wife; the husband disliked the wife in three cases and in seven it was the wife who did the disliking. Only nine marriages, Mr. George says, were "apparently successful." "Marriage," he adds, "is on its trial before a hesitating jury." Look over the marriages you know yourself. How many are successes; how many are failures? And why? The Tribune will pay $1 for each letter published on the question: Marriage—what do you think of it? Address Marriage Editor, The Sunday Tribune.

Dividing the Income.

In considering the question of modern marriage and its seeming failure we are all inclined to stress feminine flightiness, jazz, overlooking entirely the economic status of modern womanhood. Or, if we consider it, we say, "Girls nowadays are too mercenary. They don't appreciate a good man. Love means nothing to them. They're out for money all the time and they marry for what they can get out of marriage. They keep nagging their husbands to give them more and more."

Well, that's one way of looking at it. But start from the other side. Girls really aren't mercenary. They don't marry for money. Most of them don't care whether they have more or less after they are married. If there were a way for a married woman to have financial freedom and independence, to be captain of her soul, it might help.

Before marriage, whether a girl earns ten or a hundred dollars a week, that sum is hers and she must manage on it. If she has apportioned a certain amount for lunches for the week and on Monday she spends it on a useless trifle, she goes without lunches and the next time she knows better. If she feels she can afford to spend more, all right; if she has to economize, she does that.

Now let us suppose an honest, upright young man wishes to marry her. She loves him and he loves her. Being much enamored they discuss nothing more mercenary than living in an eternal honeymoon on sandwiches made of kisses, and they get married.

Her life as a bride begins something like this: Husband says tenderly on Monday, "Here, my darling, is $15. That should buy our food for the week. Well, of course, if you really want to lunch at the Giltmore with your friends here's a $5 bill to make a splurge. I really can't afford it, but then I want you to have everything your heart desires. O, by the way, the bills for the gas and electric light ought to be in. Well, put them on my desk and I'll take care of them. I don't want you to worry about money. And, dear, anything you want you just ask me for. I won't deny my sweetheart anything."

Sounds delightfully easy, doesn't it? But you have either one of two results: A sullen, discontented wife, who goes without things she really needs and is entitled to, but won't beg for, or a gold digger who has no conception of her husband's income, but begs for and gets what she wants. She has no respect for herself, and no one else has any for her.

Is the solution a division of the income into three parts, equal amounts for the husband and wife, and the third part for expenses such as rent, food, trips, etc., which both share, with the home accounts to be handled by the wife? Or should the wife have a salary? Or what is the solution?

D. T.

Wanted—Executive Ability.

If clever American girls would consent to use their executive ability in preparing to put the management of their homes on a more nearly business basis, fewer marriages would go wrong.

Any girl knows that if she accepts a position as a librarian, a teacher, a journalist, she can rarely make good nowadays without special training. The average young woman seems to think she can somehow become a successful housekeeper any time; that training for the difficult task of homemaker is unnecessary. She depends upon her wit and adaptability to carry her through, and confidently assumes the responsibilities of marriage with little or no practical knowledge of economical buying, cooking, sewing, practical nursing, and general housekeeping practice and economy.

No wonder it is not long before she becomes nervously worn out with the work she has not the training to accomplish intelligently, and can never enjoy because she is so awkward at it. How often she becomes an irritable, nagging, dissatisfied wife, an unhappy failure as the maker of a peaceful home.

Few young men of today can afford to support a bungling housekeeper or a wife who saves her executive ability for use in women's political and literary clubs or other types of organizations. Parents who allow their daughters to enter matrimony with little or no practical training for its problems, the failure of educational institutions to train women for the greatest work of woman, and modern education in suffrage are responsible for many unhappy marriages.

Too many women resent the idea of their homemaking as really in one sense just a steady job. They are not willing to believe that a home, a husband's companionship, and the comfort of a family of children in old age are sufficient compensation for the early years of hard work. Let them ask almost any mature unmarried woman with years of hard toil in the business world back of her, who, realizing that she will soon be considered too old for her work, worries about who will care for her in her old age! She will tell them that in becoming housewives they had opportunities to make good in the best occupation open to women, and that it is a great pity so many young housewives are failures because of insufficient training for their positions and because of their inability to grasp their great opportunity in home making.

H. W.

Think Twice, Girls!

I do not believe the institution of marriage is a failure, but I do believe it is going on the rocks if more strict laws governing it and divorce are not enacted. As H. M. said in this column recently, if girls would look at a man's position, income, habits, thoughtfulness, and consideration and less at his ability to shake a wicked hoof on a polished floor until 3 or 4 in the morning, they would come nearer finding happiness. Not that I condemn dancing, but you rarely find a man who places pleasure first and business second who is not fickle, and he usually seeks the type of girl whose sole entertainment is the dance hall and the automobile.

I was in the courtroom in a certain county in Kansas recently when the judge granted twelve divorces in forty-five minutes. Eight of the twelve plaintiffs were men, and their chief complaints were that their wives went to dances over their objections, and with other men. In all eight cases the divorces were not contested, showing the women had no defense to offer.

We can look all around us, and see unsuccessful marriages; but we can also see successful ones; as to the ratio I would hesitate to say. Every engagement should be publicly announced at least ninety days before the marriage, and if people knew that divorce could only be granted when the conditions proved to be unbearable they would think twice before they leaped once.

Keep your ideal man before you, H. M., and don't despair. There are men who love books and children, who honor and respect all women as they do their mothers. When you meet that man, take him if he wants you. You will have a true pal and faithful companion.

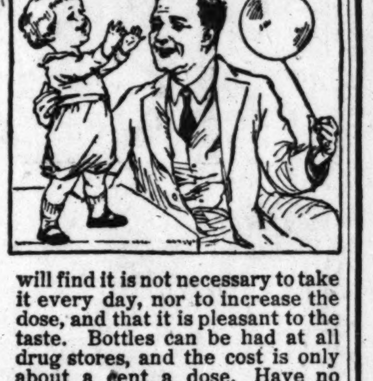
FOR A CONSTIPATED CHILD

A small dose of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin will bring quick relief.



MOTHER, when one of the children is constipated are you going to give the first laxative within reach? It is dangerous to do so. Some have been known to rupture the intestines of little children. Don't be beguiled by the outside sugary appearance. Look into the formula. Calomel is seldom necessary; salts, minerals, coal tar, never!

Unlike these, Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is admirable for children, as it is for grown people, too. Mothers have been giving it to children for 30 years. They know it does not gripe, and is free from narcotics. The formula is on every package, and you can see it is vegetable, just a combination of Egyptian Senna and other laxative herbs with pepsin. Use it yourself and you will find it is not necessary to take it every day, nor to increase the dose, and that it is pleasant to the taste. Bottles can be had at all drug stores, and the cost is only about a cent a dose. Have no hesitancy giving it to a baby in arms. It is absolutely safe.

Half-Ounce Bottle Free

Few escape constipation, so even if you do not require a laxative at this moment let me send you a Half-ounce Trial Bottle of my Syrup Pepsin FREE OF CHARGE so that you will have it handy when needed. Simply send your name and address to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 514 Washington St., Monticello, Ill. Write me today.

THE E. BURNHAM School of Beauty Culture

Offers the Opportunity to Learn a Highly Paid Profession for Women

Beauty Culture is most appealing to the woman who would follow a profession, either from choice or necessity. The work is very interesting—various kinds of treatments prevent the monotony that is an accompaniment of so many professions.

The money-making possibilities are remarkable. A woman who can conduct her own business may make a snug fortune to provide for years of comfort and an independent old age, while even the salaried operator is far better paid than in most professions for women.

You will use good judgment to study Beauty Culture at the Burnham School. We have been established over fifty years and follow the most scientific and up-to-date methods of teaching.

The name of Burnham is famous in the beauty world and carries prestige amongst the most fastidious class of women. Your Burnham diploma will attract the most desirable clientele.

The following courses may be taken either singly or collectively:

Hair Dressing Marcel Waving

Hair Dressing course includes Shampooing, Bleaching, Dyeing, Scalp Massage, Cutting, etc. Also fancy hairdressing for costume parties or the stage.

Marcel Waving is a separate course and is taught by a highly skilled instructor.

Manicuring

A most valuable course and a profession in itself. Course covers care of hands as well as nails and teaches every detail of manicuring by the most delicate method.

Facial Massage Skin Bleaching Electrolysis

Hair Cutting

Includes Bobbing for both women and children; Bang Cutting; Singeing; Shingling for Boys; Cutting of Fringe.

Skin Bleaching. Instantaneous treatment.

Scalp Treatment

A course that in itself is profitable for specialization. Teaches Hot Oil Treatment; Hot Oil Shampoo; how to improve circulation; how to relieve dandruff, and every other contributing cause to falling or prematurely graying hair.

Turkish and Electric Light Baths

Two highly scientific and remunerative courses.

Turkish Bath course includes body massage, the salt glow, correct bathing and Hydropathy.

Electric Light Bath course teaches toning of system by the eliminative process.

School of Manufacturing

We teach the manufacture of all kinds of hair goods—switches, braids, puffs, curls, etc. This is a very practical course and is profitable used in itself or in connection with general beauty culture.

Scientific Body Massage

A highly profitable branch of Beauty Culture.

Includes Swedish movements. The value of these treatments is understood by ladies of social prominence; also by actresses, as they recognize fully the necessity of suppleness of form and grace of movement.

This course brings the operator in touch with physicians who recommend it to their patients.

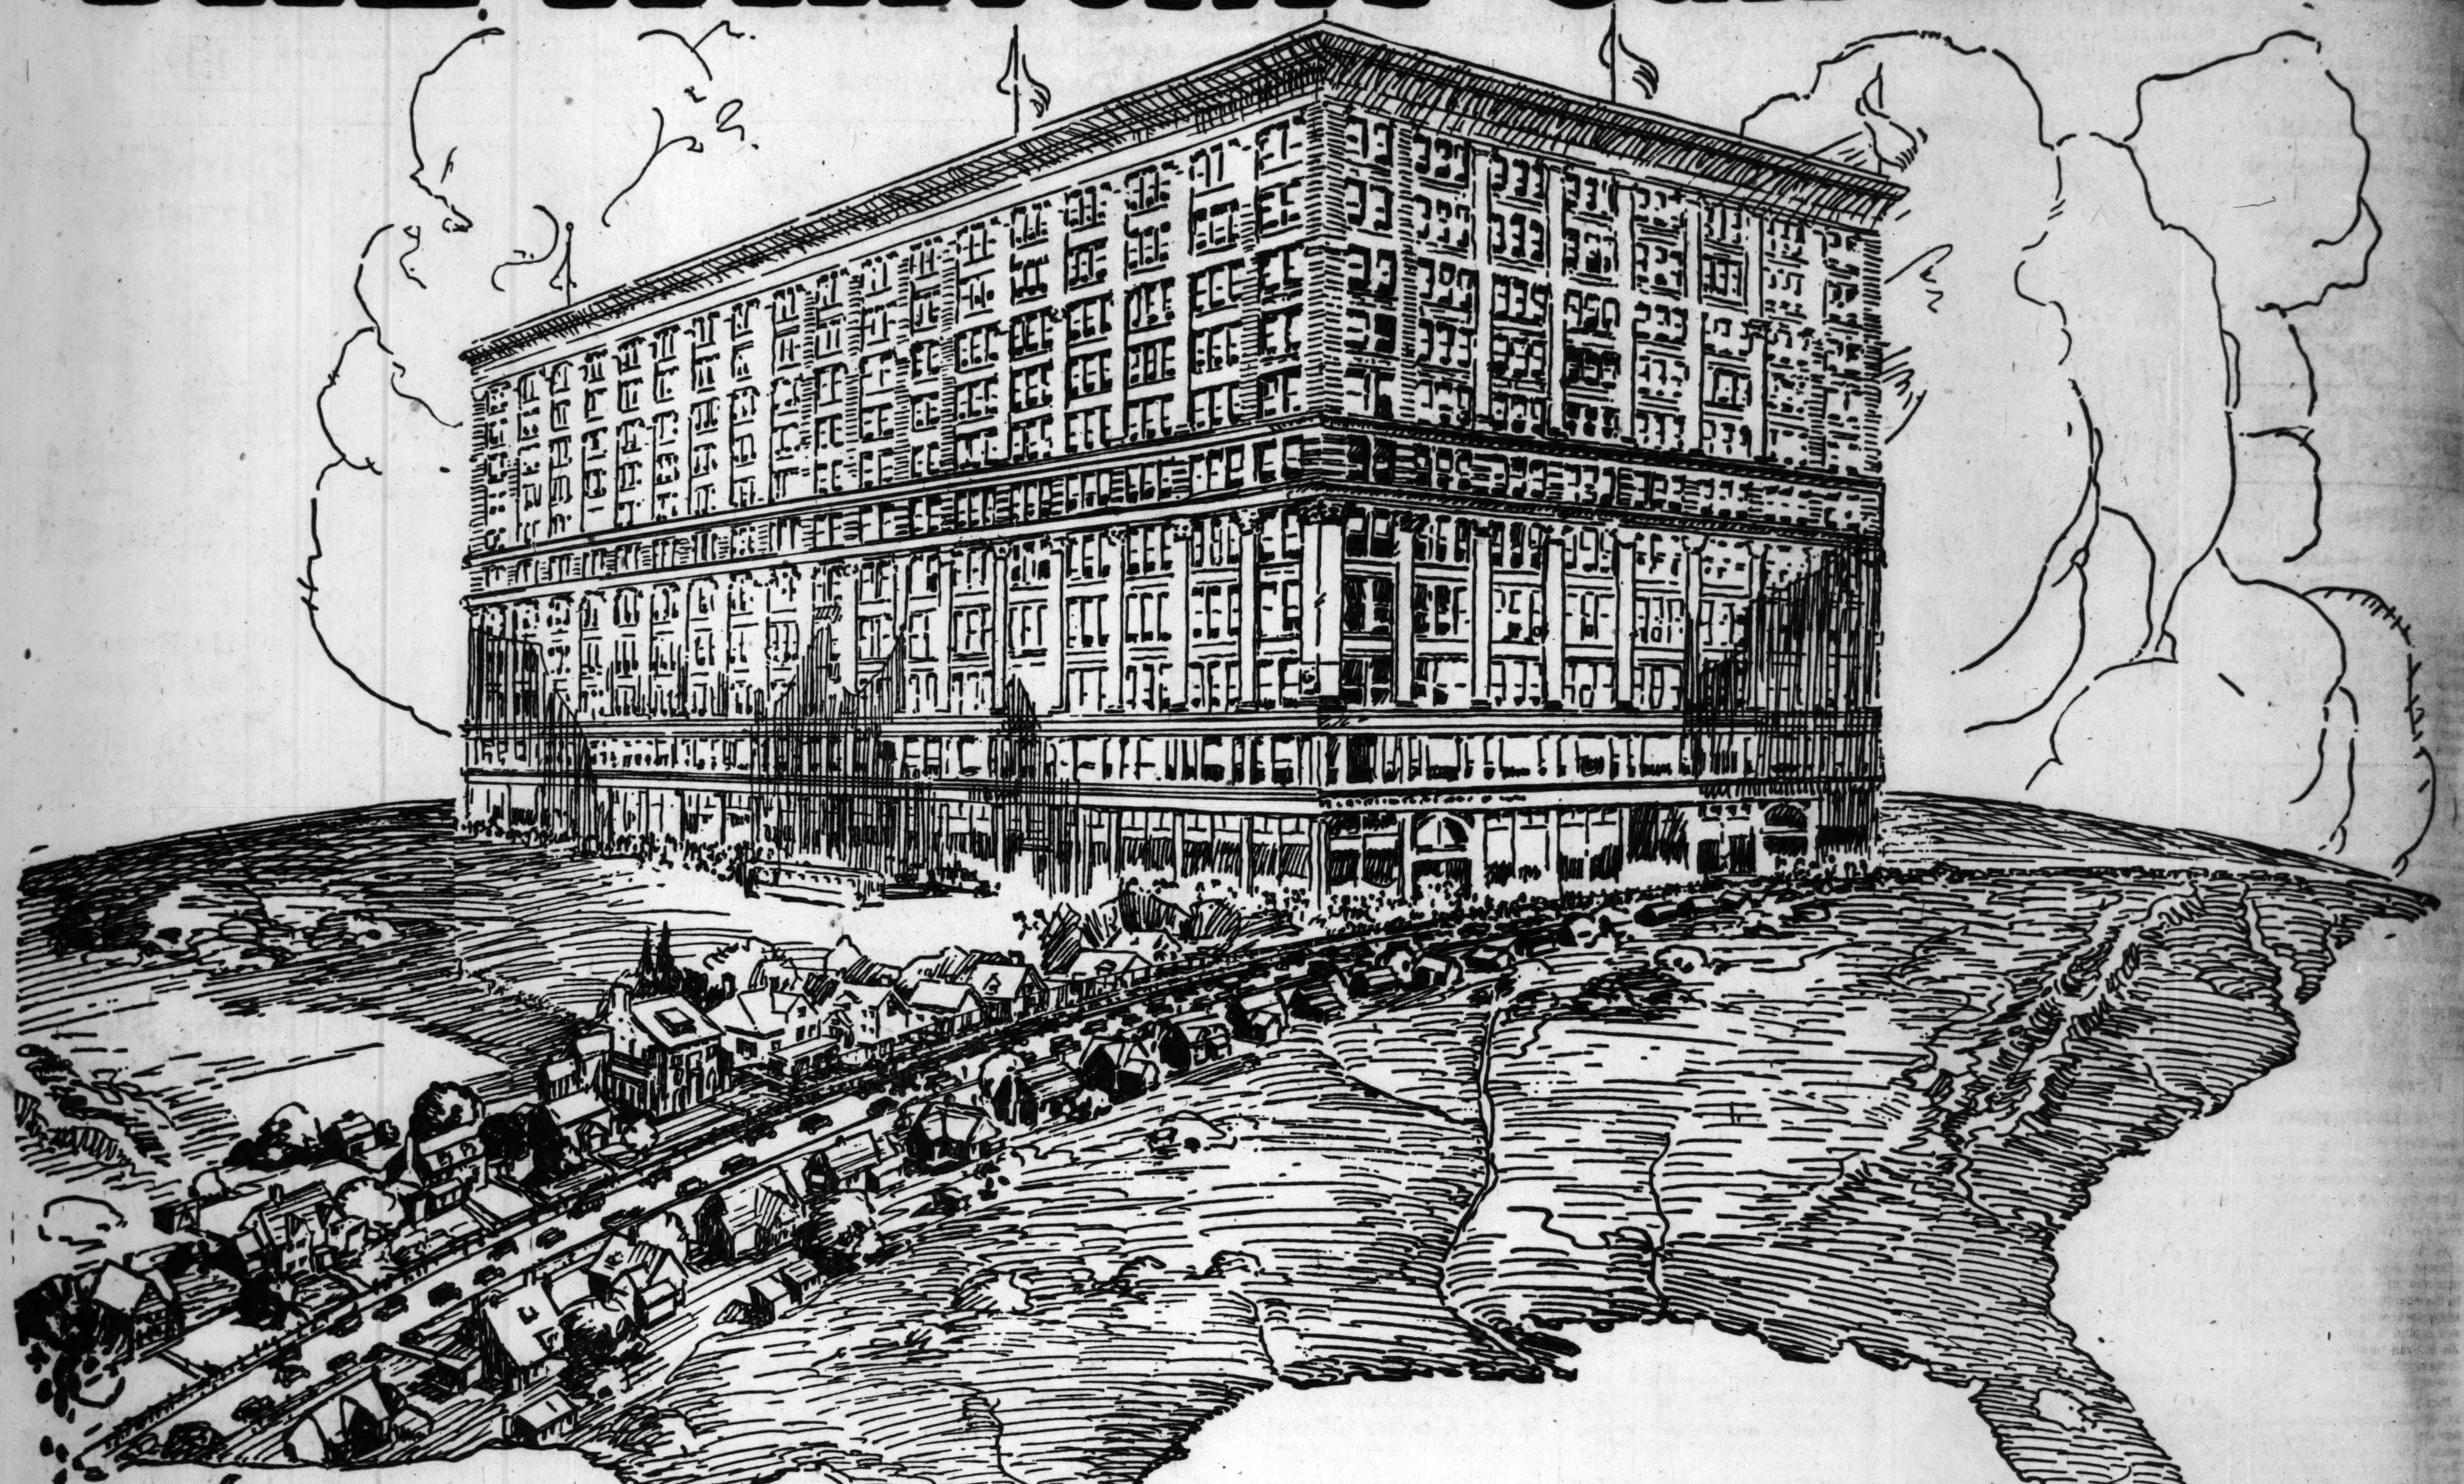
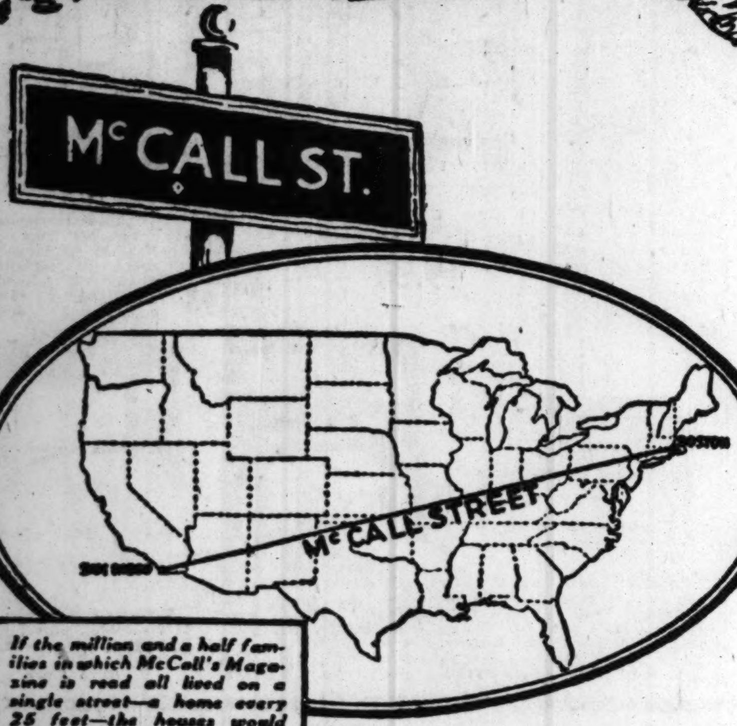
"THE FAIR" on McCall Street





If the million and a half families in which McCall's Magazine is read all lived on a single street—a home every 25 feet—the houses would line both sides of a roadway from Boston to San Diego.

© 1921, The McCall Co.

Patrons of The Fair May Now Buy the New McCall Pattern—"It's Printed"

Sixteen feet on State Street. In 1875 that was the entire frontage of The Fair. Yet for all its small quarters it was a large business even then, because its purpose was big. Its determination, "Everything for Everybody under One Roof," meant future greatness. Enormous growth had to come to the small store on State Street.

Everything—department after department was added. The original space has expanded to 798,000 square feet. The original five departments have multiplied to a hundred. That determination to have everything for everybody helped to make the great store what it is today. The Fair—State, Adams, and Dearborn.

And to come even nearer to the everything, another department has just been added. The new McCall Pattern Department brings the fashions of Paris and America to the woman patrons of the store. Through it, The Fair joins the many great institutions on McCall Street, the visioned street on which are the 1,500,000 homes in which McCall's is read. The Fair, McCall Street, U.S.A.

The New McCall Pattern, with all directions printed right on the pattern itself, is the new note in patterns—so practical, so easy to use, that its advent is the biggest news for women since the sewing machine was invented.

These women who read McCall's do ninety per cent of the buying for their homes—they purchase nearly all of the food, the toilet goods, the household necessities, conveniences, and comforts required for the daily needs of 7,500,000 people.

These women usually have nationally advertised products in mind when they go shopping, for they know the reliability of nationally advertised goods. Their buying power is a billion and a half dollars a year.

All the latest styles for Spring will be found on second floor patern department of The Fair.

BACK TO VIRGINIA AND HER.

MARGARET MINE: Today I am lonely and sad and ill, my heart aches for one little touch of your hand. They say I must be patient, yet how can I?

I dream of you when I sleep, and when I awake your wistful eyes haunt me from the little ivory miniature. I hear your voice in golden song and silver laughter, and in little caressing murmurs. O, Margaret, Margaret, I miss you so!

I often think of our first meeting. You were so delicate and fragile, an exquisite wind flower girl in your anemone gown. You were a beautiful bridesmaid, my dear. And now, this marvelous June day, the aniversary of Ealea's wedding, I must lie here in this stupid hospital, the most wretched and miserable man in existence!

Forgive my crossness, dear. I'm in a much better mood now. The nurse came and took my writing materials away. Think of it! My being "bossed" by a nurse no larger than you—though not half as sweet nor lovely. After a nap, the doctor came in and announced to me that in a week I'll be discharged from here, which means that I'm no longer in pieces, am quite respectable looking, and in three weeks I'll be with you in the Virginnie sunshine at "Heart's Content!"

The little new moon shines blithely in through my west windows, a white gold promise of June dreams and content. And so I say good-by, dear, with all the love in my heart. JOHN.

Varied Activities of Women

Mrs. Edith Cavanagh of Brooklyn is training her son as a boxer and thinks it's a good career.

Mexico has 7,085,110 women, giving that country a surplus of 325,777 females over the men.

Mrs. Mary Sullivan, a scrubwoman of Boston, recently appeared before a committee of the legislature asking for the enactment of a law granting scrubwomen who clean floors in the state capitol a two weeks' vacation. Mrs. Sullivan has been scrubbing floors in the statehouse for more than twenty-seven years.

Mary Louise Hubbard of Louisville, Ky., aged 10, is the first and only girl page appointed by the Kentucky state senate. She is the daughter of Senator Charles J. Hubbard and performs all the ordinary duties of a page and has the privilege of entering the senate chamber and observing senate activity at close range.

Practically all the ice used by householders and others in Lowell, Mass., is supplied by a woman, Mrs. Martina Gage, who has made a big success of the business.

Tiring of her position as a stenographer, Miss Rose Mitchell of New York invented a job to suit her. She now acts as "everybody's secretary" in her own home.

Mary Pickford, the motion picture star, whose first job paid $8 a week, is now receiving $10,000 a week and 50 per cent of the sales of her pictures. For two years' work she is said to have collected $1,123,625.

At an old fiddlers' contest held recently in St. Paul, Mrs. Pauline L. Van Garven, aged 70 years, won the first prize.

The marquesa of Delter has been reelected president of the Union of Spanish Women, an organization formed for the purpose of gaining women's rights in Spain.

More than half of the stockholders of the American Telephone and Telegraph company stock are women, of which more than 25,000 are employés of the company.

Younger looking than her Husband

Sage Tea Darkens Hair to any Shade

WHEN you darken your hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it's done so naturally, so evenly. Preparing this mixture, though, at home is mussy and troublesome. At little cost, you can buy at any drug store the ready-to-use preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients, called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning all gray hair disappears, and after another application or two your hair becomes beautifully darkened, glossy and luxuriant.

Gray, faded hair, though no disgrace, is a sign of old age, and as we all desire a youthful and attractive appearance, get busy at once with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, and look years younger.

7-Piece Queen Anne Suite

$89

Three Very Popular Home Needs

Windsor Chair	Gate-Leg Table	Cane Rocker
$19.25	$25	$15.25
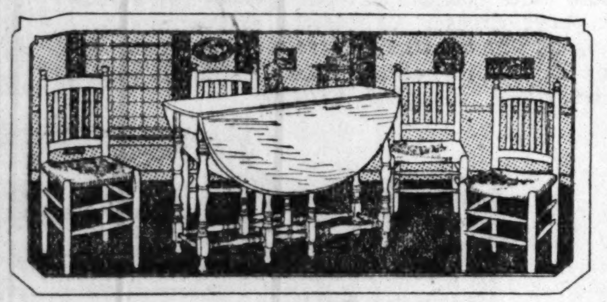
Many Windsor chairs are made of heavy stock, which deprives the chair of that grace and beauty which every Windsor should have. Inspect this chair—note the difference in its appearance.	These tables have 36 x45 inch tops, made of genuine mahogany and finished in antique effect. Have 8 turned legs and turned bottom stretchers.	Do not allow our low price to influence your opinion of this rocker. A big purchase at a very low figure makes our price possible. Chair to match at same price.



5-Piece Breakfast Room Set

48-Inch Gate-Leg Table and 4 Quarter Cane Seat Chairs

$59

This is a gate-leg table—not a drop-leaf table. To fully appreciate the difference go to our store nearest your home and allow our salesmen to explain the difference. Then you will better understand why this gate-leg table will give years of service. It has a 42x48 inch top of genuine mahogany. The chairs match in finish.

$27.60 $6.95

The bin is exactly as illustrated and well made of seasoned hardwood. All drawers are fitted with nickeled handles. The cabinet is finished with white enamel. The kitchen table is also white enameled and its 41-inch top is perfect—and is guaranteed as only a perfect top can be guaranteed.

"Better homes" does not mean extravagantly furnished homes—nor pretentious homes—nor costly furnishings. It means a more comfortable home—a more attractive home. It is an expression describing those homes which are fitted with furniture of good quality—and in good taste.

Well designed furniture costs no more than the ordinary kind. For example—one factory will have cut from a piece of wood measuring 28x48 inches a most beautiful table top, while another plant having the same lumber in the same size and using the same band-saw will produce an ungainly table top.

In regard to quality there is a difference. A factory producing cheap furniture cannot make quality furniture, because a poor cabinet maker certainly cannot build a good article.

So there are two classes of furniture—the kind that is attractive in appearance and cheaply made—and the beautifully designed and well made class of furniture.

We choose our Home-Needs with great care, for, as explained, a well designed piece is not necessarily well made, and because we guarantee satisfactory service with every article we sell; we sometimes eliminate gaudy ornamentations and add to construction the money these imitation carvings cost.

Of Carrion, Censors, and the Great Whistle Idea

By Mae Tinee.

MR. BARNUM (Mr. Barbee) has been having Ralph Obenchain on exhibition in a picture called "A Man in a Million."

You know it does get you the way these film people light on the carrion of the day (present example being the Obenchain case), and son it up to be served to a morbid public. I expected to want to throw a ck at the producer and two rocks at the man who would consent to parade s devotion for a little cheap publicity and, proba- considerable money.

I still want to throw the one rock. The two I forgotten. Instead, if there is a laurel wreath ly let's slip it on the brow of a hero. For, hav- seen Mr. Obenchain, something whispers that accepted the producer's offer for a noble purpose d that the making of the picture was gall and wormwood to him.

RALPH R. OBENCHAIN.

The film, which is neither long nor sensational, propaganda. It takes for granted the innocence Madelynn. One title I remember distinctly:

"How long shall the innocent continue to suf- This is followed by a snap of Mrs. Obenchain king wistfully through the bars of her cell ndow.

All right—the film is propaganda. The money Mr. Obenchain for his work will undoubtedly used to defray trial expenses. (He's a pretty od movie actor if you want to know it.) He, lov- the defendant, felt these two insurmountable sons why, for a time, he should become public perty.

The story matter is just a brief outline of how Ralph and Madelynn met, ed, married, and parted. It shows her reluctantly receiving phone calls from "the other man" who "will not let her forget." It shows her at last confess- to Ralph that she loves him no longer and Ralph giving her up, convinced at she will come back to him some day.

And it shows how she DOES come back—when she needs him.

You are given brief glimpses of judge, attorneys, Beverly Glen, and a ple of flashes of the real Madelynn—who is not nearly so good looking as the girl who plays for her during most of the picture.

The name and appearance of Ralph Obenchain are the picture's two draw- cards. Otherwise it is dull and indifferently produced and has at least one spelled word in the subtitles.

The question is this:

After a jury has disagreed and there is to be a new trial, does or should the permit propaganda like this to traverse the country that will quite likely fluence the minds of possible jurors?

Ralph Obenchain made a sacrifice. A producer (Mr. Charles Seeling) is king money, but is "A Man in a Million" Hoyle?

Why Is a Casting Director?

What is a casting director?

A casting director is a man or woman who picks casts. He or she is sup- to select people to represent the characters in a story as drawn by the er, and quite often fulfills the duty by choosing those who bear not the test resemblance to the folk the writer had in mind.

Instances of the kind are always coming to one's notice—as Gloria Swan- in "The Husband's Trademark."

Being an honest woman, I must admit that I hadn't especially noticed this ing case until a certain fan brought the matter to my attention. He said it shouldn't have needed to be brought to my attention. His inference was that any half baked cuckoo with one eye ought to have seen that the sleek Gloria was never meant by the Lord to play ingénue wife parts.

He said he liked her ways, her hair, her eyelashes, her smile, her walk, and some of her clothes, and thought that in the main she was a pretty good actress, but that nobody on earth could say and get away with it that she knew how to look or dress like an ingénue.

Just the same, there they had her, in "The Husband's Trademark" living in New York, married to a crook, playing the game of innocent temptress for five years, luring men with smile, clothes, and come hither eyes, and getting shocked when men misunderstood and kissed her. Never tumbling to her true status, lamb that she was, until Fate drew a diagram for her.

The man was right. She DOESN'T look like an ingénue—therefore, why cast her as an ingénue?

In another recent picture we meet a French dancer, supposed to be irresistible to men. In the place, the lady can't dance; her terpsichorean activities consist of lopes a series of queer steps that remind you of a measuring worm. She doesn't what to do with her hands, and she does it all the time. She has neither , gift of allure, or personal magnetism. She is merely inanely pretty—behold we are told she knocks 'em dead.

In another film a large, matronly woman is supposed to be blithe, young, experienced Mrs. Newlywed. And so it goes.

Which leads us back to our discussion of the definition of a casting direc- Many movie addicts would describe him as "one who miscasts."

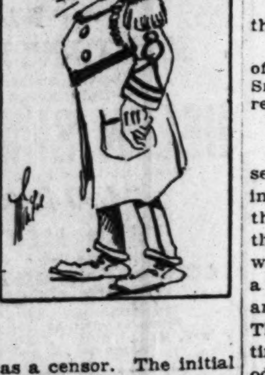
Be Sure to Listen for the Whistle.

Speaking of censors. (Who was? Nobody was.) Anyhow, speaking of cen- here's an idea that will be immediately patented if it makes a hit. It tively solves the censorship problem.

Nobody seems to want censors but the censors themselves. You can't them, for times are hard, and the nice fat little salary attached to the of making a producer change the sentence "The landed on Magnolia with both feet" to "The rible person gave one jump and when he reached th stood upon the prostrate figure of Miss Mag- " is nothing to be sneezed at. And anybody be a censor. It doesn't matter how the censor- is done or why—just so it IS done.

However, the producers don't want censors; the audiences don't want them. Still, on the other hand, there are often fairly risque scenes in the pictures. The playgoer, the reader of the daily newspaper— other words, the well informed and sophisticated human being—might not balk at them. Just the same, these scenes are going to offend a lot of people. So—for the idea.

Why not have an official in every theater pro- with a whistle? When it is time for a ques- able scene to be shown, let him blow loud AND . The meaning of the blast will be:



TWEET!
TWEET!

"Here comes something raw. If you don't want to see it, close your eyes and duck. Whistle will be sounded again when scene is over."

Now, a whistle blower ought not to cost as much as a censor. The initial expense of the whistles would not be much, excepting in the Balaban and Katz theaters, where they would probably be composed of gold, set with precious stones, and have mandolin attachments. The upkeep should not be great.

The whistle would give everybody a chance. The producer could produce as he saw fit. The exhibitor could show anything he wanted to. The optience could enjoy all the nice music and news reels and excerpts from the daily papers without a moment's worry of being taken unaware by something they didn't want to see, but somebody made them see it.

Besides it would start a new profession. There could be a whistle blowers' union. There would be an increase in the output of whistles. There would be work for the needy—makers, sellers, blowers. Whistle blowing in the theaters would, in all respects, prove a step forward in the industrial situation. And it would be a great thing for personal freedom, so sadly squelched by the Volstead act.

CLOSEUPS

I have a letter from the city sales manager of Associated First National Pictures which assures me that "Shoulder Arms" will soon be re-issued—probably some time in May. He read a prayer in the Kick Korner that it be shown again, and hastened to advise us that the supplicant's wish was to be granted.

Gladys Walton goes on record as desiring to play mother rôles in pictures. SOME mother she would make (not).

Leah Baird is not only the star but the author of her coming release, "When the Devil Drives."

"Tess of the Storm Country," to be remade by Mary Pickford, is said—by

BEST SELLERS OF THE AGES

By Eye Witness.

Sixteenth paper—"The Autocrat of the Breakfast Table."

> I have stuck by humanity after my poor fashion, and have been told by a great many people in a great many places that they were better and happier for my having lived. That helps me to bear the hard words, which may be as necessary to help us digest our moral food as stones and gravel are to some birds with their other nourishment. OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES.
> (Letter to Harriet Beecher Stowe; March 31, 1872.)

CERVANTES laughed Spain's chiv——the proverb is something musty. And Oliver Wendell Holmes smiled orthodoxy out of the pews.

Wouldst thou believe that "The Autocrat of the Breakfast Table" was once a banned book and its author called "free thinker" and "infidel" at a time when those words were sticky with opprobrium?

'Tis even so. The amiable writer whom this generation takes as a bland and purling chirker-up of blued or bored humanity was in your grandfather's time a thorn in the flesh and a menace to the faith. Grandfather granted that "Dr. Holmes" smiled and smiled, but accounted him the more a villain for that, and the doctor, shaking a waggish finger in the direction of grim grandfather, said in the "Autocrat," "I don't doubt he would cut his kitten's tail off if he caught her playing with it. Please tell me who taught her to play with it?"

Dr. Holmes inflicted upon grandfather the keenest affront you can inflict upon tyrants or bigots anywhere: he suavely declined to take him seriously, and with smiling solicitude persisted in asking him what was hurting him in the region of his spirituals. As thus (page 109 in the comfortable little pocket edition of the "Autocrat" which the doctor's friends and publishers, the Messrs. Houghton and Mifflin, issued full thirty years ago and, I hope, still are issuing): "There are not a few who, even in this life, seem to be preparing themselves for that smileless eternity to which they look forward by banishing all gayety from their hearts and all joyousness from their countenances."

Another time he dryly cited "some old doctor or other," who had said—"quietly"—that "patients were very apt to be fools or cowards." Dryly also the autocrat added (page 102): "But a great many of the clergyman's patients are not only fools and cowards, but also liars."

When grandfather gasped at this and stopped his subscription to the Atlantic Monthly—for in a number of the Atlantic Monthly of the year 1857 did it first appear—Dr. Holmes refused to consider the stoppage of breath permanent and said, "Every real thought on every real subject knocks the wind out of somebody or other."

And so the breach between grandfather and the autocrat widened, and grew wider still when the twelve Atlantic papers came out in book form in 1858. Matters did not mend between them with the appearance of "The Professor at the Breakfast Table" in 1860, and the upshot of it all was, as Mr. Morse said in one of the pleasantest of biographies—for it was all about a very pleasant life—that "people now in middle life were in their youth forbiddent to read 'The Autocrat of the Breakfast Table' because it was a work of irreligious tendency."

You, my child, born in a freer time, will look almost in vain through the "Autocrat" for those thoughts that knocked the wind out of grandfather. Your respiration will remain normal. That is how much freer and more receptive to "real thoughts" you are. You will find in the book sly digs and side slaps at the doctrines of foreordination and infant damnation and predestination and other barbaric nations and notions, but so much of the terminology of that lore is now obsolete that some of the best thrusts will never touch you.

Still, I am not so sure! What with Mr. Bryan performing war dances before Jehovah and certain legislators introducing an act entitled an act to turn the clock backward there may be a good deal more vitality in the "Autocrat" and the "Professor" than we think. So long as the war dance continues, so long as a kind of legerdemain is not extracted from the most important matter in the world—and that is moral training—and so long as moral training is not put on a comprehensive basis, that long will Holmes be vital and important as moralist. That long will the lovely parable of the stone, the grass around the stone, and the venomous horrors beneath the stone in Paper V. of the "Autocrat" be wholly alive and a genuine inspiration to unaffrighted inquiry.

No book which the opinion of mankind has pronounced a profitable book can be read with full profit without other books, such as the life of the author of that book and some of his other books.

And so it is very profitable, in connection with a reading of the good old "Autocrat," to turn to that batch of great letters, printed in the last quarter of Mr. Morse's life of the Doctor, which he wrote to (1) James William Kimball, (2) to Harriet Beecher Stowe, (3) to Dr. Frederic H. Hedge, and in which he defined more concretely and compactly than in the "Autocrat" and the "Professor" the method and the principles by which he had laughed orthodoxy out of the pews. He devised and he used always with telling effect what I like to think of as the "good-morning method" of controversy—unembittered, suave, distinguished, considerate. Here is a specimen:

> If you choose to accept that hypothesis I mentioned, and which seems to have struck you—viz.: that the world was created with mock skeletons of almost innumerable mock genera and species, many of them holding the remains of mock food in their mock interiors, and with their teeth ground down as if by long use; in other words, if you choose to believe the creator the prototype of charlatans and jugglers, I shall have to say again, always with perfect respect and courtesy: "Good morning, Mr. Kimball."

He was one of the first distinguished Americans to employ in religious controversy the illumination inherent in the comparative study of religions. Thus:

> How absurd to declaim against the lawless passions of Jupiter, or the jealous rages of Juno, as sufficiently disproving their divinity, and then to call on mankind to believe in a being who has established an almost infinite laboratory, where the vivisections and viviustions [not in dictionary but meaning burnings alive] of sensitive organisms are to set forth his glory forever to creatures that were once men and women—men with tears in their eyes, women with milk in their breasts!

He was not cantankerous. He was not truculent. He never brought to bear the bravado of Ingersoll. He "smiled away"—as here, when he, one of the foremost anatomists in the land, still could be blithe:

> Fortunately for me, there has been no change in human anatomy since Adam lost the rib from his side, and, somehow or other, I always find a full dozen on both sides in his male descendants.

And almost always he steadied his thrusts with "it seems" and "probable." He was so thoroughly a gentleman as not to be afraid of gentleman-like words—

> To suppose this world a mere trap, baited with temptation of sense, which only divine ingenuity could have imagined, with the certainty that the larger part of the race would fall into it, and that to the tortures of a very helpless, ignorant, ill-educated being is to be added the cruelest sting of all, that he brought it on himself, does not seem a probable course of action on the part of "our father."

And he was very patient. He knew that the world would move slowly in these matters. And—

> It is best, I suppose, that it should be so, for take idolatry and bibliolatry out of the world all at once, as the magnetic mountain drew the nails and bolts of Sinbad's ship, and the vessel that floats much of the best of our humanity would resolve itself in a floating ruin of planks and timbers.

Mr. Bryan has given the suave old gentleman a singuler timeliness.

As freedom books the "Autocrat" and the rest of the Breakfast Table series were, and are, important. As literature they are altogether disarming by reason of their quiet charm, and they are standbys for the pocket and the bedside table because their variety is almost endless. Somebody said that the greater the scholarship of the reader the greater the pleasure he will derive from them, and George Bancroft said that the doctor was "like a man who has three or four estates of land lying out of sight of each other, and none but his friends take cognizance of the vastness of his possessions." There is not in truth a man writing in our country today, nor for a long time has there been, who could bring to his page such riches of allusion, such odds and ends of the recondite that still is the timely and the applicable as the doctor did. Men, books, customs, superstitions, pugilism, trotting horses, trees, religion, table manners, pronunciation, medicine, locutions, topics of the morning—he toyed with them all and made them all piquant and instructive. George William Curtis said that the index of the "Autocrat" was in itself a unique work. The doctor made it himself. I defy any man of an inquiring turn of mind to read down two inches anywhere in its dozen pages and not buy the book. Just try that.

Poems didactic, humorous and satirical embellish the "Autocrat." "The Chambered Nautilus" which, when he read it at the close of Paper IV., Whittier said was "booked for immortality," is in it.

Build thee more stately mansions, O my soul,
As the swift seasons roll!

and so following to that holy line—

Leaving thine outgrown shell by life's unresting sea.

I saw those lines once on the chancel arch of a church in Jackson, Michigan, and wondered what grandfather would have to say. Galileo does wonderfully get himself confirmed.

Here, too, is "The Wonderful One-Hoss Shay," and here fancies of so delicate a turn, as the exquisite page and a half on trees and the city, that they take you back to Leigh Hunt's darling pen, and apothegms so savory and sturdy that they would not be unworthy of Franklin. I dug out a handful—meaty as hickory nuts:

> Put not your trust in money, but put your money in trust.
> Sin has many tools, but a lie is the handle which fits them all.
> Knowledge and timber shouldn't be much used till they are seasoned.
> I know well enough that there are some of you who had a great deal rather see me stand on my head than use it for any purpose of thought.
> Man has his will—but woman has her way.
> What a comfort a dull but a kindly person is, to be sure, at times. A ground glass shade over a gas lamp does not bring more solace to our dazzled eyes than such a one to our minds.

Next Sunday—Bunyan's "Pilgrim's Progress."

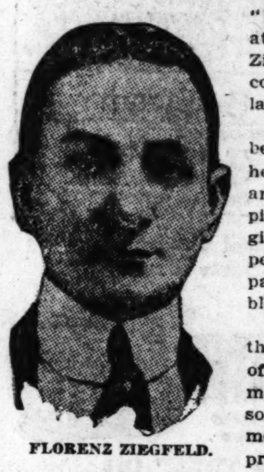
Extra! A Ziegfeld Follies Girl Need Not Be a Raving Beauty

By James Whittaker.

NEW YORK, March 25.—[Special.]—Mr. Ziegfeld, who, of course, knows what he is talking about when he talks about this, has made his spring pronouncement on the subject of feminine beauty. We detect therein a note of practical cynicism.

"It is not necessarily important for a girl to be a raving beauty to become a Ziegfeld Follies girl," he announces, and surprises us, for we thought it was.



FLORENZ ZIEGFELD.

"Of course, she must have regular features, an attractive form, and a graceful carriage. But the Ziegfeld wizardry of lighting and scenic effects and costuming makes for beauty where it is in any way lacking."

We are left to suppose that there has always been this element of wizardry—Mr. Ziegfeld's, not hers—in the beauty of the Follies girl. Crash goes an illusion. Are there, then, not even among the picked peaches of Mr. Ziegfeld's basket, no perfect girls, that even in the Follies chorus we must, to perceive the ideal, have the help of nameless pads, paints, and lying lights to mend and dissemble the blemishes of reality?

It is legend—and all legends are true before they become legends—that Mr. Ziegfeld, in the course of any year, sees and appraises the beauty of the most beautiful girls of America, for the same reasons that Mr. Heinz views and chooses America's most nearly perfect pickles. Just now Mr. Ziegfeld's practiced eyes are laboring daily on the momentous matter of the choice of new girls who will be revealed in June in his new Follies.

He engages in this task (to refer further to his spring bulletin) with moderate hope. He will make the best of the bad matter that is the state of physical grace of American female charm. Enormous numbers of the applicants for place in Mr. Ziegfeld's annual salon of living picture, he reveals, are total lemons. Some are maturely or prematurely haggard, with yellowing skins concealed from their mirrors, but not from Mr. Ziegfeld's penetrating eye, by chemical greases. Those who come simply and untricked from Hohokus Center and other provincial heaths of health and honesty average somewhat fairer of face, but are sadly apt to move before Mr. Ziegfeld's judicial eye with the grace of startled cows.

Altogether, Mr. Ziegfeld's yearly beauty problem, he hints, has no unchallengable solution, but is met with fortitude and the foreknowledge that once again the over-winter crop of fair flesh will have the usual average of angular ankles and misplaced muscles which it will be the business of his deceitful crew of stage beauty doctors to disguise. It is hence Mr. Ziegfeld's avowal that, to a certain degree, the Chicago professor of anatomy who recently made the sweeping statement that American women are not wholly beautiful was, in a way, right.

When "Voltaire" Became a "Girl Show."

Mr. Ziegfeld's experiences and those of the audience which attended the first night last Monday of "Voltaire" in the Plymouth theater suggest that beauty is a matter of surprise. After the second act of "Voltaire" there were cries in the Plymouth of "Author, author." There was a dramatic pause and then two slender girls trotted bashfully into the limelight. They were the Misses Leila Taylor and Gertrude Purcell, the authors, so unexpectedly young and personable that the audience immediately forgot Arnold Daly and his triumphs in the play's name part, and "Voltaire," for that first night at least, was a successful girl show.

MISS RUBYE DE REMER.

It is extremely unlikely that either Miss Leila or Miss Gertrude is as beautiful as Mr. Ziegfeld's Rubye De Remer. Miss De Remer is too beautiful to be a successful author. But for the seconds that the Plymouth curtain hung before it fell and hid them Miss Leila and Miss Gertrude seemed infinitely more beautiful. They had had all the advantage of surprise. None expected two authors—usually a brace of flatfooted, middle aged males—to be as pretty as actresses. Unfortunately actresses are. Mr. Ziegfeld cannot surprise his clientele with a pretty girl. He has continually to try to meet the audience's fondest expectations. This is, he says, a tough task.

"Voltaire" is not nearly so surprising as its two authors. One way to summarize it neatly would be to say simply that it is about Voltaire. The young lady authors, who are students in Columbia university, have read all the commentaries on the illustrious French ironist, are full of the subject of this voluminous man, and have boiled him down to one busy day of the latter end of his life and three acts of platitude.

They include in this one day a half century of his best epigrams, and, I think—without any authority of familiarity with the facts of Voltaire's life—at least a year of his activities. In the short space of the twelve hours of his sixtieth year which elapse between the play's beginning and end Voltaire is in and out of danger of imprisonment in the Bastille for having lampooned a royalty, matchmaker to a pair of young incidental aristocrats, patently invited to visit Voltaire's provincial château in Fernay to help out the Misses Leila and Gertrude's love interest, courtier in the grand manner to Mlle. Clairon, the actress, and a busy quoter of his own best bits.

MISS JANE RICHARDSON.

This trick of having their protagonist quote rather than act his life is the defect of the play, but it would be difficult to suggest any other trick to take its place. Voltaire was an ornate and expensive philosopher, for whom life was so lavishly staged that the very least of the incidents of his career defies reproduction on the stage.

There is, for instance, the anecdote of his triumph over a rival, a marquis, a glutton and a fop, for the affections of an aristocratic lady of Paris.

It seems that the lady planned a dinner for the marquis, and, knowing Voltaire's powers of merciless speech, invited him to be present on the one condition that at table he should say no more than three words.

The marquis disgustingly overate the first dish, oysters.

Piling his twentieth empty shell, he exclaimed:

"Samson slew his ten thousand Philistines, but I could slay as many oysters."

Voltaire used up his allotted three words:

"With same jawbone?"

MRS. HELEN S. WOODRUFF. [Underwood & Underwood Photo.]

Chancing across this memoir of the great man, the Misses Leila and Gertrude must have been tempted to put that in the play. But, for the sake of these three words, they would have had to write into their play a whole banquet and a dozen minor parts. So it is with most of the rich events of the career of Voltaire, and the authors of this play have used skill and economy in reducing him to a cast of a dozen and one exquisite drawing room set from the brush and storeroom of Robert Edmund Jones.

Arnold Daly is the Voltaire. He has neither the leanness nor the leer that are the record of Voltaire's most striking physical characteristics, but he plays the rôle with an enthusiasm and a vigor that take the place of its fine points by the simple process of sweeping them violently out of the way. In Mr. Daly one sees the sort of slashing fellow Voltaire would have been had Voltaire been an Irishman.

Everybody Except the Audience Has Great Fun.

The toy, it is reported, of a generous patron of Art and her handmaidens, the new musical comedy "Just Because" moved into the Earl Carroll theater last week and was there seen to be just the sort of show that must be tremendous fun from anywhere in the theater but the seats.

For reasons which are not made clear in the plot, from the pen of Anne Wynne O'Ryan, the performers, who include a score of healthy and boisterous choral maidens, rejoice unaffectedly as they work. Merriment flows generously from everything on the Carroll stage except the jokes, which are most often chosen from among the musical comedy traditions with an unerring taste for the laughless line.

"My name is Dr. Bombig," announces that character.

"Ah, Dr. Big Bum," Bowery burlesques the comedian, and hastens to the next epigram without waiting for the applause.

It has been told that Anne Wynne O'Ryan, Helen S. Woodruff, and Madeline Sheppard, who are, in order, the authors of the play's book, lyrics, and music, have been amateur contrivers at and in the private Follies of the best families, but that in this seriously commercial effort their ambition has been to descend willingly to the low and remuerative hoakum of Broadway.

How they have stooped to conquer, how they have faithfully studied the

Turning Back the Clock on a Tarkington Comedy

By Sheppard Butler.

IT is easy to believe that "The Intimate Strangers" was written for Miss Maude Adams. That this is so has been frequently told, and since Mr. Tarkington seems not to have denied the impeachment it may be taken at least as an interesting supposition.

One could, I suppose, write Mr. Tarkington and ask him for the facts in the case. That would be conclusive, but not particularly satisfying. Here is an uncommonly beguiling play, inviting conjecture and altogether a pleasant thing to ponder. Why not examine it a bit, and see what we make of the evidence ourselves?

BOOTH TARKINGTON, author of "The Intimate Strangers."

If you were a dramatist confronted with the task of devising something for Miss Adams, what considerations do you suppose would pop into your mind? It would not be ungallant, surely, to meditate upon the gentle mysteries of advancing age. Nor would it be unreasonable to recall that Miss Adams has always been most happily situated in something provided her by Sir James Barrie.

Well, here is a play revolving about a heroine of uncertain age and developed with many a touch that might be Barrie as well as Tarkington. That droll first act in the gaunt railway station, where Isabel meets her solicitous bachelor, likes him, quarrels with him, greets his proposal with a yawn, reaches him a conciliatory hand as he disposes himself for the night on a hard bench near her own. The impish perversity with which, later, she flouts his troubled curiosity about her age, hiding the family Bible, limping in an absurd simulation of rheumatism, chatting of the Hayes-Tilden campaign and the Philadelphia exposition. His own sensitiveness about being no longer as young as he was. And the author's final prank—winding up the play with Isabel's age still a mystery.

A mellow little romance of the late thirties, you say—just the thing for the actress who made memorable the quizzical wisdom of "What Every Woman Knows."

But Miss Adams was not ready to return to the stage. And now comes Miss Billie Burke, radiant and twinkling, and in a flash the whole play is changed. Not a line is altered, but no longer is Isabel's age "uncertain." Her demurely long skirts are a masquerade, her prim talk a mischievous deception. She is youth having a lark.

And the marvel of it all is that, with its central character made at least fifteen years younger, the play still fits. I wonder what Mr. Tarkington thinks about it.

Arthur, Aged Nine, Contemplates "The Beggar's Opera."

"The Beggar's Opera" has long since departed, but controversial comment concerning its virtues as an entertainment continues to arrive, voluminously, in the mail. No diversion of recent seasons has been quite so enthusiastically liked or violently disliked as this hale and hearty 200-year-old. As a gauge of the playgoing public's taste it is pretty nearly unique. No one approaches it from any middle ground of appreciation; never, apparently, is any one either gently pleased or mildly bored in contemplating it. To put it colloquially, you are crazy about it, or you hate it.

I have never received so many letters about any play. "My daughter and I had an evening of thorough enjoyment at 'The Beggar's Opera,'" says one of the last to arrive. "As we rose to depart my daughter heard a woman in the row behind say, 'Well, of all the tiresome plays I ever sat through, this is the limit. When I go to the theater I like to see something artistic.'" So it went. One enthusiastic young woman bought a pair of seats for every night during the opera's stay at the Olympic. And I am told that there was not a single performance at which various disgruntled patrons did not get up and leave before the show was over.

Meanwhile, the piece continues to be a persistently lively antique. They have been singing it in Paris, and in London, where it has held the boards for years, there is now under way a second revival, wherein they include several of the old songs which have hitherto been omitted.

"It is playing merrily here, and to packed houses," writes Berta Ruck, the novelist, from the British capital. "With us it is not only the highbrows (though these flock to it in their frumpy thousands) but also the herd, the small city clerks and their Saturday afternoon girls, who lap it up like cream.

"Having had every tune therefrom on our gramophone, my child Arthur, aged nine, demanded to be taken! I said: 'My dear Toad, you would be bored. Yards of stale grownup talk!' However, he begged so hard, I thought it would be no more harmful for him than going to a pantomime for children, with jokes about evening gowns, mothers-in-law, and husbands being late at clubs; so booked stalls in the front row.

"The whole company, being well used to me, were most intrigued to see Small Boy sitting there eating every note, and proceeded to play to him. . . . The next great joy was the program girl bringing a tray in the interval and saying that the lady of the refreshment room begged that 'the younger Mr. Oliver' would accept these two teas! He said to me afterwards, reproachfully, 'You said there would be stale grownup talk, and I understood every word. I only want to know, were those all wives, or sort of best girls?' . . . We arrived back faint with emotion and enjoyment."

Concerning Margaret Wright; Miss George Finds a "Perfect Play."

The authorship of Miss Grace George's new comedy, "The Exquisite Hour," has at length been isolated, microscoped, and ticketed in the fashion of the best laboratories. The confusion which led to the thought that Miss George herself had taken the comedy from a French original is explicable, in view of the fact that it was known she had been adapting a number of new French plays for the American stage and the additional fact that star players do not, as a rule, worry much about drama not designed for their own uses. But the Margaret Wright bulletined as author of "The Exquisite Hour" is an identity and not a mere nom de plume; and she was in Chicago for the play's first performance at the Princess. This is her first drama to achieve the "professional" theater; but she has been at work under Prof. Baker of Harvard, and has known the joy of having some of her smaller things acted by and for his classes in dramaturgy. Which is that.

As to the French plays upon which Miss George has been engaged, there are three—"The Nest," on view for some weeks past in New York City and reported a success; "Aimer," the current hit of the Comédie Française, written by Paul Géraldy, who also did "The Nest," and "La Flamme." As to "Aimer," Miss George is quoted as a flaming enthusiast. "Here," she says, "we have the artistic sublimation of the domestic 'triangle.' It is the perfect play, as art. Husband, wife, and the other man are all the characters: not a servant, not a telephone or speaking tube, not a messenger, not a voice offstage—not even cigarettes and champagne with which to make weight or make time; in brief, not the slightest recourse to any of the devices whereby, after Ibsen showed the way, playwrights sought to replace the 'soliloquy' and the audible 'aside' of the old construction.

"Shall I appear in it? That is not yet a matter of decision. 'Aimer' is good enough to keep until next season, anyway; and it is not a play to be tossed on to the stage."

News and Views of the Stage and Its People.

The Studebaker, "dark" for the last seven days, will not remain untenanted long. Its next entertainment has not been appointed, but it probably will be either the stage version of "Main Street" or Franz Molnar's odd play, "Liliom." Or there is still a remote possibility that George Arliss may be induced to postpone his departure for London long enough to permit a brief Chicago showing of "The Green Goddess."

The curious dearth of musical shows in Chicago will end next week, when the spring invasion of things with tunes is scheduled to begin with "The O'Brien Girl" at the Grand, "Red Pepper" at the Apollo, and "Lola" at the La Salle. "Sally," Ed Wynn's annual revue, called "The Perfect Fool," and various others are in prospect. Al Jolson in "Bombo" has been listed among the promised arrivals, but he eyes this frontier with distaste at the moment and has expressed a disinclination to leave New York.

The Palace Music hall probably will suspend its vaudeville activities in May to house a special summer entertainment which goes into rehearsal down east this week. This is "Molly Darling," something devised by Otto Harbach and William Carey Duncan, with music and lyrics by Tom Johnstone and Phil Cook. No word is forthcoming as to who will act in it.

"Lilies of the Field," in which Miss Marie Doro played in New York, has emerged from certain financial difficulties which encompassed its management and negotiations are under way for its being brought to Chicago in the near future.

They are saying on the Atlantic seaboard that when Miss Maude Adams returns to the stage it will be in a revival of "Peter Pan." The rumor is not taken seriously, but you never can tell.

A pair of promising plays to be imported from London next season are Lord Dunsany's "If" and Monckton Hoffe's "The faithful Heart." It is not unlikely that Godfrey Tearle, who is playing "The Faithful Heart" with great success in London, will come over to play it here also.

Miss Pauline Frederick has been approached on the topic of her possible emergence from the films and may have the chief feminine rôle in the forthcoming production of Somerset Maugham's "East of Suez." She has not been audible to her admirers since she appeared in "Innocent," back in 1914.

When Miss Frances Starr is through with her revival of "The Easiest Way" she will turn to a new opus, as yet unnamed, by Jean Archibald.

Cosmo Hamilton has abandoned his tentative plan to offer a new play at the La Salle next week. When "The Silver Fox" departs, therefore, it will be followed by the musical comedy "Lola," with Miss Helen Shipman as its chief performer.

Henry W. Savage, Miss Zelda Sears, author of "Lady Billy," and Harold Levey, composer of the piece at the Illinois, came to Chicago last week to go over a new musical play which Miss Sears and Mr. Levey have prepared for Mitzi's use next season. The comedienne will continue to appear in "Lady Billy," probably until next December or January, when the new production will be staged.

Miss Francine Larrimore, finding time hanging heavy on her hands, proposes to appear at one of the vaudeville theaters before she leaves town to test the value of a sketch written by her in collaboration with Jene Markey of Evanston.

A third play by the authors of "Dulcy" and "To the Ladies!"—Marc Connelly and George S. Kaufman—is being made ready for the stage by George C. Tyler.

Miss Martha Hedman is to act next in a comedy by Edward Locke, called "My Lady's Lips." It requires the services of three players only; the others will be Miss Gilda Leary, who appeared here in "The Bat," and William H. Powell.

Ernie Young will resume the post of impresario at the Marigold Garden next week with a new revue, called "Arabian Nights." Miss Mary Thomas, Louis Le Vatle, and various others will be in it.

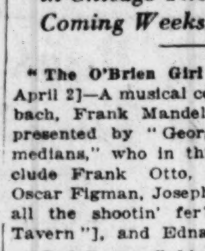
Impending Joys

Attractions Scheduled for Arrival in Chicago Theaters During the Coming Weeks.

"The O'Brien Girl" [Cohan's Grand, April 2]—A musical comedy by Otto Harbach, Frank Mandel, and Lou Hirsch, presented by "George M. Cohan's comedians," who in this instance will include Frank Otto, Elizabeth Hines, Oscar Figman, Joseph Allen [of "what's all the shootin' fer?" fame in "The Tavern"], and Edna Whistler.

"Red Pepper" [Apollo, April 2]—McIntyre and Heath, the beans of black face comedy in America, in an opulent extravaganza of mixed authorship. Mabel Elaine, Ferne Rogers, Edna Bates, Bob Nelson, and Barrett Greenwood will be among those present.

"Lola" [La Salle, April 2]—A musical comedy by George E. Stoddard, Ballard MacDonald, and James F. Hanley. Miss Helen Shipman heads the cast, and other participants are Fred Heider, Eddie Garvie, A. J. Herbert, Kate Stout, Helen Groody, and Vera Myers.



MISS PAULINE LORD
in "Anna Christie."

"Anna Christie" [Cort, April 9]—Miss Pauline Lord, last seen here with Ben-Ami in "Samson and Delilah," now risen to stardom in a grisly and highly effective bit of realism by Eugene O'Neill. Her company includes George Marion, Frank Shannon, and Eugenie Blair.

"The Dream Maker" [Powers', April 10]—William Gillette in a play of his own authorship, founded on a story by Howard E. Morton. Something vaguely in the Sherlock Holmes manner.

"The Perfect Fool"—Ed Wynn's annual show. Listed for arrival at the Illinois when Mitzi departs—perhaps April 23, perhaps later.

Of Carrion, Censors, and the Great Whistle Idea

Miss Pickford's press bureau—to have a record of more showings than any other film.

Rex Beach has taken all the local significance of the New Orleans riot chapters out of his novel, "The Uet," in order that the screen version may have a more general appeal. "Fair Lady" will be the picture's name.

Lillian Leighton, the well known character woman, is seriously ill with the flu, you will be sorry to learn.

Lewis Stone has been engaged to play the leading role in "The Black Orchid" to be released by Metro. Rex Ingram will direct. The combination of Stone and Ingram should be a great one.

"Sapho," featuring Pauline Frederick and Wallace Reid, has been barred by the motion picture commission of censors.

Normal Talmadge wants to film "The Garden of Allah" in Africa.

Mrs. Charles Alton Rutherford, better known as Pauline Frederick, and her husband, a physician of Seattle, Wash., have taken a house in Beverly Hills. It comes out now that Dr. Rutherford was Pauline's girlhood sweetheart. Miss Frederick contemplates a return to the speaking stage.

Salary cuts ranging from 10 to 20 per cent have been announced, it is said, in practically every Hollywood studio.

The press agent press agents that

Guy Bates Post must have music when he makes up. And shows a photograph to prove his point.

"Lotus Blossom," an oriental drama written and produced by James B. Leong, the only Chinese producer in the world, was shown privately to the Hon. D. K. Wellington Koo, who, they say, praised it highly.

KICK KORNER

ITS OBJECT—OBJECTION.

My Dear Miss Tinee: Did you see "Saturday Night"? If you did, won't you tell me, please, how Cecil De Mille gets away with it?

In the first place, Coney Island closes tight as a drum six weeks before Halloween. All outdoor amusements are by that time still as the grave.

And, again, I ask you what was the little laundress doing in the house in the first place? Fancy an establishment that boasted of footmen, butlers, private secretaries, and a chauffeur per person giving out the wash, even as you and I! What was sister's maid doing? The washing of madam's pretties has been from time immemorial one of Susette's most sacred tasks. Also, where was the housekeeper, whose business it is to check everything, both incoming and outgoing? And where was Shamrock going to put the clothes basket? In madam's boudoir? On the level, don't they get away with murder? Even a fourth rate domicile keeps a resident laundress.

And as to the soap. 'Pon my word, I thought they were flowers that the poor dear was going to be pelted with. What rot! One of the best known women in New York uses soap at 8 cents a throw. I know it to be a fact, for I've seen her use it myself.

Now, as to the chauffeurs, I wonder where De Mille got that suit? Go into any big garage in New York and take a peep into the lockers. Nine times out of ten you cannot tell whether the clothes belong to the hired driver or the master who, if he is young, invariably keeps a suit or two and an extra overcoat wherever he keeps his car, to guard against an emergency.

The more I see of the society drammers the more convinced I am that Mr. Doherty speaks the truth when he recounts how they fling plates and hurl custard pies in Hollywood's upper ten.

VANITY FAIR.

My Dear Miss Tinee: I notice that you have started a Kick Korner in your department, and I also notice that the maddened fans are like all the rest of the maddened fans—all their kicks are directed at the producers, actors, and theater owners. Every Sunday evening a crowding, crushing mob fills the Roosevelt lobby, and, despite the efforts of the ushers and other theater attachés, they positively will not allow those who are willing to take balcony seats to find a way through. No, sirree! That gang is there to get seats on the main floor, and all the ushers between here and Denver can't make 'em step aside and let other people, not so particular, go upstairs and make room for more people to get in out of the cold! The Roosevelt management is absolutely blameless in this matter; I place just 100 per cent of the blame on the heads of the selfish, waiting crowd.

J. D. C.

[Celebrity Photo.]

ASK ME! ASK ME! ASK ME!

CATHERINE: I don't know anything for you to do but take it to the Lord in prayer. Personally, I think your mother's exactly right.

FRANK E. L.: How nice to know that we agree. I surely do appreciate the clipping you sent me, and think the comments in your column interesting and to the point. If it wouldn't be too much trouble, I'd like you to send your stuff in often. Like to read it.

C. K. K.: Yes, George Arliss is a delight! We ARE getting educated, aren't we? It takes more than a killing smile and a pair of padded shoulders to please us nowadays. Thanks for your pleasant letter.

POLLY: O, without a doubt you mean Rodolf Valentino. His pictures are 35 cents, we have been told. Going up! Going up! "You pays you' money ad' you takes you' choice."

ESTELLA: I think if you would write to Mr. Reid and to Jacki Coogan's manager, telling about your club and asking for the photos, they would be sent you—upon the receipt of twenty-five cents. Address Wallace Reid, care of Lasky, Los Angeles; Jackie Coogan, care of United Studios, Hollywood. Not a bit of trouble.

GRACE C.: Yes, we are thankful also to "survice." Yes, when, as you say, "one white duck suit lasts a man three years on an isolated south sea island," it is going pretty strong. I can't think to what serial you refer. Can't you by any chance remember the name of some one in the cast? Or of the producing company? If you could I'm sure we could help you out. Cut out the crape—but come again, Grace!

LAS: Thomas Meighan is married to Frances Ring. Y'wekkum!

J. G. M.: This delighted editress arises to inform you that the reviews appear daily and usually Sunday.

K. V. E.: Nothing has "happened to Nazimova's husband" that I know of. He directs her, now, you know. It may be "jolly" but, whisper, was there anybody who didn't like a bit of it now and then? I sure do like them "unvarnished words."

MISS KATHARINE JACOBS.

MISS FLORENCE ODIL.
[Koehne Photo.]

MISS KATHARINE B. HULING.

Miss Katharine Jacobs, daughter of Col. and Mrs. William V. Jacobs of Glencoe, will be married to Tom Edwards Hough, son of Mrs. Walter M. Hough of Evanston, Thursday evening at 8:30 o'clock at St. Elizabeth's Episcopal church in Glencoe. Following the marriage ceremony there will be a reception at the Skokie Country club. Mr. and Mrs. Hough will live in Evanston.

Announcement was made last week of the engagement of Miss Florence Odil, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John James Odil of 5110 Kenmore avenue, to Albert L. Hopkins of Chicago. The wedding will take place in the early summer.

Spring Concert for Woman's Aid This Afternoon

By Kate Webber

THE Chicago Woman's Aid is again coöperating in the spring concert to be given today at 3 o'clock at the John Marshall High school, 3250 West Adams street, under the auspices of the Civic Music association and the Orchestral association. Frederick Stock will conduct, assisted by Eric De Lamarter and George Dasch.

The sponsoring of this concert is one of the most interesting activities of the Chicago Woman's Aid, which is organized for educational, civic, and cultural work. The various departments, which give concrete beneficial work for the community, are those of education, civics, philanthropy, art, and literature.

The social service committee of the civics and philanthropy departments has accomplished a great deal toward making the lives of young children happy and helping them to become useful citizens. The members have distributed 1,400 books to fourteen agencies, have taken 200 children to concerts, and, in addition to planning recreations, have established a center for girls of school age, called the Playhouse, where dramatics, sewing, singing, folk dancing, games, and Girl Scout work are the chief interests.

The committee for assisting the blind presents entertainment twice monthly at the Industrial home for the Blind, and one member conducts weekly reading circles there.

The child welfare committee provides breakfasts for the undernourished children at the Dore school, and instructs the youngsters in health rules and the importance of observing them. Through a film loaned by the state board of health, the public health committee has impressed upon women the importance of birth registration.

Of tremendous influence is the work of the better films committee; their reports on the progress of work done during the last year have proved that the work of viewing films and recommending those suitable for the child, adolescent, and family group is most constructive. This work has been indorsed by churches, schools, parent-teacher associations, child study circles, child conservation leagues, and women's clubs in Chicago and elsewhere.

Of special interest in the work of the education department are the mothers' clubs organized in the Smyth and Garfield schools. The aim of these clubs is to acquaint mothers with the schools and their environment, and to educate them through illustrated lectures and other programs. Each group has its executive committee, which acts on all matters concerning the welfare of the club, whose meetings are held twice monthly. The Chicago Woman's Aid has founded three scholarships—at the Medill school of journalism, at the graduate school of social service of the University of Chicago, and at the Scholarship Association for Jewish Children—and also is a guarantor to the Chicago Civic Opera association.

The art and literature department awards an annual prize for the best piece of sculpture exhibited by a Chicago woman sculptor at the Art institute. This department has conducted three study classes—current American fiction, by Prof. James Weber Linn; Field museum tours, and the Symphony orchestra study class, under the leadership of Miss Tina Haines.

Its committees, especially the public affairs and legislative, keep in close touch with civic problems which arise constantly. At the bi-monthly meetings the 1,200 members of the Chicago Woman's Aid have brought before them, by eminent men and women, all subjects of importance and of interest to the community.

The officers of the club are: President, Mrs. Edward Gudeman; first vice president, Miss Carrie Pam; second vice president, Mrs. Max Loeb; recording secretary, Mrs. M. Jacob Daube; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Edward J. Stransky Jr.; treasurer, Mrs. Edward J. Flonacher; civic secretary, Miss Sara Feder.

The Inspiring Presence of the Britannica

EVERY man with a home feels the direct responsibility of giving to members of his family, not only the material comforts which they deserve, but he provides carefully for their mental needs.

The Encyclopaedia Britannica brings into the home a fine sense of security against ignorance. It is a book for all the family. It furnishes the modern woman with information on every possible subject in which she is interested. It gives to the school children of all ages the help they need in their studies, and no home with growing children should be without the Britannica. The man finds in the Britannica information on a broad range of subjects which satisfies his every want.

The very presence of the Britannica in the home is an inspiration. No member of the family can resist reading it. Questions arise in the daily news; the Britannica furnishes the answer. One of the family reads something of particular timely interest; that subject is splendidly covered in the Britannica. Perhaps some member of the household is interested in philosophy, or science, or religion, or some other subject; no matter where one turns, the Britannica is replete with articles touching on every phase of every question.

Every home certainly should have the Britannica. It is the corner stone of the home library. The low prices and easy terms on which it is sold bring it within reach of everybody's purse. Printed on the lovely India paper a set of the Britannica is an attractive sight in any room in the home.

Send for our large prospectus telling about the Britannica and its usefulness in every home and giving prices and terms of payment for all bindings.

Of all sad words of tongue or pen—the saddest are these: "Charge It!"

She went the limit, and then some, to achieve her desires. She sacrificed her home, her friends, her husband's love; she risked her good name; she threw her all into the scales of fate, simply because she couldn't resist that phrase— "Charge It!"

The Easter Corset—Most Important of All

—Third Floor—Dearborn Street—

The smartly gowned woman will tell you that she always wears a new corset when having her clothes fitted—that is the secret of the well groomed appearance of so many women. Shall you follow the hint this Easter? New clothes can be shown to best advantage only when they have the proper foundation; the most fashionable suit or dress may lose its smartest "lines" when worn over an ill-fitting corset or one that does not depict the newest lines.

The new Warner corsets for spring possess every essential of grace, fashion and comfort—skillfully welded into models for every type of figure. If Milady's figure is full-formed and needs particular attention, we ask her to put herself in the care of one of our experiencd corstieres.

If Milady has a figure of slight proportions, we are ready to offer her a similar service for her comfort and smart appearance. The New Spring Warner Corsets are here in an assortment of styles and qualities so complete that there is a size and style for every woman as well as for the growing girl. Warner topless corsets have for a number of seasons been exceedingly popular with the slight woman. But now we have constant calls from women of every type of figure for the very low, comfortable corsets. The Warner is made to "cup the figure" at the hip line, and positively does not "ride up."

RUSSIAN OPERA IS TRAILBREAKER FOR OTHERS TO FOLLOW

By EDWARD MOORE

IF the Russian singers over at the Olympic theater are doing nothing else, they are at least pointing out a path for the Chicago Opera company to follow when it finds it advisable to enlarge its répertoire.

ANNA PAVLOWA.
[White Photo.]

As a matter of fact, the melodious Muscovites are doing a great deal more than that. They are entitled to serious consideration on their own merits, and they are getting it. But as pilots of the path their services are also considerable.

Russian opera is quite evidently a vein worth investigating and working. Up to the present time nearly every opera on the Russian list has assayed more value than the last half dozen novelties of the Chicago company put together. The Russian works have librettos founded upon real drama and scores founded upon real music. Since the ideal operatic story of the present day would seem to depend upon criminal deeds and melodramatic finishes, you will find as many slaughtered sopranos and tenors in trials as in the operas of any other land.

Good Melody Lives.

But the music is another and better matter. Possibly the Russians had to try out and discard as many thin blooded scores as any other people before they acquired their standard répertoire. There was once a man—I believe a native of New Jersey—who devoted his leisure time to compiling a catalogue of all the operas composed since Claudio Monteverde brought out "Orfeo." At last information he had something like 28,000. Considering that out of this number not more than ninety have reached anything like popularity or even semi-frequent performance today, it is enough to give pause to the next person who desires to write an opera score or the organization that holds out a prize therefor.

The company at the Olympic has some works that it will pay American audiences to get acquainted with. Their composers have learned the trick of writing a score that illustrates and illuminates the drama and is good music into the bargain. And by good music is meant good tunes.

Nothing else will ever serve the cause of opera in America or anywhere else. Skilled colorings of orchestral tone, successions of learned dissonances are all very well, matters in which to take delight if one has the time. But what lasts and lives is good melody. It has always been so, and it always will.

Performance Well Balanced.

In the memory of many operatic performances in the past, one of the most astonishing things about the proceedings at the Olympic is the complete lack of self-consciousness that pervades the company. No one has the air of making a display of personality, or, for that matter, of being any better than his neighbors. While there are some fine voices in the organization, good enough to hold their own in any companionship, and therefore standing out in this, the general effect is of balance and great honesty in performance.

The company is rapidly growing popular. It has already decided to extend its engagement from three to four weeks, also to give performances on Sunday nights instead of Wednesday afternoons. "Carmen," one of the non-Russian items in the répertoire, is announced for tonight, with Ina Bourskaya in the name part. They liked her out west when she sang it.

For the rest of the week these are promised:

Monday—"Dubrovsky," Napravnik.

Tuesday—"Snow Maiden" by Rimsky-Korsakoff.

Wednesday—"The Tsar's Bride" by Rimsky-Korsakoff.

Thursday — "Boris Godounoff" by Moussorgsky.

Friday—"Demon" by Rubinstein.

Saturday matinée — Rèpetition of "Dubrovsky."

Saturday night—"Pique Dame" by Tschaikowsky.

Pavlowa Comes Back.

An addition to the number of Russian visitors will take place tonight, when Anna Pavlowa and her adorable ballet arrive at the Auditorium. She has been here before this season at odd times and in a place where the glamour arising from careful lighting was pretty effectually removed. Now she comes for a week into more promising surroundings.

MLLE. KASANSKAYA.
[Murillo Photo.]

One of her novelties, to be seen tonight, according to advance bulletins, will depend on its lighting for a good part of its effect. It is called "Dionysus," and it purports to be a Greek fantasy.

By nothing more tangible than the combination of colored light rays on otherwise colored pigments of canvas a scene can be changed without shifting it. Certain outlines will be blotted out, others emphasized.

At least, so they say, and so they have been doing over on the continent of Europe. The Daghileff Ballet Russe did something a bit on the same order when it was here a few years ago. In the piece called "Schéherazade" there was a passage where a whirling, tumultuous mass of dancers suddenly stepped off into nothingness and vanished. They had not left the stage; they had merely moved into a different light combination.

Pavlowa promises a new program each performance. The customary order is two elaborate ballets, to be followed by a series of divertissements, and these, if you are in favor of the choreographic art, are quite likely to be the most bewitching of all.

More Russian Music.

Another development of Russian music is due in this country next fall. It is the Ukrainian National chorus, an organization that came from the Ukraine two years ago, forty-two voices strong, and has been touring Europe ever since. It points with pride to a subtitle, "The Human Orchestra."

Programs will consist of folk songs of the Russian and Ukrainian people, varied by serious Russian songs by an operatic prima donna not yet named, and gypsy songs from the Caucasus by another interpreter, also undisclosed for the present. Ocular effects will be added by the singers appearing in national costume in a scene devised and painted by Boris Anisfeld.

Alexander Koshetz, the original organizer and director, will accompany them as conductor. He is an uncle of Nina Koshetz, who displayed much talent in few opportunities with the Chicago Opera association this season. Max Rabinoff, at one time and another associated with such enterprises as the Pavlowa Ballet Russe and the Boston Opera company, is bringing the chorus to this country. October is set as the time of its arrival.

A concert with elements of novelty will be given tonight at Kimball hall by Miss Mariona Rakauska, Lithuanian soprano, jointly with Theodore Du Moulin, cellist of the Chicago Symphony orchestra. Miss Rakauska's program will consist mainly of Russian and Lithuanian folk songs, sung in native costume, and will contain several novelties never heretofore heard on the Chicago concert stage. Among these will be numbers by the Russian composers Rachmaninoff, Boulachof, Tarnoffsky, and Gretchaninoff, and Lithuanian songs by Simkus and Sarpolius. Mr. Du Moulin will play several numbers, and assisting artists will be Salome Stanielis, A. Otis, J. Byanskas, and Miss Rose Lyon.

It's Been Done Before.

They have discovered the advisability of an orchestra to train young players in New York, and they are joyfully hailing the discovery. An announcement from the American Orchestral Society, Inc., has much of the atmosphere surrounding a mariner sailing into uncharted seas.

FRITZ KREISLER.
[Copyright: U. & U.]

It says that before the society was founded students of orchestra instruments had no opportunity to obtain the training necessary to develop them into symphonic orchestral players, but that now a comprehensive plan has been developed by the said American Orchestral society. And so on and so forth, with repetitions and da capo.

Well and good. Undoubtedly an excellent work is being done and will continue. But in this outpost of the hinterland there is an organization doing just that thing. It is called the Civic Orchestra of Chicago, and it is in its third season. It gives full length concerts, and pretty good ones; it has graduated a number of its members into various symphony orchestras around the country; it has a full corps of trainers and conductors, headed by Frederick Stock.

The American Orchestral society promises to put sixty of its students with forty professional musicians. The Civic orchestra gave a concert at Orchestra hall last Sunday in which eighty students appeared with five professionals—and the five were included not to carry the young players in their wake but to balance certain sections of the orchestra.

Some day a collection ought to be made of things that are believed east of the Hudson never to occur west of it.

Philharmonic Recital Tomorrow.

The Philharmonic string quartet of Chicago will give its first downtown recital tomorrow night at Lyon & Healy hall. It has an interesting personnel, being composed of four veteran members of the Chicago Symphony orchestra.

George Dasch, the first violinist, is second viola player in the orchestra, also assistant conductor of the Civic orchestra of Chicago. Fritz Itte is among the front stand first violinists. Otto Roehrborn, the viola player of the quartet, is principal second violinist of the orchestra. Carl Bruckner, the cellist, is a member of the cello section of the orchestra, and has several times been soloist with it.

The program will include Brahms' Quartet in A minor, op. 51, No. 2, and Mozart's in C major, Koechel No. 465.

This Week's Concerts.

John Alden Carpenter's Concertino for piano and orchestra will be heard again this week in the concerts by the Chicago Symphony orchestra. It was last played here in 1916 with Percy Grainger as soloist, since then having been presented by various orchestras of the eastern cities. Rudolph Reuter will have the solo position this week, also appearing in Liszt's Hungarian Fantasia. Arne Oldberg of Evanston will be represented with an orchestral piece, his Second Rhapsody. The symphony of the week will be Brahms' third.

THE B-M WATER SPREADER
(PATENTED)

A Scientific Achievement that Lowers Hot Water Costs

—See it at the Coliseum—March 26 to April 1—
Own Your Own Home Exhibition

Here at last is an invention that makes hot water surprisingly cheap. This is the B-M Water Spreader (patented)—the most remarkable element ever devised for heating water economically. It is found exclusively in the Royal Automatic storage gas water heater.

As water flows through the lower chamber of this ingenious device, it is spread into a thin sheet; and the full force of the terrific heat from the Royal high power burner playing directly upon the bottom of the water spreader, quickly brings the water to a raging boil. As a result of this turbulent action, rapid circulation is established. This effectively removes the heat-retarding insulation of air bubbles which always form when water is being heated—and allows the water to get the maximum amount of heat from the gas.

To illustrate: Water in a kettle stands for a few minutes at a certain temperature just before going into a boil. By agitating or circulating the water, the air bubbles, which line the bottom of the kettle, are released. The water then quickly comes to the boiling point.

Such circulation is achieved with the B-M Water Spreader. This device is not to be confused with open discs found in the other heaters. The operation of the B-M Spreader is altogether different and the gas consumption much less. And because it eliminates coils this spreader prevents loss of efficiency and frequent repair bills due to liming.

The Royal sells for less than any so-called instantaneous heater because its method of heating lends itself to simple construction. It positively gives piping hot water at any time—day or night. Its tank is always full of hot water. Temperature is regulated by the automatic thermo valve and the water is kept hot with less gas than is necessary to suddenly bring cold water to a high temperature every time a faucet is opened.

There is a proper sized Royal Automatic for your specific needs. It will give you the finest hot water service imaginable at the lowest cost. See it in actual operation at the

MUSIC AND THE MUSICIANS

MME. SCHUMANN-HEINK.
[Apeda Photo.]

After several years spent in touring as far away from America as the orient, Mme. Ernestine Schumann-Heink is returning to Chicago this afternoon to give a song recital at Orchestra hall. During her eastern trip the famous contraltor became something of a discoverer of other music. It was she who brought to this country the first definite information about the Russian opera company now appearing in this city.

Among the numbers to be presented by the Sunday Evening club choir at Orchestra hall tonight will be "Rose, Crowned with Light," by the Chicagoan, Philo A. Otis. The chorus numbers 100. Mabel Sharp Herdien, soprano, and Gustav Holmquist, bass-baritone, will sing the solo parts.

An inquiry reaches this desk regarding the authorship of the song, "Illinois." C. H. Chamberlain wrote the words. The music is the tune formerly known as "Baby Mine." It is by Archibald Johnston, apparently adapted from an English folk song.

Convention in Decatur.

The annual convention of the Illinois Federation of Music Clubs will take place in Decatur April 25-28. It will be given under the auspices of the Millikin Conservatory of Music, and in connection with that organization's spring music festival.

Among the musical events announced will be an organ recital by Eric DeLamarter, assisted by Anna Burmeister, soprano; a concert by the St. Louis Symphony orchestra, Rudolph Ganz, conductor; a performance of Henry Hadley's "The New Earth" and Colderidge Taylor's "Tales of Old Japan" by the Millikin Choral society and the orchestra; and various recitals in which Mrs. Bessie Williams Boynton, Mrs. Helen Protheroe Axtel, Arthur Kraft, Rudolph Reuter, and Hans Hess will appear.

Mrs. Albert J. Ochsner of Chicago is the president of the federation. The program committee is composed of Max Swarthout of Decatur, Eugene Simpson of Taylorville, and Mrs. A. F. Callahan of Chicago.

Matters of Engagements.

No one has put up billing for Mme. Emma Calvé in this city yet, but she is patrolling a more or less continuous course here and there about the country, and apparently finding plenty of engagements. For any one with as many years of public appearances to her credit as she can claim, she sings ambitious programs. Excerpts from "Carmen" are, of course, unfailing—the "Habanera" and aria of the playing cards are stressed—but there are specimens from elsewhere. "Casta Diva" from "Norma" is one, a piece with so many difficulties in it that only Rosa Raisa has ventured to sing it around here in recent years. She also uses Beethoven's grave and sustained "In questa tomba," bits from the ancient Italian, and one of the extremely rare "Chansons de Geste," coming down from the times of the troubadours.

The Chicago Madrigal club sends word of its twentieth annual competition for a composition in madrigal form. One hundred dollars is offered for the best setting of the poem, "Robin Goodfellow." D. A. Clippinger, conductor of the club, 617 Kimball building, has charge of the proceedings.

Detroit has had its annual scare over the possibility of losing its symphony orchestra, and would seem to have passed the crisis. Fifty thousand dollars more was needed in the orchestral exchequer, and apparently $50,000 has been found for the purpose.

HILDA BUTSOVA.

Above is represented one of the many reasons for believing Russian ballet as presented by the Pavlowa company to be a high and persuasive art. This reason bears the name of Hilda Butsova; she has developed from a lithe and graceful youngster to one of the important nymphs of the dance in the Pavlowa organization.

For men who wear nightshirts

Look anywhere you want to and you will not find another fabric for nightshirts that will wear as long and look as well as Fruit of the Loom. Long wear means not just keeping whole, but maintaining a fine, smooth, even finish and sparkling whiteness after repeated trips to the laundry.

If you don't have home-made nightshirts, you can buy Fruit of the Loom nightshirts all ready-made. Every genuine Fruit of the Loom nightshirt has the famous Fruit label sewn in it. That label is our guarantee of absolute satisfaction—not only in the fabric but also in the fit and workmanship. If you are not satisfied, your money will be refunded by us.

Fruit of the Loom

Men who wear ready-made nightshirts of Fruit of the Loom say that they have never found a nightshirt that fits so well, feels so good, and is so comfortable. They are full-sized—the shoulders and neck line are right—the seams flat and smooth—the buttons sewn on tight.

And men who wear home-made Fruit of the Loom nightshirts would wear no other kind, because of the smooth feel and sturdy quality of the fabric. When buying white Fruit of the Loom by the yard, look for the name stamped on the selvage.

Slams of Life

By J. P. McEVOY

A SONG FOR THE RUSH HOUR.

In days of old, so we are told,
We roamed the hills and vales
And hung from trees with clinging knees
And cute prehensile tails,
We loved to lark in a swinging arc
From swaying bough to bough.
Alas the ways of olden days,
We cannot do it now!

Today we jar in the surface car
In rain and cold and heat
And from a strap we hang and flap
Our flat and weary feet,
Through the rush and clang we hang and hang
Till our adenoids turn pale
And vainly sigh for the days gone by
And our long prehensile tail.

If our toes could hold and our arms enfold
Our packages as we go
And we could wrap around a strap
A yard of tail or so,
And down the aisle in Simian style
Swing festooned, cheek, to jowl,
Ah, wouldn't that be la grande vie?
Hot dog! Hot cat! Hot towel!

She Wept Her Way To Film Fame

IT was such a battle as Movieland had never seen before—a battle of tears. And Remember Steddon won. Under the lashing raillery and cutting invective of the famous director, her soul writhed and spilled out of her eyes. That moment a great actress came into being. Thus are sometimes made the stars that twinkle in the filmy firmament.

Yet Remember Steddon, a few short months before, had been just a country girl in a mid-west town—a girl who had never even seen a moving picture.

Beautiful, passionate, eager, she found herself at last in Hollywood where the films come from, and her soul opened like a flower in the sunshine of morning.

What befell her of good and bad constitutes the truest picture of life as it is actually lived in the world of motion pictures that has ever been disclosed to an eagerly interested public. Her story as published in THE RED BOOK MAGAZINE is unquestionably the greatest novel ever written by Rupert Hughes—himself a master of the films. It is being discussed everywhere. Are you reading it?

BERLIN NIGHT LIFE GAYEST IN EUROPE

BY H. J. MANN.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

BERLIN.—The night life of Berlin, probably wilder and more extravagant than the night life of any other city in Europe today, is kept up by the Germans, and not by the foreigners. The claims that the foreigners alone, as a result of the high value of their money in German marks, are able to pay the fantastic prices asked at German lobster palaces are absurd, and are for the most part the defense put up by new rich Germans attempting to defend their action in squandering as much nightly as the average German family requires for its existence for six months.

The authority for this statement is Eric Borchardt, American army jazz band player, who has introduced jazz music to the German capital. Borchardt, who plays at several large restaurants and dance halls nightly, is prepared to back up with names his charge that the Germans themselves supply the major part of the patrons at these places.

"First," he says, "there are the members of the old German noble families that, in some way or other, have more money than they know what to do with. Thus, various Princes Reuss and Prince Hohenlohe are conspicuous figures in German night life. There is, too, a veritable small army of lesser aristocrats, counts and such, including Count Mumm, of champagne fame.

"The German theatrical and movie world seems to consider it its duty to frequent the all-night cafés even more than its colleagues in America. Particularly producers and actors in films that have been sold to America can be seen nightly spending some of the many marks that they get for their dollars. Owners of Berlin department stores and of the large textile factories that are working on American orders are included among the regular patrons of these places. A few popular authors and playwrights, too, seem to be trying to see if they can't spend their royalties faster than they are received.

"Theaters with high prices of admission are packed daily, and at certain hours of the day it is hard to get a table in Berlin's de luxe restaurants. If these things were really being kept up to any considerable extent by foreigners, every foreigner in Berlin would be forced to attend half a dozen theaters nightly, eat twenty or thirty meals a day in the best restaurants, drink several dozen bottles of champagne nightly, and dash around from one costume ball to another to hold up his end.

"The Germans themselves—a small class, of course, of new and rich—are making Berlin known throughout Europe for the wildness and extent of its night life. Foreigners, and particularly Americans, have little to do with it. Don't you make any mistake about that."

BEST JOKE I EVER HEARD

What is the best joke you ever heard? Share it with The Tribune readers. One dollar will be paid for each joke published. Address the Jokes Editor, Chicago Sunday Tribune.

Had to Have a Noise.

"Willie."

"Yes mamma."

"What in the world are you pinching the baby for? Let him alone."

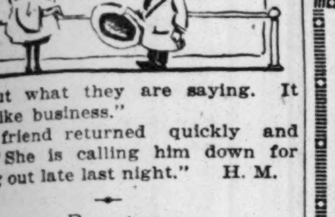
"Aw I ain't doin' nothin'. We're only playin' automobile, an' he's the horn." J. D.

Blasting His Hopes.

"Arthur," said a young artist to a friend, "do you see that couple looking at my picture and talking in such low, earnest tones?"

"Yes," replied the friend.

"I wish you would saunter by and find out what they are saying. It looks like business."



The friend returned quickly and said, "She is calling him down for staying out late last night." H. M.

Repartee.

"Doin' any good?" asked a curious individual on the bridge.

"Any good?" answered the fisherman in the creek below, "why I caught forty bass out o' here yesterday."

"Say, do you know who I am?" asked the man on the bridge.

The fisherman replied that he did not.

"Well, I am the county fish and game warden."

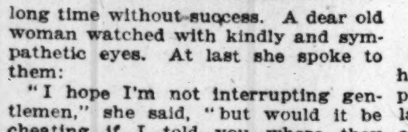
The fisherman after a moment's thought said, "Say, do you know who I am?"

"No," replied the officer.

"Well, I am the biggest liar in northern Indiana," said he crafty fisherman with a grin. H. C. K.

She Meant Well.

Two golfers sliced their drives into the rough and went in search of their respective balls. They searched for a long time without success. A dear old woman watched with kindly and sympathetic eyes. At last she spoke to them:



"I hope I'm not interrupting gentlemen," she said, "but would it be cheating if I told you where they are?" M. S.

No Trouble at All.

An ex-service man was telling of a corporal in his company who was a quick thinker. One day during drill the corporal was standing on the sidelines of the parade grounds. A pretty girl was eagerly watching the drill when a rifle volley crashed out. With a scream she shrank back into the arms of the young corporal standing beside her.

"Oh, I beg your pardon," she exclaimed, blushing. "I was frightened by the rifles."

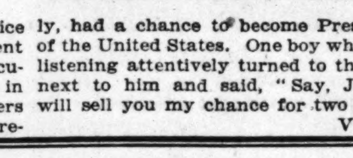
"Quite all right," the corporal gallantly replied. "Let's go over and watch the heavy artillery." T. E. M.

On the Job.

A man who was wanted by the police had been photographed in six different positions, and the pictures were circulated among the police. The chief in a small town wrote to headquarters a few days later, saying, "I duly received the pictures of the six miscreants whose capture is desired. I have arrested five of them; the sixth is under observation and will be taken soon." C. T.

Future Business Man.

A public man was addressing a group of schoolboys on the value of education, incidentally remarking that each one of them, if he studied diligently, had a chance to become President of the United States. One boy who was listening attentively turned to the boy next to him and said, "Say, Jim, I will sell you my chance for two bits." V. H.



THE OUTCAST RETURNS

By Guy Lee

(A sign, "Admission 10 Cents," has been hung in front of a loop movie.)

By various methods, one by one,
We're slanting the belated view
That Brother Mars has had his fun,
And that at last the war is through.
Most everything is trending down
To you remember way back when,
And now, to lift another frown,
The Ten Cent Movie's here again.

Perhaps it's not such silly dope
That soon, as prices smaller grow,
We may indulge the cheering hope
To see once more the Nickel Show.
There's prospect of that glad event:
The Dime, that's long an outlaw been,
Is legal tender, to be spent—
The Ten Cent Movie's here again.

TABLOID BOOK REVIEW

Last week's composite list of best sellers at five leading Chicago book stores was:

FICTION.

"Maria Chapdelaine: A Tale of the Lake St. John Country," by Louis Hémon. (Interesting comment on this in new life of Sir Wilfrid Laurier.)
"Memoirs of a Midget," by Walter de la Mare.
"Mr. Prohack," by Arnold Bennett.
"An Ordeal of Honor," by Anthony Pryde.
"The Beautiful and Damned," by F. Scott Fitzgerald.
"Vandemark's Folly," by Herbert Quick.

NONFICTION.

"The Story of Mankind," by H. W. Van Loon.
"A Parody Outline of History," by Donald Ogden Stewart.
"Chapters from Childhood," by Juliet Soskice.

AT THE PUBLIC LIBRARY.

Six books most in demand at the Chicago public library last week were:
"Maria Chapdelaine," by Louis Hémon.
"If Winter Comes," by A. S. M. Hutchinson.
"To the Last Man," by Zane Grey.
"The Outline of History," by H. G. Wells.
"The Story of Mankind," by H. W. Van Loon.
"Faery Lands of the South Seas," by Hall and Nordhoff.

By Fanny Butcher.

"CROME Yellow" is sure to be one of the most fashionable intellectual spring shades.

It has that quality of chic which Americans—and many of their Anglican cousins in the literary world—somehow never get. It is satirically just the shade of mind which fits this year of our Lord 1922. It is—in a word—Aldous Huxley's newest book, his first novel (by courtesy), a series of incidents at a house party which includes so many intellectuals that even the young things who, in other days and in other spheres, were wont to don the happy hypocritical masks of love, merely dandle their masks indifferently the while they discourse without restraint upon the themes of sex and amour. They are all very smart intellectually, and the smartest of them all is Aldous Huxley, who observes them.

He reminds me of a fly circus I used to have.

Some one had presented me with an outfit to make a fly perform with a dumbbell. The dumbbell was made of the tiniest imaginable balls of cork stuck on the merest wisp of a bit of wood. On a larger piece of wood was glued an upright, pointed at the end. With great skill one caught a fly, stuck the pointed sliver underneath the little crusty place on his back between his wings, put the little dumbbell in his feet, and he gave a most brilliant exhibition of dumbbell maneuvers. I was horrified when I first saw it, but when I watched the fly, which had been performing with such skill, jaunt away as soon as he was removed from his bandstand, I overcame a little of my shuddering disgust. I was always torn, however, between a complete macabre fascination at the idea of watching it perform and a sense that, despite the fly's unimpaired activities afterward, the performance had been a cruel manifestation of the power of humans over dumb things.

Aldous Huxley is another child with a fly circus.

He catches his human insects, sticks them up in the view of all, and watches them wriggle, and the reader is torn between a feeling that the whole thing is agin nature and a fascination for the diabolically clever trick which the author has played on his characters. He is an exponent of the intellectually fashionable theory that all is futility and that mortals are primary fools, as yellow as one of the primary colors. The conversation of his characters is extremely smart—more like what Margot Asquith thought the conversations of the Angels was than it actually was, I doubt not. Aldous Huxley, in "Crome Yellow" is no one different from, not even some one quite so impressive as, Aldous Huxley in "Limbo," that amazing group of short stories and incidents, and from Aldous Huxley in "Leda," that volume of genuinely, cruelly satirical poems. But Aldous Huxley in "Crome Yellow" is just as shocking and just as "aw-w-w-wfully" (as the English say) amusing.

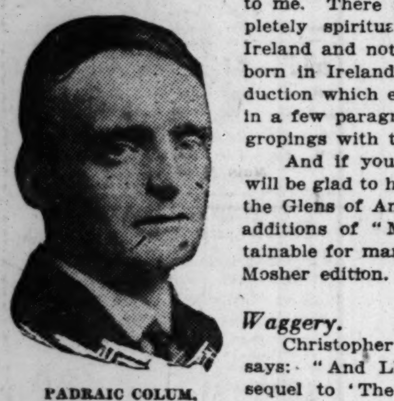
"Dear Harp of My Country."

Padraic Colum has made an "Anthology of Irish Verse" which could not possibly have been selected with more care nor understanding, it seems to me. There is no poem in it which is not completely spiritually Irish. It is an anthology of Ireland and not of poets who happen to have been born in Ireland. Mr. Colum has written an introduction which explains his choices and which gives, in a few paragraphs, a history of Ireland's literary gropings with the English language.



PADRAIC COLUM.

And if you are interested in Irish poetry you will be glad to hear that Moira O'Neill's "Songs from the Glens of Antrim" has just been reprinted with additions of "More Songs." They have been obtainable for many years only in the bibelot Thomas Mosher edition.

* *

Waggery.

Christopher Morley in his "Literary Lobby" says: "And Lloyd E. M. Mayer suggests that a sequel to 'The Sheik' might be called 'Twin Bedouins,' which appears rather apposite."

Pacific Matters and a Library With Initiative.

Three new books on the Pacific triangle question have just been published in this country—"The Outlook for the Philippines," by Charles Edward Russell, who believes that the Philippines should be independent; "Asia at the Crossroads," by E. Alexander Powell, who merely reports without propaganda, and "The Cornerstone of Philippine Independence," by Francis Burton Harrison, which strongly controverts the findings of the Wood-Forbes commission, but which was written without in any sense intending to do that, so his publishers declare. By the way, the Newark public library, always in the forefront of progress, has made forty-three lists of books and maps about the far east which will be invaluable for students, whether actual or amateur. The lists will be sent to inquirers free, but be sure to send postage, which is 10 cents, to the Newark public library, Newark, N. J.

Welcome Tidings.

A leather pocket edition of A. S. M. Hutchinson's four novels has just been brought out. The books are uniform in size with the leather bound Conrads and Kiplings which every one knows about, and they are bound in dark maroon. They are, in the order of their publication, "Once Aboard the Lugger," 1908; "The Happy Warrior," 1912; "The Clean Heart," 1914, and "If Winter Comes," 1921.

Tales of the Untamed.

"Ghitza and Other Romances of Gypsy Blood" is a collection of short stories by Konrad Bercovici, who wrote a series of episodes called "Dust of New York," which never had the recognition which their honesty deserved.

"Ghitza," the title story, was selected by Edward J. O'Brien as the best short story of 1920, so Mr. Bercovici's publishers confide. "Fanutza" is one of the twenty best of 1921, according to Mr. O'Brien.

Facts which you may take or leave, according to your faith in the judge. Tales of wilds and untamed emotions these are, anyway, and well written.

Here Is Exalted Verse.

The imprint of Walter M. Hill, Chicago, is on a volume of such rare beauty that it is a distinction to own it. "The Sonneteering of Petrachino" the slender sheaf of lovely verse is called. It is rare in these days to find a poet who is willing to bind his muse with the inflexible rules of the sonnet, and rarer still to find one whose spirit is that of the classic sonneteers.

This anonymous Petrachino has written a short cycle of love sonnets in the most restrained spirit of the classics, warm with the real yearning of love to celebrate in noble form its passion. Before I quote one of the softly polished lovely sonnets, it is only fair to say that the really beautiful printing makes of the little volume a bibelot. John Henry Nash of San Francisco, who printed it, well deserves to have his signature gracing his work of art. Here is one of the sonnets, which is, to me, a thing of great beauty:

PARTHENOS.

Sometimes I wonder if the Parthenon
Was just so perfect when it sparkled new,
Fresh from the Phidian mallet, when withdrew
First from its side the builders' skeleton
And bade astonished Athens look upon
Its bright-hued splendor. Now the winds imbrue
Its beauty with eternity, the dew
Paints it more perfect—dew and Attic sun.

As kindly Time rounds the too rigid line
Of squared foundation, sharply chiseled plinth,
And warms to tenderness the chill above
Of pediment and fluted labyrinth.
So may your beauty on itself refine,
Perfection change for perfectness, through love.

* *

Just Dashing Through.

Frederick O'Brien dashed through Chicago the other day bound for the solitudes of Sausalito, Cal., where he is going to write another book of the south seas, do a play for Doris Keane, and maybe start his novel, which is to be about Chicago during the early nineties.

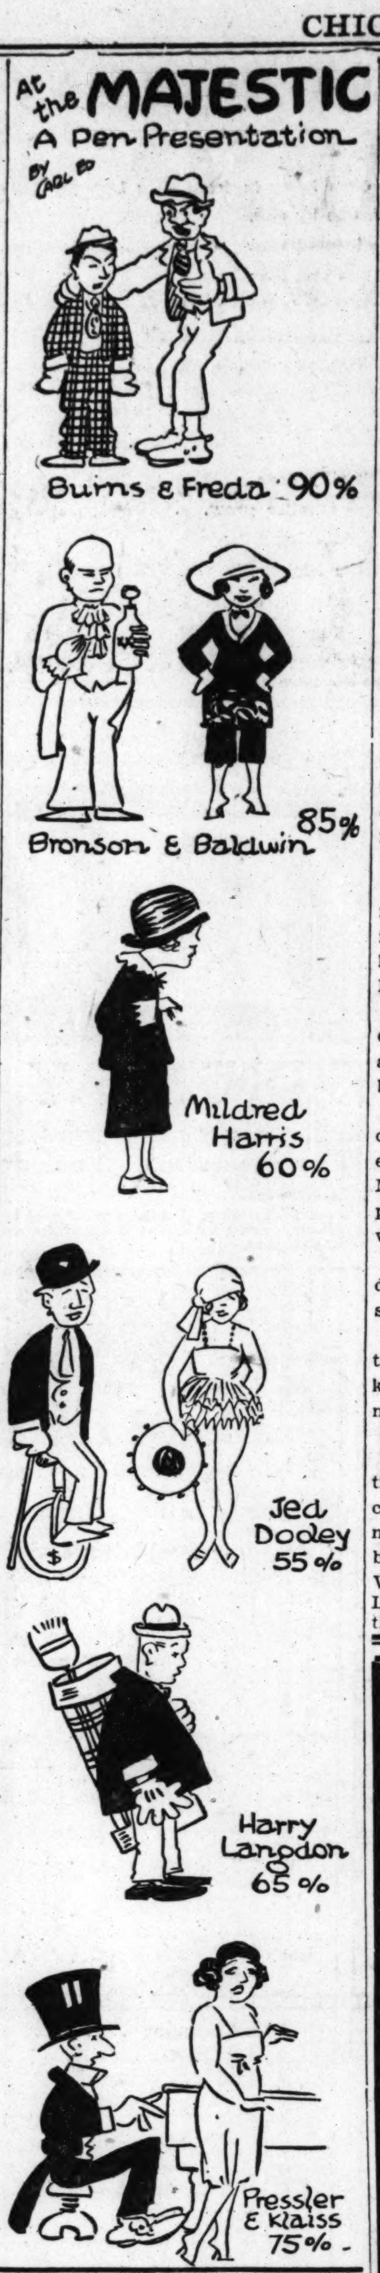
Empirical.

"Monday or Tuesday" is a volume of sketches by Virginia Woolf, who has, as successfully as any one else, applied the theories of imagist poetry to prose. She gives an image of a mental state and the reader translates the image into whatever reality he can. It is an extremely complicated method of writing, but it has its ardent adherents, of which, I confess, I am not one.



THE VERTICAL CITY
by FANNIE HURST

New York, that houses a small nation of people—all rushing, scheming, loving, daring—a jumbled mass of terrible force, plunging onward—for what?

This is the grimly beautiful setting which the author has chosen as a background for six whirlwind sketches.

From Wall Street offices and Riverside Drive apartments, down to the slums of the Bowery, Fannie Hurst goes, with the measuring eye of the surgeon and the heart of the poet. Writing the emotional history of New York, penetrating those deepest feelings of humanity which sometimes cause men and women to do the things which their reason forbids.

What Dickens did, and what A. Neil Lyons is doing for London, Fannie Hurst is to a great extent doing for New York. One reader calls this new volume by the author of Star Dust, Humoresque, etc., "a daring inquiry into the lives of people who live dangerously."

ART AND ARTISTS

Chicago Living Up to Reputation as Art Center

By Anne Ellis.

LIKE an apostate back to Christianity, one coming into the Art institute after an absence of years finds the fair sized bush grown from the mustard seed sprung into a tree indeed. Even Mr. H. L. Menken, who long ago baptized Chicago the art center of America, would be pleased with his godchild. The well known motto "To know Chicago is to rob——I mean, love her," becomes "To know Chicago is to be astonished at her—to be respectful to her."

There is a time in the history of nations and families when legends first become traditions, and the last five years seem to have been that period in the history of art in this city. The Art institute has certainly developed a past or rather a traditional present. One feels like tabulating thus:

Do you know that—

Two galleries are being completely refurbished, even to lowering the ceilings, to house the Potter Palmer collection which comprises such names as Monet, Millet, Diaz, Corot, and Zorn?

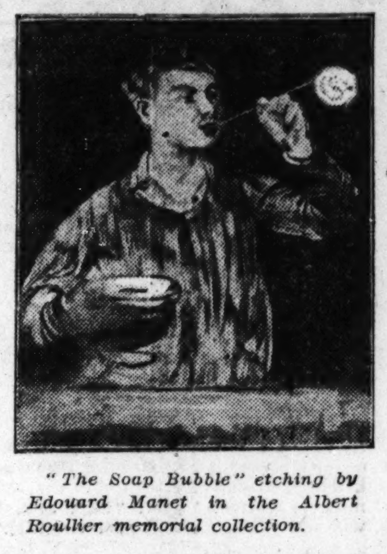
That right next door is the million dollar W. W. Kimball collection with a Rembrandt, a Turner, and a Gainsborough?

That 100 men are getting an art education at the Art institute school at the expense of the government and that Mrs. George McKinlock has given two prizes, one of $200 and one of $300, to which only these men are eligible?

That every day Mrs. Carl Buehr conducts two art classes for the public school children?

Of course, you have read all these things in these columns, but to really know them you must have lived where none of them exist.

One of the most important donations the Art institute has ever received is one of 5,000 drawing by great masters, a room full of which has just been hung. They were given by Prof. William F. E. Gurley in memory of Lenora Hall Gurley. On account of the vast number of drawings in the collection only a small part of it can be hung at one time. It is the largest collection of drawings by masters possessed by any art museum in the United States, and the names in the catalog include most of the great ones from Raphael to Rembrandt and beyond.



"The Soap Bubble" etching by Edouard Manet in the Albert Roullier memorial collection.

There is also an interesting exhibition of drawings and dhy points by Margery Ryerson.

Mrs. Albert Roullier and her daughter, Miss Alice Roullier, have made an addition to the Albert Roullier collection of etchings and prints. One is a lithograph from the Burdeley collection by Lunois called Danæ, and the other is "Eve," an etching by Albert Bernard.

An exhibition of contemporary British etchings assembled by Laurence Binyon, curator of prints of the British museum, will begin at the institute April 1 and run until about the 27th.

One of our young Chicago artists, Miss Grazilla Jacoby, has received many favorable notices from the press in New Orleans, where she is having an exhibition at the Arts and Crafts club.

Vaudeville Wit

McVICKER'S.

Henshaw and Avery:

"My brother has joined the silent majority."

"Dead?"

"No, married."

"I saw your father in the restaurant today, and I'm glad he doesn't eat pie with his knife the way he used to."

"That's because I bribed the waiter to put soap on his knife."

"I was a fool to ever marry you."

"Now, my dear, I cannot permit you to take the blame. It was I who was the fool for asking you."

"You kiss me as if you were an old hand at it."

"How do you know?"

"And is it for this that I have spent my time with you?"

"Yes, and that's all you have spent."

BIRTHRIGHT
By T. S. STRIBLING

IT will probably be the most discussed novel of the season. It is the first novel of its kind—the serious, artistic presentation of the modern, educated negro in America. Charles Hanson Towne of The New York Tribune says: "I consider 'Birthright' the finest American novel of a decade." A powerful, appealing, poignant story beautifully told. (Illustrated, $1.90.)

This Novel Is an Event in American Literature

THE ROAD TO THE WORLD
By WEBB WALDRON

PEOPLE who are keen to know first the best things going on in the artistic world should get this extraordinary novel at once. There isn't a shoddy, shabby, flamboyant thing in it. It is thrilling, not because it is violent, but because it is so immaculately sincere. And its style is almost a miracle in present-day writing. Recommended without reserve. ($1.90.)

Conflict
By Clarence Budington Kelland

The setting—A lumber region where reputations are easily made or lost. Where men are either "white" or "yellow." Where women are never passive—they either raise or lower the moral tone. Where the continued existence of a whole community may hang on a log-jam. A wild, rough country where might makes right and men are not slow to use their fists.

The Conflict—Between Dorcas Remalie, an effete debutante from an eastern metropolis, and with new, primitive life into which she is suddenly thrown. Between her hypocritical uncle and his sinister past. Between a scheming faction and a young lumberjack who was to play so unusual a part in Dorcas Remalie's life. Between long-standing mystery and young love.

A powerful tale of hypocrisy, love and mystery and a struggle between strong wills. You'll enjoy it. $2.00.

Author of "Where the Trails Go Down," etc.

ASIA AT THE CROSSROADS

MR. POWELL is one of those born writers who cannot help being interesting. His background of travel and diplomatic experience is rivaled by few American authors. In this new book, as important in subject matter as it is fascinating in style, Mr. Powell presents Japan, Korea, China and the Philippines of today. He lets the reader see and feel what sort of people live in those countries, what is most worrying them, what is most helping them, how and why Americans should be intensely interested in them, etc. He writes, of course, from first-hand material after an extended trip through the Far East.

("Asia At the Crossroads" is a handsome octavo of 325 pages and 50 illustrations. It is published by The Century Co., 353 Fourth Ave., New York City. Price $3.00.)

The Pathless Trail
Arthur O. Friel

A GRIPPING story of the South American jungle where cannibals still live. Here you'll enjoy every thrill of the Tarzan books, and explore an entirely new locale. This author of some of the most successful short adventure tales has blazed his own trails in South America, has himself had adventures "stranger than fiction." His novel is vibrant with jungle atmosphere — with the terrible pervading influence of the cannibals — with the mental and physical effect on the white men of the crawling, hunting and hissing jungle creatures. It's the tale of a white man who fled civilization. For a power to excite you to terror and amazement you'll put it before even Rider Haggard or Kipling. $1.75 ways in which the other half writes, are the romance and comedy of "Just Because," and the little fable on which the tunes of the score are strung is, in comparison, unexciting.

Miss Sheppard's tunes are quite a bit better than those of the average girl school graduate class musical comedy, without being quite as good as those of the average Broadway same. It is post-graduate music. Mrs. Woodruff has subscribed to the union rules of girl and music poetry and manages to keep her vocabulary down to the words dove, blue, rose, croon, and sigh and their rhymes.

MISS QUEENIE SMITH.

The producers have been generous with girls, scenery, that pretty singer, Jane Richardson; the improving comedian, Olin Howland, and a nimble and fearless dancer, Queenie Smith. It will be the fault of nothing but their early upbringing if the three ladies in trade, the authors, are blackballed by the Lambs and their opus by the tired business man.

Pretty when she wakes up

A fresh, radiant, early morning complexion is the real test of beauty

This is the real test. The girl who wakes fresh and radiant, with a clear, smooth skin which has no defects to conceal, need not worry about her looks. She possesses the greatest of all attractions—the one which outshines all others.

This need not discourage the girl whose complexion is not so good. Proper care will soon transform a bad skin into one admired for its perfection. Get rid of the clogging accumulations which cause coarseness and disfiguring defects and you will soon be complimented on your fresh, blooming complexion.

The secret is simple and about 3,000 years old. It was discovered in ancient Egypt and practiced by Cleopatra.

Simple—Beautifying

The remedy for a coarse skin, for one disfigured with blackheads or ugly blotches, is daily cleansing with a lather blended from palm and olive oils.

Such a cleanser is so mild and soothing that it softens the skin and keeps it smooth. But it removes the accumulation of dirt, oil and perspiration which are responsible for most bad complexions.

You can't neglect your skin and expect to keep it blooming and alluring. The powder and rouge you use to conceal defects deceive no one.

The Soothing Cleanser

Palmolive is the modern combination of the same beautifying cosmetic oils Cleopatra used in the days of ancient Egypt. It is just as valuable today as a safe soothing cleanser.

Massage its smooth, creamy lather softly into the network of tiny pores which compose the surface of your skin. It will remove the clogging deposits which enlarge these pores, cause blackheads and invite blotches.

Dry skins are benefited by cold cream after cleansing. If unusual dryness is your trouble, apply a little cream before as well as after washing.

Popularity—Low Price

Judge Palmolive by other soaps and you will expect to pay at least 25 cents a cake. But the popularity which keeps the Palmolive factories working day and night naturally reduces cost. Quantity production is always economical.

Thus this finest facial soap is offered at 10 cents a cake—a price all can afford. You can economically use Palmolive for every toilet purpose, for it costs no more than ordinary soap.

Cleopatra's Way

With a world of ancient beauty arts at her command, she depended on cleansing with Palm and Olive oils to protect, improve and preserve the freshness and smoothness of her skin.

This beautifying was not confined to face alone. The bath was a daily ceremonial with all ancient peoples—palm and olive oils the cleansers used.

Bathe with Palmolive and keep your skin smooth and white. It is a luxury all can afford.

Volume and efficiency produce 25-cent quality for only

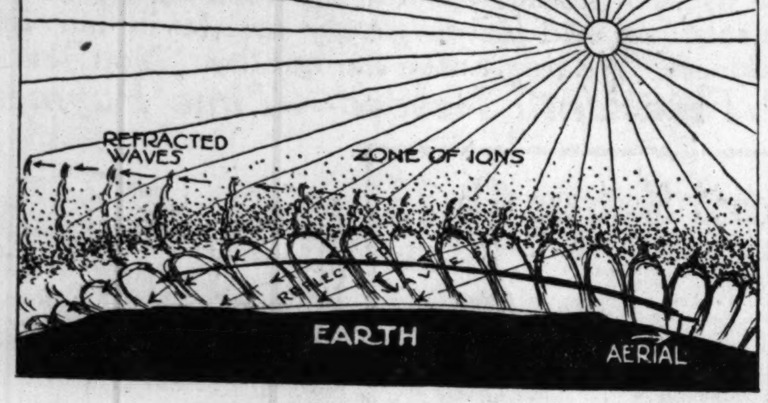
RADIO

SUNSHINE HAMPERS RADIO.

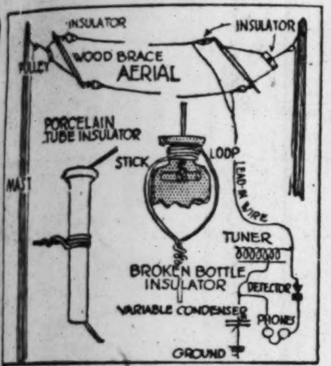
RADIO messages do not carry well by day. There is something in sunshine that bars their passage. Night sending will carry two or three times as far as daylight sending. As much transmitting and broadcasting as possible is done after dark for this reason. "But why should sunshine have such a deleterious effect on radio waves, when the two are the same nature, and travel on the same ether at the same rate of speed?" you ask. The answer to this puzzling affair lies as much in the realm of astronomy as in electricity.

Radio waves, such as are caught on an aerial-ground receiving set, never get far from the surface of the earth. They are created by an interplay of electrical forces between the aerial and the solid earth immediately beneath. This same interplay follows them throughout their flight. They travel with their feet on the ground, hugging the earth. If the conducting power of the air is changed, the ether waves are distorted.

Sunlight contains a great deal more than light and heat. It carries actual electrons. Streams of them are born along by the light waves, exactly like driftwood is carried before waves on water. Comets' tails are made of electrons driven backward from the comet by the light beams. On the sun itself light from deep in the photosphere pours up through an outer shell of chromospheric gases, tearing loose atoms and ions in its way, to be carried outward on the light beams.



Ions Deflect the Radio Waves.



Insulating the Aerial.

Electrons are conductors of electricity. The daylight side of the earth is constantly bombarded with myriads of them, pouring down on us in a fine electromagnetic rain. The air resists them. As they enter it they ionize its gases and transfer their charges to it. This charge renders the upper air a better conductor than it would otherwise be.

When radio pulses are transmitted in the daytime they are forced to travel with their upper edges in contact with a good conductor. A portion of the wave is refracted away and leaves the earth, never to return. Another portion, impinging on the zone of electrons below the refracting angle, is reflected downward into the ground. What is left constitutes the message.

The ions in the upper air are dissipated shortly after sunset. At night no conductor lies above the waves; the total play is then solely between earth and ether, and so the waves fly farther.

You will find it easy to make an aerial. Almost any sort of a metallic frame will serve if you insulate it. An iron bed, for example, will make an aerial. Set the four posts in glass tumblers and solder lead-in wires to two opposite corners. Bed springs will also work.

Sometimes an aerial is made by running a strand of wire around a room behind picture molding or under the base board. Ordinary brick walls, woodwork, and even the insulating on the wire itself are perfectly transparent to the radio waves.

If you want a good aerial out of doors you can make one as follows: Select two broomsticks of equal length. Fasten porcelain or glass insulators to their ends and stretch wires between. This is the aerial. You can hang it between two posts or chimneys, putting insulators in the stays that hold it up. If you want an extra neat job you can put tightening buckles in the wires to stretch them taut. Some people object to wireless aerials as unsightly. There is no need for this. An aerial can be drawn so it hums in the wind without the slightest injury.

Solder your lead-in wires to the wires of the aerial and run them together somewhere before they reach the tuning coil. Make sure that neither the lead-in nor the aerial wires come in contact with any conducting substances. An aerial hung where moisture can condense on it should be constantly grounded when not in use to keep static charges from the air from forming on it. An indoor aerial, of course, needs no such protection.

THE FACE OF A GIANT ROACH.

HERE is the face of a giant roach. Notice his large compound eyes on either side and the three simple eyes in the middle of his forehead.

A roach's feelers, or antennæ, are extremely long. On the scale of this fellow's face they would be longer than the page is deep. Antennæ are organs of smell. Smelling is believing to a roach.

Cockroaches are among the most ancient of insects, and they also rank high in intelligence. I have on numerous occasions seen roaches out on a pot handle, broomstick, or other projection, debating the advisability of jumping down. As roaches' vision is exceedingly near sighted, such a leap means a spring into the unknown. They teeter up and down on their six legs, vacillating between bravery and timidity, for all the world like a small boy on the end of a high diving board.

MAN

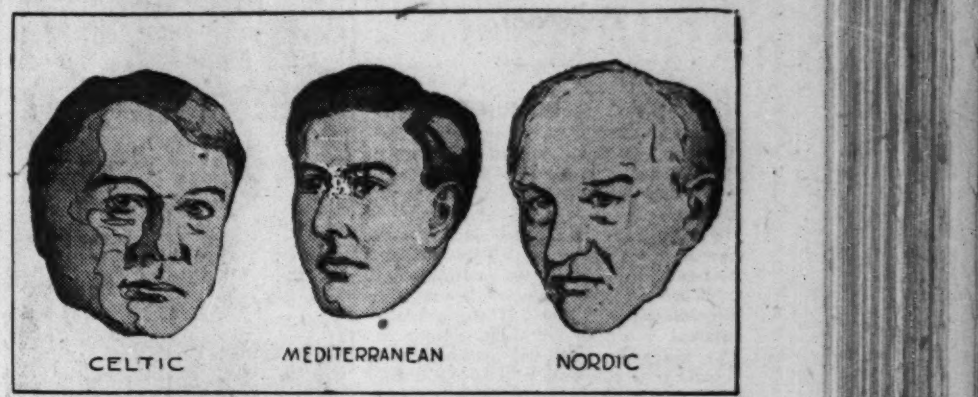
THE MEN WHO MAKE ENGLAND.

A PREHISTORIC invasion was in progress in Britain when history dawned. Julius Cæsar, crossing over in 55 B. C., found the land in possession of the Britons. These were a people often huge of body, with blue eyes and tawny hair, closely allied to the Gauls of what is now France. The Celtic folk claimed ownership of all the islands, but they were being hard pressed by the Celto-Nordic Belgae of the mainland, who had already gained a foothold when the Romans came. The Belgae were the forerunners of the later pure Nordic waves of Angles, Saxons, Jutes, Danes, and Normans.

The Romans subjugated the Celts. Their occupation stopped the Nordics for a time, damming them back for the day when they would burst Rome asunder. In the course of administration they discovered submerged peoples in Britain, peoples whom the Celts themselves had overridden. Among these latter were small dark men of distinctly Mediterranean affinities.

The Celtic Britons had no sagas or traditions, such as the Anglo-Saxons have, of a time when they dwelt on the continent. For all they knew they had always inhabited the islands. But modern anthropology reveals at least two waves of Celts which swept over the older inhabitants. Moreover, the Iberianlike Semites had not found the land tenantless when they came. Cromagnon people, whose direct descendants are alive today, were there before the Semites, and before these in turn were remnants of the Neanderthals.

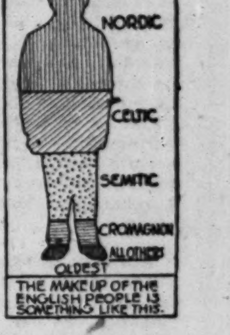
The present British population is one of layers. The last comers were the Normans. Many present aristocrats and high officers are of Norman descent. Below them and forming a large part of the nation are the descendants of people who came from Schleswig-Holstein, Hanover, Jutland, and Friesland. The Nordic Anglo-Saxons in Britain have never been more than nominally subjugated, even by their near relatives, the Normans. This is not true of the Celts. Neither Celtic speech nor Celtic identity seems able to stand against the aggression of Nordics. The first is crowded out of existence and the latter is swallowed by the Nordic crowd. The Celts of Britain were fused and incorporated in the English nation long before the Normans came, and realized only vaguely, if at all, that they were of a different type.



Types of Englishmen.

Celts are common among Britishers today. They are stocky and rotund, with squarish heads and vertical profiles to their faces. The caricature of John Bull portrays a Celt.

The Semitic people of England have been under the millstone for thirty centuries. Their language is obliterated, their identity is lost, only their physical being persists. Small, dark men occur in many out of the way places. They are related to the people of Spain, and are totally alien to the Aryan Cromagnons who preceded them and the Aryan Celts and Nordics who followed after.

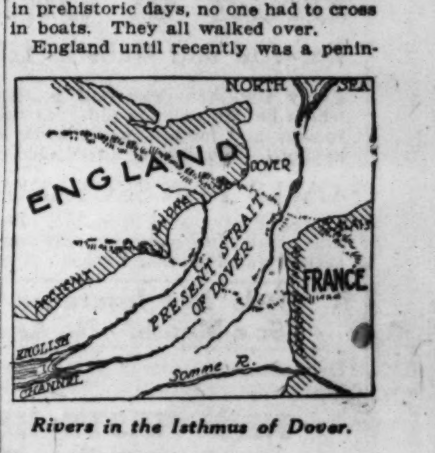


THE MAKE UP OF THE ENGLISH PEOPLE IS SOMETHING LIKE THIS.

Race and type are exceedingly persistent things. Human molds are difficult to destroy. We all draw our minds and bodies from some few of our ancestors. The Semitic men of Britain have been surrounded by foreign ethnic stocks since Neolithic times. They have lent their features to their neighbors to some extent, and have absorbed an occasional light eye or blond head, but generally speaking they are the same people now in mind, body, ambitions, and outlook as they were in the days when metals were unknown.

How did the ancient inhabitants reach the islands? The Celt is distinctly a landsman who shuns adventures on the open sea. The Semite, in spite of his seafaring relatives in the east, seems equally terrestrial. The truth is, in prehistoric days, no one had to cross in boats. They all walked over.

England until recently was a peninsula, a farther extension of France, connected by the Isthmus of Dover. All of England is sinking, rapidly indeed, in a geological sense. Buildings that were erected by the seashore as late as Danish time are now in the water, with the waves dashing over their ruined walls. Four thousand years B. C. the English channel was an estuary, with the Somme and Seine rivers running down it. A ridge of land extended from Dover to Calais. Soundings over the bottom of the channel reveal submerged stream and lake beds, while the cliffs on either coast are the stubs of land where the waves cut through.



Rivers in the Isthmus of Dover.

The Celts, the last prehistoric comers, crossed just as the lands parted. Today France has a preponderance of Alpine population, while England, within eyesight of her shore, has no Alpine at all. The islands remained isolated thousands of years and were subjected to no further inundation until the seafaring northern folk swarmed down.

GEOLOGY

DROPS OF WATER.

GRAIN by grain! Are you impatient that your wishes are not being realized fast enough? Then consider the rocks. Are your hopes long deferred and your reward seemingly beyond the reach of effort? Then remember the stream that cut this mighty cañon, not by bites as big as a dynamite blast but pebble by pebble and grain by grain.

The whole massif of our western states is rising. In fairly recent geological times all the mountains of these parts were lower than they are at present—the Rockies were a range of rolling hills and the sea extended over much of California and Nevada in shallows and gulfs.

A giant, Vulcan, sleeps beneath these rocks. At times he moves and cities rock with earthquakes. He breathes and mountains pour out smoke and gas Mount Lassen was the last. Mount Shasta, Mount Hood, and Mount Ranier in the north showed signs of fires not many centuries ago, while the San Francisco peaks in Arizona still bear hard beds of uneroded lava, sharp as glass. The giant's back is slowly arching, carrying whole states upward to a great plateau.

A mountain is against the scheme of nature. No sooner does it rear is hulk than the elements of wind, rain, and frost attack it, to cut it down. The forces are in balance. The eastern Appalachians would be a mightier mass than all the Himalayas if they were intact. Stumps of strata project from the ground like knife edges, with trees growing and rain pattering triumphantly on top. They are still rising, but water cuts them faster than they rise.

This is not so in the west. The jagged, naked peaks, the sloping lines of talus at the foot of every precipice, rapids and canyons in all the streams, all these denote the upward push is greater than the downward grind. The mountains rear against the force of air and water and seem supreme.

But water is all-patient. Grain by grain, mote by mote, if need be, it eats Each winter loosens a patter of pebbles, the spring rains wash them into the stream beds—an insatiable gizzard, ever grinding. There is no rock so hard that water cannot cut it. There is no height so enduring that weather cannot level it. Water does not attack the whole at once, but conquers grain by grain.

The land of southern Utah, where the great Rainbow Natural Bridge is found, consists of a flat tableland, deeply carved with cañons. As the land rose here the streams all felt the urge to cut. The rubble on their bottoms was their tool. They ground and scoured grooves, and from grooves they cut cañons. At Rainbow Bridge a brooklet found a crack down through a lower strata. With joy it gurgled in, carrying its tools. It splashed and swirled through the dark passages, and at every turn it hurled its cutters against the restraining walls. It ate itself a hole to flow in. No little cave sufficed. It cut a gallery. Then streams above sensed that the ground was hollowed out beneath them. Drops came seeping through the roof. They came singly, by trickles, and by torrents, dissolving and eroding as they ran.

The surface water broke the cave roof in. The story is almost told. Rainbow bridge, 309 feet high and 279 feet in span, is a remnant of the roof. Some freak of chance left it standing all alone. Its magnitude denotes the gallery worn by the stream in the foreground of the picture.

If you are ever in Gallup, N. M., or Flagstaff, Ariz., you must try to see this wonder.

Through the MICROSCOPE

RIVAL HYDRAS QUARREL.

THE sea nettle, or jelly fish, is an ugly animal to brush against. He is not so large as to excite us to suspicion, and his substance is of about the consistency of soft gelatin dessert, but his tentacles would do credit to a whole bed of nettle plants. A jelly fish, floating bell down in the water, weakly opening and closing its body rim, with long, threadlike streamers trailing out below, conveys little notion of a thousand and one stings. Sometimes when the wind blows in from the sea and the water is calm, these creatures form a windrow at the water's edge. At such times bathers who are wise will either take a flying jump across them or else go around. Human skin that has been in contact with such a crowd soon bears a multitude of stinging red prickles, each where a poisoned harpoon has sunk in.

Many animals possess unique and singularly effective weapons of offense. The Coelenterates, as the jelly fish family is called, have barbed darts on coiled springs, all set and aimed to maim and stab. The tentacles are covered with coiled daggers, and each lancet is furnished with a trigger. Let anything touch a tentacle, the darts spring out and impale the prey. The same poison which stings a person numbs and paralyzes a little animal. After rendering a victim helpless, the arms lay hold, the jelly fish draws it in and eats it.

One does not need to visit the seashore to see these dragons of the deep. The little world is full of them. They have near relatives on almost every puddle.

On a stem lurking in the shadows beneath the water a hydra lies in wait. A circle of tentacles radiates from his mouth, after the manner of an octopus, armed and spread for prey.

Hydras are always hungry. They get their name from a multiheaded monster of mythology, but man was lacking in imagination when he created their namesake. A hydra's appetite, vitality, and ferocity are all out of proportion to its size. You would be surprised to see so much determination confined in one short quarter of an inch of animal.

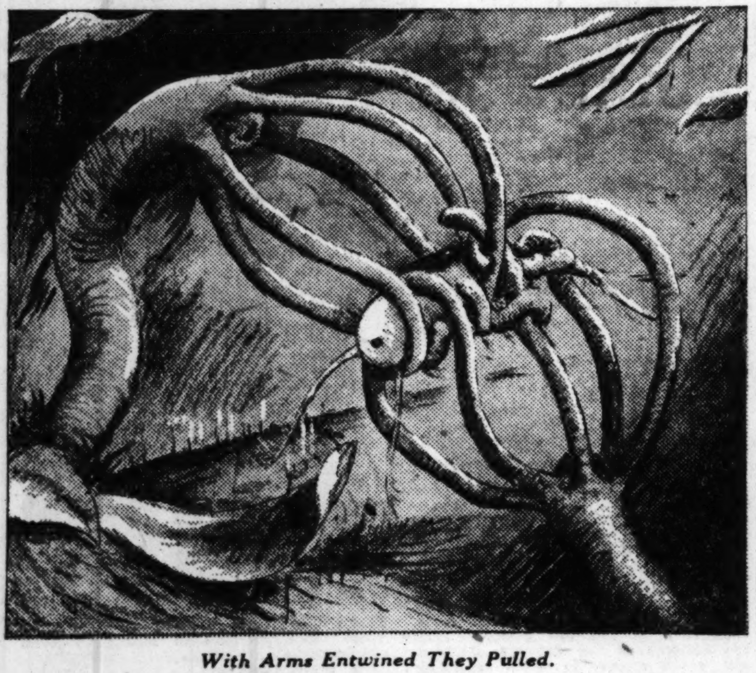
Other hydras are nearby. The stems swarm with them, each one selfishly seeking for himself.

A cyclops, a little one eyed crustacean, comes swimming by. She jerks along with tail and antennæ, totally unconscious of her danger. As she passes, her body brushes a hydra's arm. Instantly the harpoons leap out and pierce her.

She struggles frantically. Her form writhes with pain when other talons reach for her. Lashing in the polyp's grasp she touches a nearby hydra. Instantly one of its tentacles is also fastened to her body, stinging her. Venom paralyzes her. She ceases to move. The two hydras throw their arms about her. There is no sense of property or mine and thine in the little world. Might makes right to the uttermost sense.

Each hydra lays hold with all its strength. Their feet take a better grip on the stem; the two begin a furious tug of war. They do not toss and thrash. The fight hardly creates a ripple in the water. Great trials are seldom spectacular to a glance. Aching muscles and determined wills are not often showy. Will is here, and strength. Neither hydra will give up. Each shortens its tentacles and draws its mouth up to the prey. They pull with a slow, nerve straining tenacity, hour after hour.

It is evening before the decision comes. The original captor is a little the weaker of the two. Perhaps he has not eaten quite so recently, or is not so old. Little by little the robber hydra's tentacles outpull him, tear his grip loose from the cyclops and his stings out by their roots. The prey, long past all suffering, changes masters and slips bodily down the victor hydra's throat.



With Arms Entwined They Pulled.

PREVENTING NAIL SPLITS.

Whenever you drive a nail into wood that shows a tendency to split you should use soap. Thrust the nail into the bar before attempting to drive it. The soap acts as a lubricant and reduces cracks and splits by three-quarters.

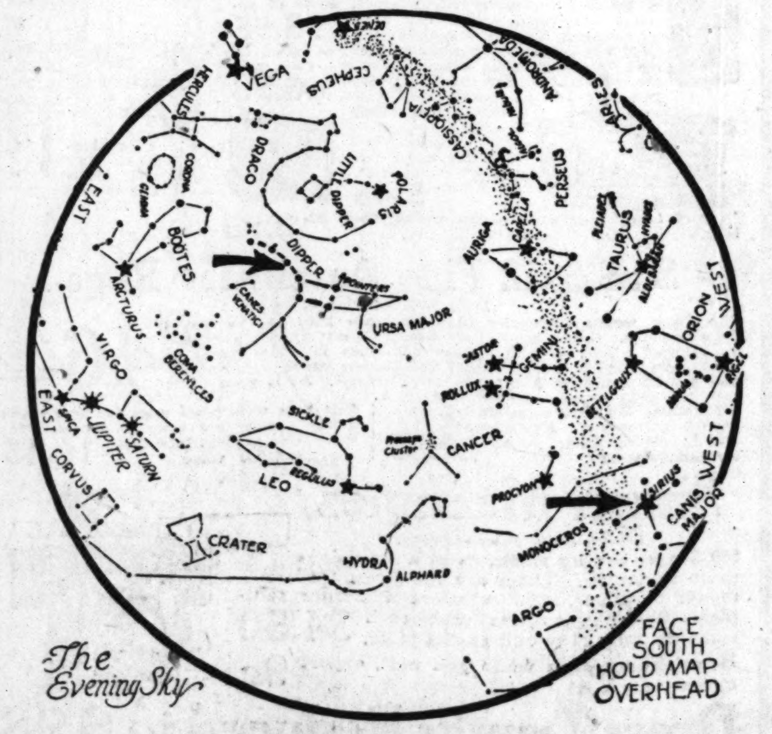
ASTRONOMY

MAN'S PLACE IN NATURE.

SCIENCE is comparison. Its mission is to give us standards whereby we can measure ourselves with our surroundings, to learn our true place in nature. Some men puff with empty egoism at their own seeming importance, while others bow in uncomprehending humility at forces vast to their conceptions. Science warns of both extremes. Man is not almighty; neither is he a dust grain, too contemptible to notice. There is a middle way for all of us to travel. Science offers us a mirror wherein we may behold ourselves exactly as we are.

How big a place is the earth? There was once a time when the whole world of civilized man seemed to center about the Mediterranean sea. A most daring philosopher of that time supposed that the sun might be large, exceedingly large, in fact, as broad perhaps as the Pelopennesus peninsula of Greece, or some 135 miles across.

What if he could have stood with us within the vapors of the sun, where the gases about us were seven times as hot as a blast furnace. Waves of fire would be surging and tossing below us like billows on the sea, and their heights from crest to trough would be greater than the whole continent of Europe. Looking up through the violet sky he could have beheld the earth, just a brilliant looking star. To naked eyes it would have had no shape. Its diameter would have been below the limit of vision, and if he had wished to see an object the size of the Mediterranean upon it, or the United States, he would have needed a telescope and a strong one at that. And the distance that our little planet lies from the sun would not be a few stadia, as he thought, but ninety-two thousand thousands of miles.



In the days when almost any sort of a guess might be believed, it was supposed the world was about 4,000 years old. The estimate was in the right direction. Every one admitted even then that our habitation had been in existence a long time, but man still felt too important. The revelations of science as to the age of the earth are as spectacular as the discoveries of its true size. Four thousand years ago the people of the earth were little different from what they are today. There were no electric light, automobiles, or telephones then, but morality, justice, art, and hope were no different from what they are now. Five thousand years ago a great civilization flourished on the island of Crete. Eight thousand years ago Egypt was a civilized country, 10,000 years ago Asia had brilliant cultures, and 16,000 years ago Cromagnon artists were carving in bone and painting on the rocks. Enormous ages elapsed before man came on the scene at all. Conservative estimates place the Cambrian times at 20,000,000 years ago, and at that time the human animal was more than two-thirds evolved!

Look up in the sky tonight. If the weather is favorable take a chair out of doors, wrap up in a blanket, and sit down, facing the south. The brilliant star Sirius will be sinking toward the southwest, while high up over your left shoulder the dipper shines.

Sirius and the Dipper are connected. Five stars of the latter are joined to Sirius. They are members of the same family of suns, created from the same nebula at the same epoch, of equal ages, and are running in parallel paths to a common end. Yet they are total strangers to each other. No star of them knows its brother stars. They seem as distant and foreign to each other as any other of the countless clouds which teem the heavens. The Sirius-Dipper cluster is so vast that light requires about thirteen years to go from one side of it to the other. The light distance from here to the sun is eight minutes and eight seconds. These stars have been in existence long enough for all the nebula between to condense, and yet they appear to hardly have begun their lives. The sun is a much older star. It is yellow, while they are blue. The sun does not appear to have varied its heat perceptibly in the total geological history of the earth. The twenty millions years back to the Cambrian time is but a day in the account of time, and the earth's history is only the episode of one small planet about the sun.

Now turn to the microscope. I could show you little cells whose total span of life is contained in the space of forty minutes. There is a world below our vision of as great an extent as that of the sky above. Man stands midway between two infinities. Science seeks to teach him of them.

WEATHER VANES.

A weather vane should be made of metal, preferably of brass, bronze or copper, as these substances are cheap and do not rust. There should be two vanes, separated by an angle of about 22 degrees. It has been found that the double vaned form was more responsive to slight changes in the direction of the wind than the single vaned form.

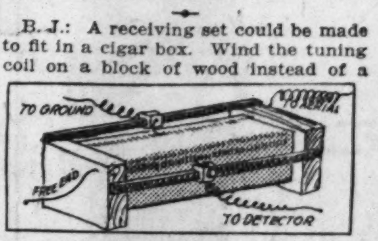
Questions and Answers

T. R. JR.: I thank you for your interesting criticism of my article on the Semites. I have read Prof. Sergi's works. His facts cannot be denied, but his conclusions in many cases exceed his information, I believe.

I would impress upon you that the principle ethnic difference between Semite and Hamite is one of language! I am not unmindful of the achievements of Hamitic peoples, even though I did not mention them specifically in my story. I cannot, however, see any valid reason for considering them as distinct men from the Semitic race.

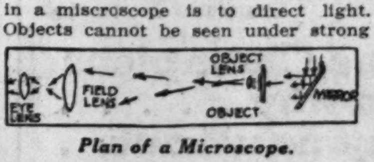
You say you are a Hamite. If you will send me your picture I will try to classify you in an anthropological sense.

B. J.: A receiving set could be made to fit in a cigar box. Wind the tuning coil on a block of wood instead of a cylinder. The other pieces do not take up much room.



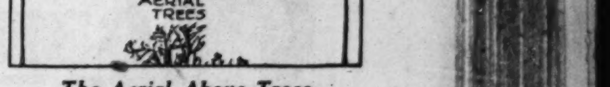
A Square Tuner.

G. D. D.: The function of a mirror in a miscroscope is to direct light. Objects cannot be seen under strong magnification unless they are well lighted.



Plan of a Microscope.

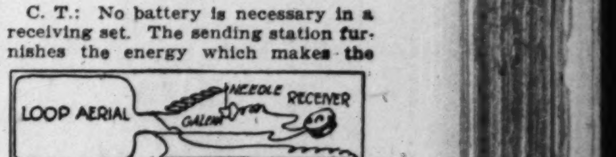
H. J. S.: You may hang your aerial 20 feet from the ground if you wish.



The Aerial Above Trees

It should be high enough to clear all conducting objects.

C. T.: No battery is necessary in a receiving set. The sending station furnishes the energy which makes the sounds in your receiver. If batteries are employed they are only for energizing certain parts, and have no bearing on the general scheme of receiving.



The Simplest Receiver.

H. A. A.: Air presses with a force of about fifteen pounds per square inch on all surfaces at sea level. It presses less than this at heights and in time of storm.

C. W.: A 75 ohm telephone receiver is not sensitive enough for wireless work. You can wind a radio receiver if you have great patience and skill, but it is a man's job.

O. F. D.: The Eocene age is still going on in Australia, with the modern upon it. Africa is mostly in the Pliocene, while the Arctic regions are in the Pleistocene.

H. I. D.: Chemical energy is employed in psychic as well as physiological actions. So far as I know, this is the only energy entering into the running of the human body.

Central Illinois Prepares to Oil Secondary Roads

Price Drop Aids Counties in New $5,000,000 Program.

BY E. E. PIERSON.

BLOOMINGTON, Ill.—[Special.]—Illinois may expend more than $5,000,000 this year for road oil. The advance quotations show that the price will range around 5 cents per gallon, a marked decline over the figures last year. This county, McLean, leads with an estimate of 2,500,000 gallons, which will cost approximately $125,000. If the average amount required by each county of the state is 1,000,000 gallons, this means that more than 100,000,000 gallons will be consumed in Illinois, more than any other state in the Union.

While this state has been backward in the construction of hard roads, it has been a leader in the use of oil, and the quantity of the fluid applied has annually increased until it promises to reach the enormous total estimated for the coming year. Based upon the average of 20,000 gallons per tank car, it will require 5,000 cars to take care of Illinois' requirements, totalling 100 trains of fifty cars each. Many thousands of dollars have been saved for the townships and counties by the adoption of the pooling system of purchasing oil. This was brought about by a meeting of all county superintendents of highways last fall and a state association organized, the primary object being to coöperate in oil purchase and general improvement of roads.

Not only was there a uniform price of five cents offered the organization but each township was tendered a discount of one per cent for cash within ten days. It is expected that all will take advantage of this discount. In the case of McLean county, it will be compulsory for each township to take advantage of the lowest rate as the superintendent of highways has announced that he will not approve any contract let at a figure higher than that obtained by the pool. It has developed that in some townships of central Illinois the highway commissioners have ignored the pooling system and made individual purchases at six or seven cents. The precipitate townships paid $600 or more per car for oil that can be bought by the pool for $495 and, it is related, the advance purchasers failed to secure the discount for cash which goes to those who bought in the pool.

Bids for the state pool were opened by Frank Sheets, state superintendent of highways. The bidders all agreed to give the townships and counties the benefit of any reduction in railroad shipping rates that might be authorized before the oil is delivered. There has been an agitation for such a reduction which would reduce the cost per car to $467.

An advantage enjoyed by the counties participating in the pool is the test by an expert of the state department of all shipments as they leave the refinery. This avoids delay in unloading and also saves demurrage upon cars in waiting until the tests have been made after delivery. Not infrequently in the past road oil, spread without a test, was found to be of poor quality, thus wasting the money of the taxpayers. This will all be changed by the pooling system. No oil will be distributed that does not come up to the specifications as approved by the state. All that fails to show the required asphaltic quality will be refused.

It is estimated that the annual cost of road oiling with a single spread of oil is $150 per mile and $200 for a double spreading. As laterals leading to the trunk line system of hard roads now under construction, the oiled roads will prove invaluable in taking care of traffic contiguous to the main arteries of travel with concrete surfacing. It should also be considered that the oil treatment is improved with each succeeding year, not only giving the surface a hard, smooth finish, but also turning the water and avoiding the mire that follows with each hard rain where the oil application was not given.

REDUCE INCOMES.

An automobile owner, when paying his income tax, may deduct from the gross income the amount paid for state license fee. He also may deduct the tax on gasoline, which is now imposed in a number of states in the union. The cost of a new car and fines paid for violation while the car is being driven for pleasure purposes are not deductible items.

KNICKERING

Now that milady drives her own car in all sorts of weather and over all kinds of roads, the knickerbocker suit is "the berries," as this young woman believes.

MOTORDOM

'Old Guard' Arms to Rout Politics from State Roads

Founders of Highway Plan Honor Former State Chief.

BY J. L. JENKINS.

THE "old guard" of Illinois' good roads army declared war last week on all attempts to drag partisan politics into the state's highway improvement plans. A half hundred veterans of the first highway battles, the $60,000,000 bond issue campaign and location fight for the state's 5,000 mile pavement system, meeting in the Chicago Athletic club, voted unanimously against disbanding the powerful Illinois Highway Improvement association. They declared there "is yet vital work to be done," and pledged themselves to oppose all political interference with Illinois highway plans.

The defi, tacitly understood to be directed against highway construction methods of the Small administration, was sounded at a joint meeting of the association and Associated Good Roads Organizations of Cook County, called to honor Samuel E. Bradt, former superintendent of state highways and "father of Illinois roads."

Col. W. G. Edens presided at the banquet and meeting and was supported, among others, by Judge Adam Cliff, Senator Willis Cornwell, A. D. Gash, Frank I. Bennett, former Gov. Dunne, William E. Hull of Peoria, and County Commissioners G. H. Miller and William Busse.

"This veteran association, made up of founders of the Illinois highway program and men who have worked night and day for more than ten years to bring a realization of the state's good road dreams, is needed now as seldom before," declared Senator John Dailey. "If any efforts are made to bring the vital Illinois good roads program into dirty, partisan politics, the weight of public opinion should forestall them. If public opinion is not strong enough, this organization is, and it should be ready and willing to fight for the best interests of people in the state."

"There has been some talk of disbanding this roads association," said Senator C. F. Buck, after giving a brief history of the campaign leading up to the road bond issue victory in 1918. "Disbandment is certainly not advisable at this time. There is still work to be done. Roads of Illinois must be built without regard to political delays and interference, and highway interests must be protected."

Men attending the meeting were emphatic in condemning Gov. Small's latest "wielding of the highway club to secure the election of picked lgislators" this spring. They quoted the governor's speeches made at Pana, La Salle, and other cities where road location meetings have been called by the state highway department. In each of the speeches the executive has promised roads to the district under condition that he receives support in spring elections. Sveral declared that road building has been so deeply entangled with politics now that a house cleaning will be necessary.

More than a dozen of the men present had attended the original good roads meeting in the Sherman hotel ten years ago, when the plan of building a state highway system was first broached. They told of the fight to overcome the first opposition of Illinois farmers against spending money for improvement and how, one by one, civic, industrial, and agricultural organizations all over the state had been won over to the highway army until today state and national highway transportation is one of the most important economic issues.

The speakers all paid tribute to S. E. Bradt, giving him the lion's share of credit for building the 1,500 miles of connected, paved roads now in operation and for locating all highways of the Illinois state system. All plans for roads built by federal aid and under the bond issue were drawn up under his direction, and the Illinois highway department was made a national leader in the road campaign.

The former executive was presented with a bound volume carrying the complimentary resolution voted him recently by the Illinois Bankers' association and a medal of honor for services rendered, awarded by the Illinois highway improvement body.

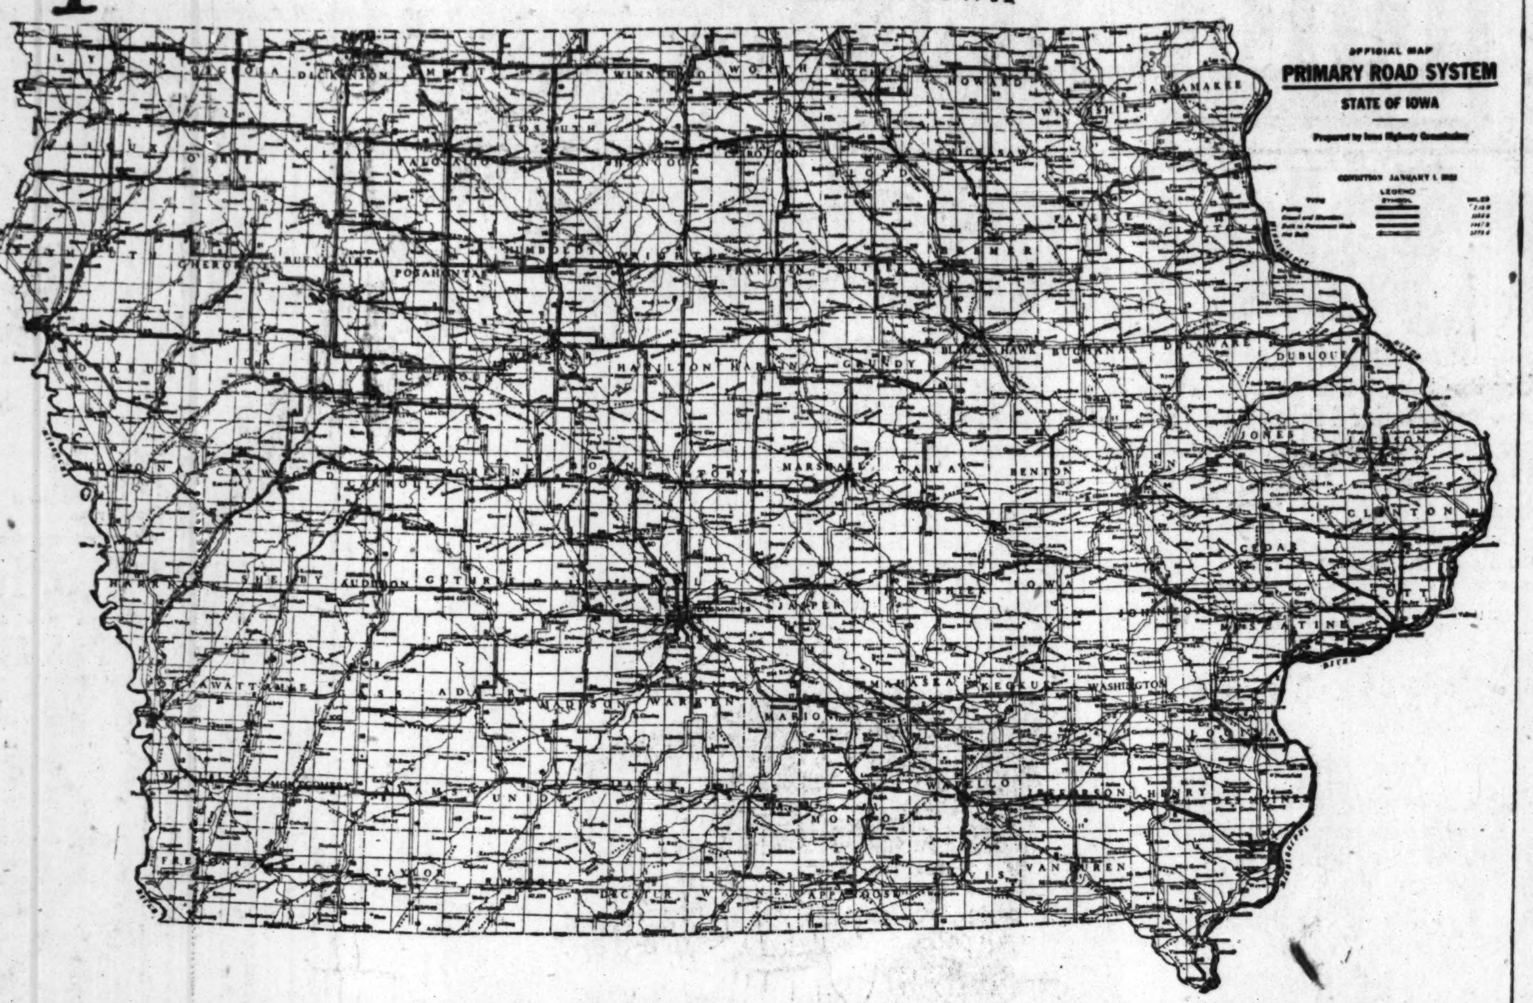
IV. PROGRESS IN IOWA



THE INQUIRING REPORTER

He's Out to Find the Truth About Motordom.

The Question.

What is your favorite spot in the Forest Preserves?

Where Asked.

Corridors of the county building.

The Answers.

John J. Sheehan, 7025 Merrill avenue, clerk—My favorite spot in the Forest Preserves is Riverside. It is a pleasant drive out there and not too distant. Then there are plenty of places to park your auto, if you wish to do so. The Des Plaines river is beautiful through that section, and there is every variety of places for building a fire and having a good time.

Charles M. Conlon, 2839 Princeton avenue, deputy clerk—I like best the spot in Palatine where the ducks land in the little lake. They seem to know they are protected from the stray shots of hunters. This spot is just far enough from the city to make it easy to reach by people who are not able to take an expensive trip.

Gordon Berg, 19 South La Salle street, attorney—I believe the most beautiful spot in the Forest Preserves is either the roadway over the dam on the Des Plaines or the circuitous drive in Camp Reinberg. My wife and I go out there and through there many times during the summer. If you notice carefully you will find that Camp Reinberg has many of the scenic beauties of Estes Park, Colorado.

Fred J. Steuber, 944 Drake avenue, deputy clerk—My favorite section of the forest preserves is the vicinity of Madison street and the Des Plaines river. I have found this to be an ideal spot for recreation. With our city parks so crowded in the summertime and the forest preserves so easy of access by street cars, it is too bad that the general public does not utilize them more.

E. L. Duck, 2702 Harrison street, attorney—Seems to me Palos Park is the choicest section of the entire forest preserves. It would be difficult to find a more interesting drive anywhere than that from Kean avenue to Justice park and on through the Palos preserves. The rolling landscape can't be duplicated anywhere in Cook county. It is also a favorite resort for artists.

GOSSIP OF THE AUTO TRADE

According to Eugene W. Silver, the new president of the Cole Motor company of Illinois, the mystery car which has been running around Chicago streets during the last two weeks is a Cole Aero 8. This car has been carrying an open challenge to all motor cars to surpass it in performance, break test, acceleration, etc. This car, which is a stock model and one of the Cole Motor company's demonstrators, along with other models of the Cole Motor company, can be seen during the company's spring opening this week.

A Cheaper "Loaf."

The mayor of St. Paul made a speech the other night before the automobile dealers' association.

He said there was only one solution for all of our problems and that it did not lie entirely in disarmament, in the adjustment of exchange, or in the indorsement of prohibition. He said that the spirit of the people could only be changed by the necessity of hard work.

"I have been told," he said, "that there are six million men unemployed in this country at the present time. There were a great many more millions unemployed at the peak of prosperity. The only difference is that now they are not getting paid for it."

SAVE THE MAPS

IOWA offers a total of 1,392 miles of surfaced highways at the opening of the heaviest touring season on record, but still admits a pressing need for the essential item in 1922 highway travel—paved roads. But 236 miles of paving, concrete and brick, appear on this latest state highway map, although main routes of the state show 1,156 miles of gravel and macadam surfacing.

Graded and maintained dirt roads make up by far the greater part of Iowa's highly important system and form a barrier in wet weather for the great stream of transcontinental and interstate traffic which annually floods the middle west. In fair weather and after systematic dragging the dirt roads are excellent.

Heavy lines on the accompanying map—fourth in THE TRIBUNE state highway series—indicate paved roads. Heavy base lines indicate gravel and macadam and light lines indicate graded dirt roads. All state roads have been numbered and an excellent signposting system had been completed along the trunk lines.

TOO MANY PLATES.

For the first time on record a Pennsylvania motorist was recently fined $10 and costs in Maryland for carrying too many licenses on his car. The victim, a Philadelphian, does business in Maryland, Delaware, and Pennsylvania, and his car carried the license plates of those three states. According to the Maryland law, only two licenses may be displayed at one time.

MOTORDOM

Gentle Spring Is Paging You from Gasoline Alley

BY HIGH SPEED.

WHETHER your car has been in use all winter or whether it has been jacked up, it will need a certain amount of attention to put it in fit condition to run. The car that has been on jacks will need a generous cleaning, after which all oil compartments should be drained and cleaned and refilled with fresh lubricant.

The gear compounds should be fairly heavy for warm weather work. Grease should be used for spring shackle bolts and other parts provided with suitable cups or pressure nipples. A car that has been jacked up all winter does not deteriorate unless rust has set in, but if you were thoughtful you would have provided against this in the fall by greasing those parts. However, rust is removable by means of kerosene or special rust removers.

All bearings should be repacked with grease. This applies only to chassis bearings, such as those in the wheels and steering knuckle pins.

Brakes should be looked over and the linkages oiled copiously. Lubrication of the entire chassis and slight adjustment here and there are all that really will be needed.

The tires, if they were properly stored, perhaps, have not deteriorated much, but if they were left on the car in a cold garage they undoubtedly will have lost much resiliency, due to hardening of the rubber. There is nothing you can do to them.

A car that has been run all winter must be gone over very thoroughly. The procedure is somewhat the same as for the car in storage except that adjustments will be necessary to greater degree. Water and mud no doubt have done their damage in rusting spring leaves and in covering the underneath parts of the chassis. A good cleaning is therefore essential. The change to different oils likewise is quite necessary.

There is no need to do any more to the engine than remove the oil pan for a good cleaning. Do not try to change oil by simply draining, as this is not effective enough. After the winter you will find a good quantity of water and sediment in the crank case. The gasoline line, vacuum tank, and main tank will call for a good cleaning. Also flush the water system thoroughly. It may be necessary to supply new hose connections.

The ignition and carburetor may need little attention, except perhaps the latter unit, which may take a leaner adjustment for warm weather.

A car that has been driven all winter over rough roads will need more attention to the driving system than anything else. Undoubtedly play has developed in the universals, bevel gears, and other parts, and if the driver is particular he will want this removed.

THOSE TAXES.

Automobile tax fees for a medium sized four cylinder car are as low as $5 annually in some parts of the United States. The same car in England would call for a tax of $62; in Spain, $46; Belgium, $18; France, $124, and Italy, $400.

Behold the Chicken!

"I think if it is possible to educate chickens to caution, it ought to be possible to educate human beings," said George M. Graham, at the highways dinner of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce recently.

"I notice the chicken is becoming cautious. She is learning something and I say 'she' advisedly for I notice that the chicken that gets run over is always a hen.

"The rooster stands in dignified state on the side of the road, and grins tolerantly while the flurried hen tries to cross back and forth in front of the car five times.

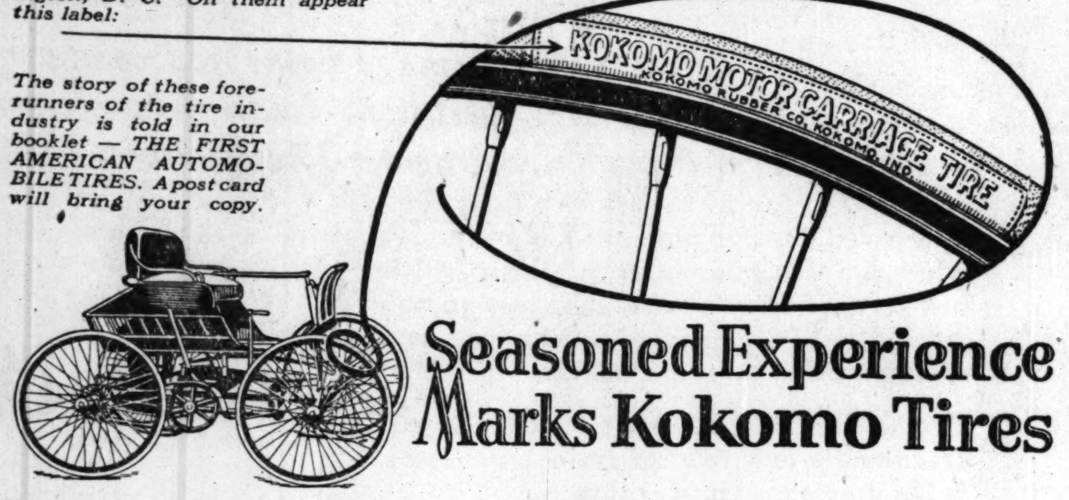
"But some impulse of precaution born of maternal admonition comes to the mind of the hen of today and says, 'It is wisdom to stay on this side and let it go by.'

"Now if hens with their limited modicum of brains can be trained that far in safety, why not also children? It is simply a case of carrying the message to them."

Save Hoosier Cash.

Motorists of Indiana are given something to think about in the assertion that they have been saved the neat little sum of $8,987,777.61 in the past year through the defeat of certain adverse legislation in the Indiana general assembly and in congress.

This saving is declared to have been made principally through work of the Hoosier State Automobile association, and that organization takes credit for this piece of protective work benefiting the owners of Indiana.



The first American pneumatic automobile tires are today in the Smithsonian Institution, Washington, D. C. On them appear this label:

The story of these forerunners of the tire industry is told in our booklet — THE FIRST AMERICAN AUTOMOBILE TIRES. A post card will bring your copy.

Seasoned Experience Marks Kokomo Tires

FOR more than a quarter century the Kokomo Rubber Company has persistently stuck to its job of building better-than-usual tires and tubes. In this time it has accumulated a fund of skill and experience which expresses itself in the longer life, the added resilience and the outstanding appearance of Kokomo tires. The same seasoned tire building experience accounts for such developments as the Kokomo Twin-grip tread which unites in one design the advantages of ribbed and non-skid tires. With many motor car owners Kokomo tires are favorites of long standing.

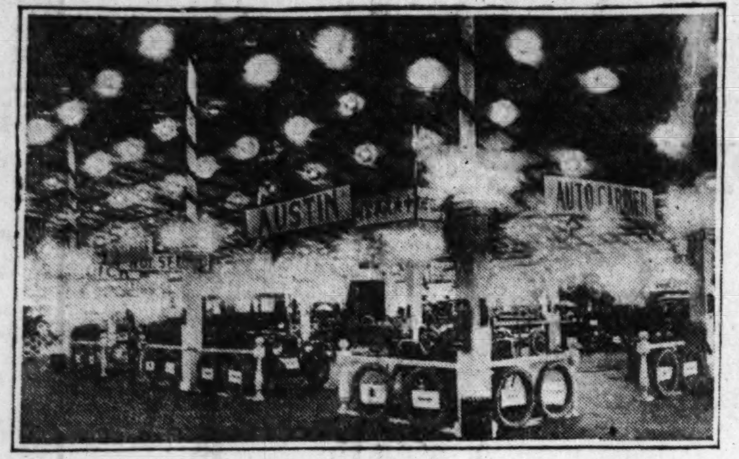
Club Says Tour to Pacific Is Smooth Sailing

REPORTS to the effect that motorists fairly take their lives in their hands to attempt a trip across the continent by auto to California are vigorously refuted by the touring bureaus of the Automobile Club of Southern California.

Motorists are warned by the false reports to beware of the great western open spaces, which perhaps means the deserts, as they are dangerous. There is no danger in crossing the desert by auto, says the auto club. Southern California is as readily accessible by motor car as any other point in America, and much more so because the highways leading to this section are officially sign posted. The National Old Trails route westward is in good shape, and a motorist can make the trip in approximately twenty-one days, allowing some time for sightseeing; and the tour from the Atlantic to the Pacific can be made at a cost of $5 per person per day. This includes everything except tire cost and unforeseen accidents.

Certain precautions to all transcontinental travelers are issued at present, however, these including advice to have the gasoline tank full and always carry plenty of water in the radiator.

CHINA'S FIRST SHOW



Motor car builders of America, England, France, Germany, and Italy combined to make China's first automobile show, held in Shanghai, a big success. A monster building of bamboo was erected and decorated for the exhibition.

[Photo from Kadel & Herbert.]

Always New Frontiers.

Fred Caley, who for years has conducted the Cleveland automobile show, has gone to Mexico City to set up competition for the bull fighting business. Mexico is going to have an automobile show.

After every previous war in the history of the world some new frontier has been offered to the adventurous spirits who return restless from the battle fields. Some think that Mexico is the new frontier.

Railroad and motor transportation will break down the boundaries and promote education and progress more rapidly than any other instruments of civilization.

Newest Chapter.

Direct affiliation between the Chicago Motor club and the American Automobile association was voted by the latter organization at its meeting in New York last week, according to word received by the motor club officials. Heretofore the Chicago Motor club was a member of the Illinois State Automobile association, and through that body a member of the A. A. A.

Reefer's Yeast Tablets—

Most people are undernourished even though they eat ample wholesome food. The modern cooked food diet does not contain the three natural Vitamines so necessary to health. What Will Your Car Be Worth After It Has Run Fifty Thousand Miles?

A definite way to judge value and compute cost of upkeep and operation. Learn how economical it is to own a Marmon—The Foremost Fine Car

When you buy a motor car think of the day when you will want to sell it. What will it be worth, for instance, after it has run 50,000 miles? It will bring you its used car value, minus what it costs to put it in first-class condition.

If renewing is high, your car's value is less. If renewal is low, your car's value is increased. It is a simple matter of arithmetic.

Figure by the year or by mileage, as you choose. The result is the same. You are really buying transportation. Shall it be good or bad, efficient or disappointing?

The way to judge efficiency is to choose the car that spends the least time in the shop. And that means the one which, due to inherent design and finer materials, can be renewed better, quicker and at lower cost.

That requirement is best met by the Marmon, which has established its position as The Foremost Fine Car, the most dependable, the most economical, the least depreciating of all comparable cars. This is based on records kept of thousands of 1920, 1921 and 1922 Marmons throughout the country—some with mileages of 55,000 and up.

This has enabled us to make this revolutionary offer: We will give with each new Marmon of the new series a contract agreeing to completely rebuild the motor at any time necessary, in 55 hours' actual labor. This means that the actual cost to you for labor and materials will not exceed $265. This includes complete replacement of all parts liable to wear, except bearings. We have rebuilt several of the high efficiency motors that have been driven 35,000 to 50,000 miles, and we have not in any single instance found any appreciable wear in the bearings. We believe these bearings will give service from 75,000 to 100,000 miles before it becomes necessary to replace them. On other items we likewise establish minimum costs.

This achievement in establishing definite upkeep costs removes all guess-work. It brings the finest transportation at the lowest cost per mile. It means constant service, wonderful performance.

Just compare a Marmon's constant service, at low cost, and you will be surprised. No comparable car offers the above contract. Usually the cost is double or triple, and it takes a week or two for rebuilding.

Every fact about the Marmon is at your disposal. We can prove every statement above. May we have the opportunity?

MOTORDOM

Complete Circuit of Lake Planned in Annual Tour

Having in the last two years circuited Lake Superior and Lake Michigan on its good roads boosting jaunts, the Michigan Pikes association will circle around Lake Michigan in July. The tour totals 1,729.2 miles and will consume thirteen and one-half days, starting from Detroit on July 7 and finishing there on July 20. Capt. W. S. Gilbreath, president of the M. P. A. and manager of the Detroit Automobile club, announces that during the thirteen and one-half days the association will conduct seventy-seven good roads' meetings in as many cities along the route.

CAPT. W. S. GILBREATH.

Recently the itinerary of the tour is Detroit to Chicago, Milwaukee, Calumet, Mackinaw City, Muskegon, Grand Rapids, and Detroit. On reaching Petoskey on the return trip down the eastern shore of Lake Michigan the tour will be combined with the tour of the West Michigan Pikes association, from that point to Grand Rapids. William H. Loutit, president of the West Michigan Pikes association, has announced thas his organization contemplated a tour from Chicago to Petoskey over the W. M. P. link of the Dixie highway July 14-16, and amalgamating his tour with Capt. Gilbreath's organization for the return trip to Grand Rapids, where the "pikers" will disband on July 19.

The party will probably number 150 to 200 tourists and from thirty to forty cars and trucks. The tourists will not use hotels en route, being housed in barracks, the same plan for sleeping that featured its 1921 tour. Every tourist is furnished with a camp cot, the individual provides the blankets and the sleeping equipment, and baggage is transported by the tour's truck train, under the direction of Capt. Harold Aarons, former M. T. C. officer.

The high spot of the tour will be Calumet, as the tourists will spend forty-eight hours in the copper country, visiting the scenic spots of the Keweenaw peninsula and also going down in the copper mines and inspecting the smelters. While headquarters will be made in Calumet, the tourists will also visit Houghton, Hancock, and Lake Linden. They will reach Chicago at noon on July 9.

The Safety Game.

In 1920 240 people were killed in traffic accidents in Detroit. In 1921 the number was reduced to 134.

Miss Harriet Beard, who inaugurated the system of teaching children traffic regulations in the schools, is in a measure responsible for this. Teaching that cannot be accomplished in any other way can be made interesting to children by the use of games.

Every boy is ready to play the traffic policeman. Some like to be tall buildings. Others want to be the onrushing automobile.

The games are played at certain hours every day. That is why Detroit children are learning to be more cautious in crossing streets.

NOT A TOY.

Children should never be allowed to play around automobiles.

THE VALUE OF CHARCOAL

Few People Know How Useful it is in Preserving Health and Beauty.

Nearly everybody knows that charcoal is the safest and most efficient disinfectant and purifier in nature, but few realize its value when taken into the human system for the same cleansing purpose.

Charcoal is a remedy that the more you take of it the better; it is not a drug at all, but simply absorbs the gases and impurities always present in the stomach and intestines and carries them out of the system.

Charcoal sweetens the breath after smoking, and after eating onions and other odorous vegetables.

Charcoal effectually clears and improves the complexion, it whitens the teeth and further acts as a natural and eminently safe cathartic.

It absorbs the injurious gases which collect in the stomach and bowels; it disinfects the mouth and throat from the poison of catarrh.

All druggists sell charcoal in one form or another, but probably the best charcoal and the most for the money is in

they are composed of the finest powdered Willow charcoal, in tablet form or rather in the form of large, pleasant tasting lozenges, the charcoal being sweetened to be smooth and palatable.

The daily use of these lozenges will soon tell in a much improved condition of the general health, better complexion, sweeter breath and purer blood, and the beauty of it is, that no possible harm can result from their continued use, but on the contrary, great benefit.

Many physicians advise Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges to patients suffering from gas in stomach and bowels, and to clear the complexion and purify the breath, mouth and throat. Charcoal is also believed to greatly benefit the liver. These lozenges cost but thirty cents a box at drug stores, and you get more and better charcoal in Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges than in any of the ordinary charcoal tablets.

Illinois Farmers Let Roads Solve Freight Problem

FARMERS living on hard roads within a hundred miles of Chicago are evading high freight rates by sending their live stock to the Chicago Union stockyards in rubber tired vehicles. The practice is steadily growing with the development of the good roads movement and the auto truck industry.

A report covering shipments and receipts for the last year shows that 51,100 hogs arrived by motor, as compared with 33,100 in 1920. The number of sheep increased from 2,600 to 3,600, and cattle and calves from 9,200 to 9,500 during the same period.

While farmers and dealers brought in a great many of these in their own trucks, the bulk of them was handled by regular haulers with specially equipped stock frames mounted on large motor cars. Frequently a load of feeders is taken back on the return trip.

The trucks are stopped at the main entrance to the yards, their contents counted, and yardage fees collected. Then they are driven direct to the sales pens of a commission man for unloading. The live stock commission houses have helped promote this form of marketing by taking as much pains with a few head as with a full carload.

One load recently arrived at the Chicago yards after a hundred mile trip. It contained sixty head of hogs averaging 225 pounds. The largest number of trucks come from points forty to fifty miles distant. Many farmers

The Remarkable New JORDAN at Astounding New Price

$1795

F. O. B. Cleveland

(Another $300 to $400 Reduction)

A big demand created by public recognition of real value. A purchasing power based upon financial stability. Capacity production ahead of the spring selling season. These have made possible another startling price reduction on the fascinating new Jordan. Quality improved—of course—for that is the Jordan policy.

QUICK public appreciation of real value is an amazing thing. Yet most natural.

Its instant expression is almost magic. Quality at a price always brings immediate demand.

That has again been proved by the record-breaking sales of this fascinating new Jordan.

Jordan reached capacity production in January, February and March—months ahead of the spring selling season.

Overheads have gone down — new prices are possible.

Purchasing power, due to strong financial position made it possible to buy at the lowest point of the recent low market.

Jordan quality at Jordan prices has established the future standard of motor car value.

Jordan knows that we are happily going back to the old fashioned, sincere way of doing business.

The American people have reached the point where they demand that every piece of merchandise be a better piece of merchandise, with a fairer price ticket on it.

And that is the essence of the Jordan policy.

Consider the astounding price of $1795 on a car of Jordan quality.

Compare every detail of the Jordan with any car selling within $1000 of its price. Demand Jordan value. Look for these features. Note these points of quality:

—Exclusive new motor
—Silhouette bodies ahead of the times
—Light weight and perfect road balance
—National economy average 24.1 miles per gallon
—Tire mileage 18,000 to 20,000 miles
—Owners boast of low repair cost
—High second-hand valuation
—Non-rattling lubricated spring shackles
—Spring leaves all Chrome Vanadium steel
—All instruments under glass
—Tools in locked compartment in door
—Snubber equipped
—Cowl ventilator
—Optional colors

—Pride of ownership such as Jordan owners know.

Every man who has been hoping for a motor car like this at a price like this—can stop hoping and act now!

This announcement will positively create an immediate shortage of Jordan cars

FARM AND GARDEN

"Plan to Plant Another Tree," Illinois Slogan

By Frank Ridgway.

"PLAN to Plant Another Tree" is the slogan now being thrown on the screen, written on blackboards, streaming from the sides and backs of automobiles, printed on windows, and heralded from pulpits, lecture platforms, and banquet tables in towns, rural schools, and churches in every corner of Illinois. This is being done in an effort to aid in the reforestation of the Prairie state and to revive interest in the establishment and rejuvenation of farm orchards, and the planting of home grounds in both city and country.

J. A. YOUNG.

No campaign since the floating of Liberty loan bonds has created such wide interest and general support as has this tree planting plan. Civic and agricultural societies and organizations are uniting with the press in supporting this movement to make Illinois more fruitful and beautiful. Ninety-five farm advisers have put all their forces into the harness to make the project a success. Organizations of farmers' institutes in almost every county and hundreds of farmers' clubs are helping. Committees of chambers of commerce in towns all over the state are being appointed to help stimulate interest in planting trees, shrubs, and flowers. Many clubs, including the Kiwanis, Rotary, and Lions, are coöperating by having speakers at their luncheons to present the tree planting plan.

Engaging Children's Help.

Schools are expected to aid by having pupils take a census of the trees in the district or township in which they are located. This is considered an important feature of the movement, because in counting the trees children will become familiar with the different kinds that grow in their part of the state. Teachers and officers from the state and county superintendents to the teachers in the smallest schools, realize the value of this plan, and are whole heartedly supporting it.

The plan has a particular appeal to boy scouts. The whole army in this state is being lined up to back the movement.

Y. M. C. A. organizations, bankers' associations, advertising clubs, Audubon societies, women's clubs, and churches have all recognized the value of encouraging the planting of more trees and shrubbery, and are aiding wherever they can to carry out the plan.

Nurserymen to Give Trees.

An appeal was made several weeks ago to members of the Illinois State Nurserymen's association, which was recognized as being the most logical organization to consolidate the interests of all other clubs, to combine the efforts of all these organizations so that effective work could be done in time to plant this spring. Nurserymen purpose to give a tree to each school in the state to aid in starting the movement with a practical demonstration of how three planting plans may be put into practice. The only requirement is that school children must cast votes to determine the most popular tree for their school. This is done to create interest in tree planting on Arbor day.

Through Francis Blair, state superintendent of schools, various organizations interested in this project are going to urge Gov. Small to fix Friday, April 7, as arbor day this year. This is the best Friday in the month to set trees, tree specialists say. Arbor day has usually been the last part of April, which is rather late for setting trees in this state.

Leaders of the campaign are merely asking clubs to stimulate interest and encourage people to think about their planting in advance—some time in March—and the trees should be set in April.

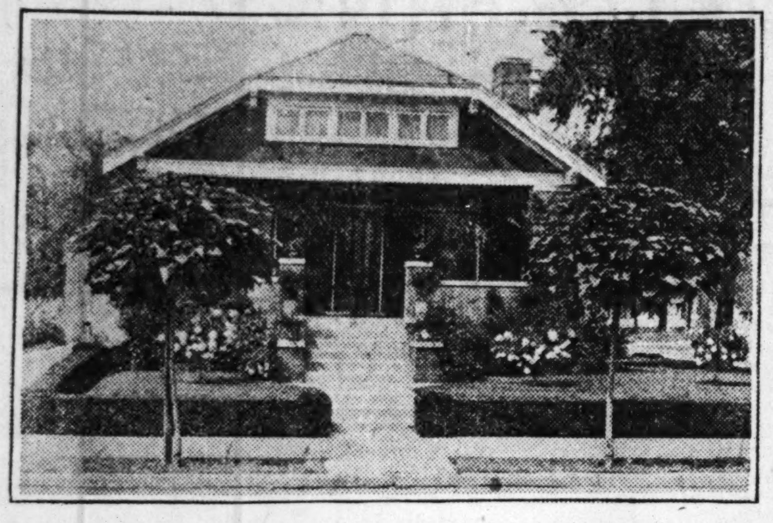
Shortage Is Serious.

In calling attention to the seriousness of the shade tree and fruit tree shortage in this state and the great need for the coöperation of all organizations in bringing about a reforestation of Illinois, A. J. Young, Aurora, head of the planting project, says that practically no effort is being made to replace trees that are cut down by thousands in this state every year. He says you can drive in any direction from Chicago, and find wood lots in which thousands of stumps are left standing, but it is only in rare cases you find young trees set out to replace them.

He predicts that unless trees are planted every season to take the place of those cut down within a comparatively few years this state will be practically destitute of good shade trees. Mr. Young thinks some startling facts would be revealed concerning the rapid disappearance of trees in Illinois if they were recounted every five years.

Advantages of planting trees consist in developing the landscape, bringing to farms insect gathering birds that protect crops, cooling the atmosphere, aiding architecture, and adding value to farm and city property. In fact, there is no quicker way of increasing the value of property than by planting trees and shrubs.

If every person in Illinois would plant a fruit tree it would add 144,117 acres to the state's orchard. Tree planting should not be limited to any single group of people, for there is much of it needed along roadsides, in orchards, home grounds, private and public parks, cemeteries, farm wood lots, wind breaks, and on the grounds around schools and churches and country clubs. Every city has its waste corners that could be made beautiful with a few shrubs and trees.



"PLAN TO PLANT ANOTHER TREE"—This is the way thousands of homes in Illinois will look within a few years as a result of the civic and agricultural organizations' campaign to reforestate the prairie state and make its farm homes and city lawns more fruitful and beautiful.

The statewide project will in many cases be linked up with the soldiers' memorial tree planting scheme that was launched last year by THE TRIBUNE. Clubs and organizations are boosting the particular kind of planting that is needed most in their communities. Many have already started in this spring to encourage memorial tree planting as their part of the tree planting program. This will add many thousands to the state's highway trees.

Dr. J. C. Blair, head of the department of horticulture at the University of Illinois, has had his entire staff at work on plans to aid in making the campaign a success. He says he thinks it an excellent idea.

W. S. Brooks, secretary of the Illinois Horticultural society, says his organization considers the plan O. K., and will support it.

Officers of the Illinois Farmers' institute commend the plan. "It is certainly a creditable effort. There is no question but that Illinois needs more trees and that a movement of this kind will help to make the state a better place in which to live."

Hopes for Its Success.

"The 'Plan to Plant Another Tree' as outlined has the hearty approval of the American Forestry association, and our sincere hopes for its success," writes its officers.

Mayor Charles P. Skinner of Moline says the proposition deserves the support of all municipalities. "Your slogan, 'Plan to Plant Another Tree,' should appeal to every citizen." George Shurtleff, governor of Kiwanis club, Peoria, calls it a splendid movement. A. C. Wilson, state seed analyst at Springfield, says it is a fine idea and "everybody in Illinois ought to be for it."

Russia Wants Corn.

Russia is ordering seed corn from the United States to plant her crop this year. Farmers in Iowa, Nebraska, Wisconsin, Minnesota, and North and South Dakota have been asked to send 360,000 bushels. The order came from the Russian Relief commission through the United States Grain Corporation, according to an announcement of the American Farm Bureau federation.

Sunshine Will Start Field Work Humming

Farmers all over the corn belt are getting ready for the spring rush. For several days they have been scouring their plows, sharpening their shears, and waiting for the ground to dry. Another day or two of sunshine, and things will start humming in the corn fields in southern and central Illinois. In fact, some have already been out turning over sod in a few places.

Frost in the ground disappeared rapidly with the rains, making it possible for work in the fields to start fairly early this year. Oats sowing will probably start in the southern half of the state within a few days.

Recent reports from downstate farmers indicate that soy beans will be substituted for oats in many cases this spring, because most farmers lost money on their oat crop last year. Chinch bugs have become a serious menace to the oat crop in that part of the state. Soy beans will be substituted for both corn and oats in the chinch bug area. Farmers will be able to use the ordinary farm machinery in cultivating and harvesting them.

Plan Now for Grgin and Hay Show in Fall

The grain and hay show has now become a permanent feature of the international live stock exposition. Plans are already being made for the fourth one to be held as a part of the international in December this year. The Chicago Board of Trade is again contributing $10,000 in cash for exhibits of corn, small grains and seeds, hay, legumes, and other field crops.

Boys and girls' clubs will be a special feature of this year's show, according to plans made a few days ago by representatives of the various states of the middle west and Canada who met here at the Union stock yards.

The program for the grain and hay show this fall is of such magnitude that it will surpass any exhibit of its kind in the world.

G. I. Christie and W. Q. Fitch of Purdue university will manage the show.

Meat Consumption Retains War Level

Beef steaks and pork chops would go sky high if the people in this country should suddenly return to normal prewar levels in the consumption of meat. That is the opinion of Prof. M. D. Helser of the animal husbandry department, Iowa State college.

The only factor preventing an acute shortage from becoming evident and operative on the market, he says, is the present low consumption of meat.

Ordinarily the packers would have their cellars full at this time of the year, said Mr. Helser. The government report for February shows the packers' holdings to be much less than they were a year ago. Holdings of frozen beef have been reduced from 119,965,000 to 61,501,000 pounds; there are similar reductions in pork holdings and frozen lamb, partly due to a waning of the latter's popularity.

The government report shows that the per capita consumption of beef in this country has dropped a fraction more than twenty pounds since 1910.

With such conditions prevailing and market prices of live stock advancing, there is a natural tendency among farmers to increase the size of their breeding herds. H. H. Kildee of the Iowa college warns farmers that "feeders and breeders are too apt to rush from one extreme to another." He advises them to be conservative. He considers the step comparatively brief from a shortage to a disastrous surplus, especially with regard to pork production.

Wisconsin Has Bulletin on Winter Care of Bees

Wisconsin university, Madison, Wis., has just issued a bulletin on "Winter Care of Bees in Wisconsin." It will be of particular value to beekeepers in the northern states, who suffer heavy losses every winter. The bulletin, No. 338, sets forth some of the principles that make the successful wintering of bees possible, telling where to keep bees, at what temperature, how to ventilate, when to tuck them away for the winter, and the amount of storage needed by a colony to build up in the spring.

Sewage on the Farm.

If you are interested in installing a sewage system on the farm, write for the free bulletin recently issued by the United States department of agriculture, telling how it may be done successfully. In this bulletin, "Sewage and Sewerage of the Farm Home," No. 1227, the basic principles of sanitation and directions for constructing and operating a sewage system on the farm that will be practical, simple, serviceable, and safe are emphasized.

Checking Hog Cholera.

De Witt county has a scheme of keeping hog cholera under control that might be a good one to try out in other counties and states. The farm adviser of De Witt county says, "I have been talking to veterinarians as fast as I can see them, with regard to organizing rings among farmers to vaccinate a number of herds a day in order to cut the expense. Those with whom I have talked so far are in favor of the plan."

RUSS EAGER TO SEE ECLIPSE

By Don S. Day

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

MOSCOW.—Moscow is again excited, but this excitement is not engendered by the fact that enormous Russian provinces are being depopulated by the famine and neither is it caused by the increasing danger of a breakdown of Russian transportation which will doom additional millions to death. The latest nervous flurry is a proposal to send an astronomical expedition to Australia in order that Russia may, with the rest of the world, reap the incalculable benefits which will result from a close and clear observation of an eclipse of the sun which is scheduled for May and which can best be observed from Australia.

Russian papers state that in view of the extreme importance of viewing this special eclipse a sum of about $100,000 be appropriated for the expenses of the expedition. They report that a group of Russian scientists, headed by the officials of the Pulkov observatory, has applied to the soviet commissariat of education for this money. The collegium of the national commissariat of education has indorsed this request and has taken the matter up with the soviet of people's commissars.

If the appropriation is made the scientists will charter their own ship and sail to the western coast of Australia in April. Among the soviet leaders who propose to enjoy this vacation are Commissar Lunatcharsky, department of education; Commissar Semashko, department of health; Enukidse, Pokrovsky, and representatives of the department of foreign affairs, and other individuals, some of whom will probably represent the third international. The eclipse is declared to be of special importance as it will last from two to three minutes longer than ordinary ones.

Sixty expeditions of various kinds have been financed by the soviet government during the last year.

To retailers who want to sell Ferry's Seeds

For your convenience, Ferry's Seed Service, Inc., has an office at 208 W. Washington Street, Phone Franklin 4437, whenever you need more pure-bred seeds, or wish a new box. If you have never sold Ferry's pure-bred Seeds, now is a good time to start. Like all fine merchandise, they sell easily.

Blood will tell invariably in garden seeds

YOU'VE got to put the best into your garden—above all, the best seeds. You cannot afford to waste your time and labor. And nature gives the planter only one chance a season; don't forget that!

Why take unnecessary chances? Plant only pure-bred seeds. They are worth more than ordinary seeds, for they produce more and better vegetables, or flowers.

The Ferry system of breeding seeds is scientifically accurate. We have been doing it sixty years. Nothing is left to guess-work. Any plant short of perfect is uprooted.

You would prefer a Jersey to a scrub. For similar reasons you would prefer these highly bred seeds—the result of constant testing, comparing, discarding, improving. A Ferry-bred tomato is no more like the pale, watery, tasteless tomato of ordinary breeding than Ferry's sweet corn is like horse corn.

Plan to plant Ferry's Seeds. You can get them "at the store around the corner." Price, 10 cents per paper. Write for Ferry's Seed Annual. It tells how and what to plant—and how to can surplus crops for the winter. Send for this valuable book today.

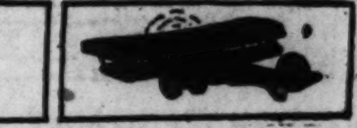
AVIATION



Soaring Club to Be Organized by Schroeder

Gliders to Give Much to Flying.

BY MORROW KRUM.

A DEVOTED follower of Otto Lilienthal, one of the most famous of aviation's forefathers, last week asserted that Chicago should do more with gliders and soaring machines. The man was the already much talked about R. W. Schroeder, after whose name is usually affixed the quotation, "former holder of the world's altitude record."

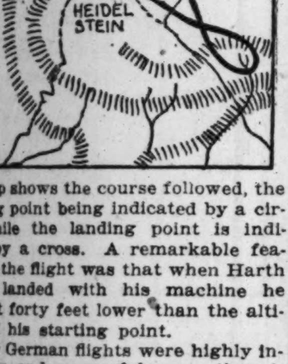
Schroeder, though he has piloted the best and worst of modern airplanes, and though he has sat behind a motor on practically every trip aloft, has seen that progress must be made in soaring before aviators can get the full benefit of their motors. Many of our present day airplanes have reserve power, which means power above the cruising speed, but on most of them the cruising speed is high, say perhaps sixty or seventy miles an hour. At those speeds the motors turn up about 1,100 revolutions a minute with a maximum of between 1,450 to 1.700.

Imagine running an automobile motor at 85 per cent of its top speed all the time. That just about shows the necessity of learning to soar.

So Schroeder proposes to organize a soaring and gliding club. His work should be encouraged.

Informed aviators know that Germany is doing big things in the soaring business.

On Sept. 13, 1921, Herr Harth, a German aeronautical experimenter, flew a motorless soaring machine. He rose without any outside assistance from an absolute standstill to a height of 200 feet, and flew in all directions for 21 minutes 37 seconds. The accompanying map shows the course followed, the starting point being indicated by a circle, while the landing point is indicated by a cross. A remarkable feature of the flight was that when Harth finally landed with his machine he was but forty feet lower than the altitude of his starting point.



Other German flights were highly instructive and successful, even though they did not contain all of the features of Harth's flight. One German got off in his machine from the top of a hill and soared for five miles, but he didn't rise above his starting point, merely executed a flat glide for a long distance.

There is one airplane that has combined to some extent the soaring possibilities with a power plant. It is the Farman sport model. This ship can fly extremely slowly, about fifteen miles an hour, and when the motor is fully opened flies about eighty-five miles an hour. Its advantage is a quick takeoff, a short landing, and long cruising radius with little gasoline consumption.

The commercial airplane of the future will be the ship that carries a great many passengers a long distance and uses only a small amount of fuel. The two passenger airplanes will be used only for sport, war, and unusually speedy trips.

Soaring will help airplanes to carry much weight without much gasoline. Soaring is safe and it's good sport.

To Use Spads.

A number of Spad 13's held in storage at the San Antonio air intermediate depot are being equipped with Wright 180 horse power engines for use of the first pursuit group at Ellington field. These Spads are to be used by the pursuit students as a step up to the MB3, which will be available shortly.

MAJ. G. H. BRETT

Maj. G. H. Brett has invented a float device for land airplanes that will keep them on the surface of a body of water a number of hours. The device was tested out on a De Haviland and found satisfactory.

Airplanes to Cut Atlantic Mail Schedule Soon

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 25.—United States mails will be crossing the Atlantic ocean in three days less than six months hence, according to statements of Admiral W. A. Moffett, chief of naval aeronautics.

"I have taken up the matter with the postoffice department and the shipping board," said the admiral today, "and I believe it is safe for me to predict that the three day schedule will be in operation in the fall."

Cutting in half transatlantic mail time is now possible, he declared, by equipping mail steamships with catapults for launching airplanes and seaplanes from their decks.

"When within airplane range of either coast, east or west bound," said the admiral, "one or more planes would be launched from a mail steamship, and within five hours the mail carried, say 500 miles, over the sea would be ready for distribution in New York or London. This plan for reducing ocean mail communication to three days is sound, and our own successful tests of the catapult prove it is entirely feasible. It will be a great boon to business the world over. The catapult equipment for the ships, the airplanes, and the flying personnel will require only nominal expenditure when compared with the benefits which are bound to accrue in the great saving of time in the delivery of all classes of mail."

The taking off from an alighting of airplanes upon business buildings is another development which Admiral Moffett believes is soon to be put to practical use.

"The necessity for large landing fields no longer exists," he said, "for by the use of the arresting device now operating on our airplane carrier Langley, almost any flat roof can be made a landing field. Similarly, catapults can be installed and airplanes projected into the air with sufficient speed to permit them to get away from even a small roof surface. With catapults and arresting devices so installed, we would do away with the loss of time due to traveling to and from landing fields distant from business centers, as is now the case.

The New York business man leaves his office and the elevator takes him to the platform of the subway running under the building. In the future he will take the elevator to the roof, board an airplanes, and be whisked away without the bother of transfer of baggage from office to station or from office to landing field.

Monmouth Aero Club Will Hold Flying Contests

AN airplane meet that will attract air men from all over America will be held in Monmouth, Ill., during the middle of June by the Aero club of Monmouth in conjunction with the Curtiss Iowa Aircraft corporation.

Edward Stinson, holder of the world's duration record, has sent word that he will attend the meet in an all metal monoplace of the JL-6 type. Reed Landis, Maj. R. W. Schroeder, Capt. John MacReady, holder of the world's altitude record, and many other prominent flyers have accepted invitations.

The meet will be a three day affair of racing, stunt flying, passenger carrying, altitude flying, and parachute jumping. Several unusual aerial thrillers have been put on the program.

Mark Landing Fields.

The ministry of war of Argentina has ordered that on each landing field belonging to the government, a visual signal is to be painted consisting of one, two or three capitals placed in the center of the field. The upper part of these capital letters will face the north. The letters will be painted as if each one was surrounded by the lines of a rectangle of twenty by ten meters. Each letter will have a width of three millimeters. The military airdromes will have a horizontal band three meters in width on the lower part of the letters right across same.

AVIATION QUERIES

Questions regarding aviation will be answered in this column of The Sunday Tribune. If a lengthy or personal answer is desired, send a stamped addressed envelope. Address Aviation Editor, The Chicago Tribune.

Book.

"Where can I get a good book on aviation? J. H."

Try any loop bookstore.

Motor.

"Has the Laird Swallow any 'reserve power'? What is the motor used? B. W."

The Swallow is powered with a Curtiss OX5 eight cylindered motor. It has considerable reserve power. The ship cruises along nicely at about 1,100 r. p. m.

Catapult.

"Is it possible to fly an airplane from the top of a building? F. F. V."

Yes, if the building is long enough. However, the newly invented catapult will solve those problems. A machine can be launched with a clear surface of about thirty-five feet providing there are no surrounding obstructions.

Speed.

"What is the landing speed of Sadi Lacointe's racing Nieuport-Delage airplane? F. L."

One hundred miles an hour in still air.

Indiana's Flying National Guard Forging Ahead

THE 137th observation squadron, air service, Indiana national guard, located at Kokomo, Ind., has received two new government steel hangars, and a contract to erect them complete, with concrete floors, has been let by the state, erection work to start at once.

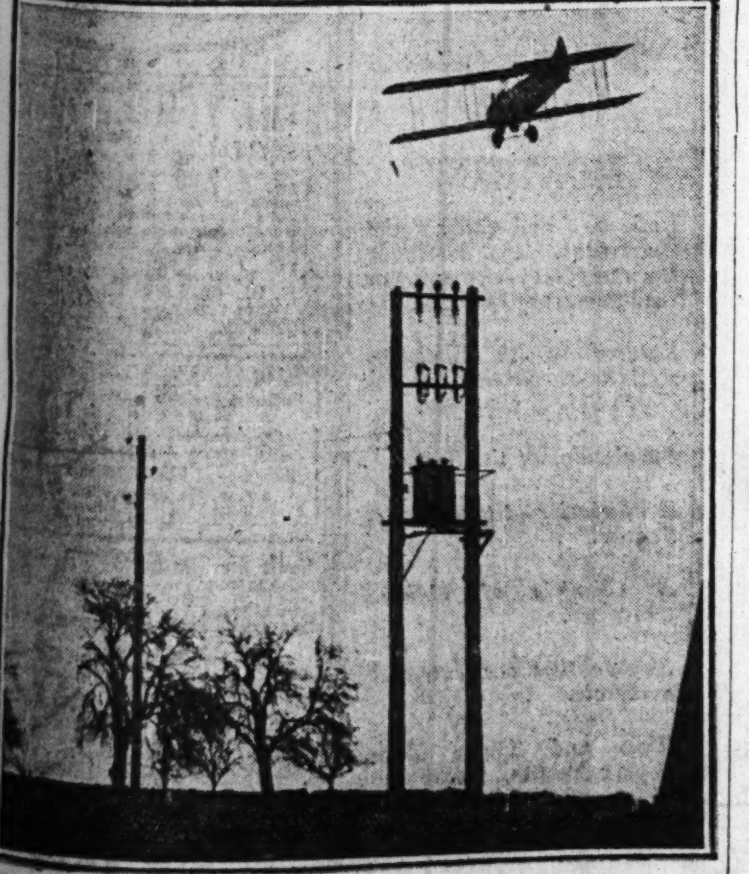
This squadron is the first air service unit to be federally recognized in the 5th corps area, and one of the first in the United States. The unit occupies the 100 acre flying field, owned and operated by the Curtiss Indiana company, which has one of the largest and best equipped flying fields in this country, being credited with 50,000 miles of flying with their twenty-seven ships in the last year.

The squadron is under the command of Maj. Wilber M. Fagley, and the officers are nearly all ex-army fliers. The enlisted personnel is composed of men picked from the automobile plants and other factories in Kokomo, and they are particularly well fitted for the various technical duties in connection with an organization of this type. The interest shown in this unit is evident from the fact that the total strength has increased 43 per cent during the last month, bringing the enlisted strength up to 127.

Balloon Race Date Changed.

Announcement has been made that the 1922 Gordon-Bennett balloon race will start from Geneva, Switzerland, on Aug. 6, instead of Sept. 2.

OUT OF THE MIST



The unseen hand of wireless telegraphy is guiding the above airplane through the morning mists of Paris. The invention—entirely new and made in France—is plucking the danger from night and cloud flying. The operator on the ground guides the airplane above buildings, over mountains, to landing fields, and anywhere he desires.

SHERIDAN PLAZA

A year ago THE SHERIDAN-PLAZA promised the citizens of Chicago and the traveling public hotel accommodations better in SERVICE, CUISINE, CLIENTELE and SITUATION.

These promises have been kept, for the major part of our guests are those who came to us when we opened.

There is an atmosphere of hominess about THE SHERIDAN-PLAZA. Transient guests notice this. Ladies unattended make THE SHERIDAN-PLAZA their home; business men leave their families in our care with a feeling of security. Our clientele is select. THE CONVENIENCE OF SITUATION IS EXCEPTIONAL.

We have some especially pleasant suites and detached rooms, each with bath, at particularly moderate rates, available April the first.

It will be a pleasure to confer with you regarding your requirements either by letter, phone or in person.

"Annexing Northern Europe" 1922 Travel Feature

Raymond-Whitcomb Provide Incomparable Trip to the European Field; New York, through "Continent," to New York; Sailing June 28

Plans for Discriminating Travellers Include Iceland and the Three Scandinavian Lands

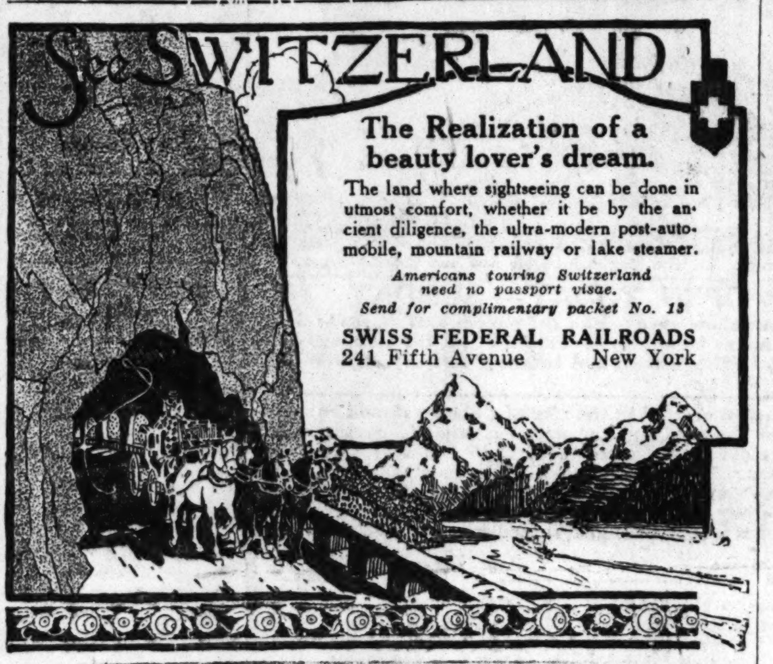
"Midnight Sun and North Cape Cruise" visits Norway, Sweden and Denmark and Passengers May Then Visit More Familiar Europe

"On to Europe" is the 1922 travel cry. Forty-three years ago Raymond-Whitcomb began planning how and where to take the best type of Americans to the best parts of Europe this year, and in the best way. Not only do they relieve even experienced travellers of all the daily annoyances and nuisances of self-managed travel, but they have done more: they have opened channels to the unfrequented and most beautiful parts of Europe—Iceland, and the Northern Countries, Norway, Sweden and Denmark, with a visit to Hamlet's Castle at Helsingor (a notable feature).

Raymond-Whitcomb have, indeed, annexed North Europe in 1922. On June 28 they send out from New York the beautiful "Floating Country Club," S.S. "Osterley," (18,100 tons displacement) the biggest and best ship to sail across the Arctic Circle from America, with a carefully selected group of congenial Americans, who want to see Iceland, the "Midnight Sun," the North Cape, to sail into the very heart of the Mountains, where the great ship passes within the glacier-lined, waterfall decorated Norwegian Fjords, and to call at quaint and ancient Viking ports and places.

The Cruise covers comfortable passage out bound on the "Osterley" and equivalent quarters home bound to New York or Boston, so the Cruise members sail carefree, knowing their daily comfort is insured from American taxicab to American taxicab again, with opportunities to visit any or all places in Europe meanwhile. The accommodations on the "Osterley" are exceptional, not only in comfort, but in range of selection—from berths at $675 up to suites de luxe—and the charge includes return passage.

Applications are now being received at the Raymond-Whitcomb offices. It is interesting to note that they are coming largely from veteran travellers, who not only want the new scenery and experiences afforded, but who know that travelling with Raymond-Whitcomb is indeed getting "The Best in Travel" in all ways always. Plans of the "Osterley" and returning ships are on file at the Raymond-Whitcomb Co.'s local office, 112 South Dearborn Street. Telephone State 6396. Personal application is, of course, the surest way, but inquiries may be made by telephone, mail or telegraph as well, only, to avoid disappointment, it will be well to act at once.



The Realization of a beauty lover's dream.

RESORTS AND HOTELS

And there's no smoke in the air, either F. J. Kihm

Here in the Rogers Park district of the city we have clean air. It's a joy to get up in the morning and find no soot on the window sill—and to know there's none on your clothes.

Clean, pure air! And such views as only this location can afford—across a waving sea of green or out over a tumbling lake of shimmering blue-and-white waves. It all goes to make life happier, more comfortable, more charming.

Then, what standard nature sets outside, we live up to inside the Rogers Park Apartment Hotel. Fine rooms, with big windows. Comfortable furniture, and soft, luxurious carpets and rugs. Sleep-inducing beds, and fine bedlinen soft to the touch. Adequate, really adequate bathrooms. And a dressing room. A real kitchenette, well equipped. Excellent refrigeration, and ever-fresh ice water. Servidors. Everything complete, new, built especially for us—and built right, as only long experience shows should be.

You can be very happy at the Rogers Park. It is convenient, pleasant, the very thing you've been looking for all these years. The restaurant, too, will meet your excellence of cooking. Come some evening for dinner, and let us show you—the dinner dance Thursday evenings, for instance, is especially arranged for diners-out. But whenever you come, you will be most welcome. I would be glad to make a definite appointment if you will be good enough to telephone in advance of your coming.

STILL IN THE ASCENDENCY !

Why is it that a business started only a few years ago has grown to be the largest of its kind in the world—and is still growing?

The answer is simple—the automobile is a thing of universal interest and whether it be in the home, the office, the club, or the golf course when the contemplated purchase of a high grade motor car is discussed, people say—"HARRIS & RODGERS"—"They have the largest and finest stock of high grade automobiles in the world and there you can obtain the most for the money"—

—"You can depend on their merchandise"—

—"You do not have to be an expert nor do you need the services of a mechanic when you buy a car from them"—

—"Their cars are sold with a standard new car guarantee and their service is unsurpassed"—

These and many other confidence inspiring statements that reflect the integrity and stability of HARRIS & RODGERS account for their astounding growth.

We realize that Chicago is too small a city in which to do the largest business in high grade automobiles in the world without giving each and every customer a square deal. Numbered among our patrons are some of the wealthiest and most prominent people in Chicago and the middle west.

Our stock of late model quality cars is carefully selected by experts—connoisseurs of fine automobiles—from the marts of America and bought for spot cash. It does not consist of a miscellaneous lot of "trade ins" in doubtful condition necessarily accumulated in the sale of new cars.

Our complete modern and efficient mechanical and coach departments specialize in adding the few important touches to these fine cars to put them in perfect condition so that they present the appearance of new and can be offered for sale with our ironclad standard new car guarantee. Our service to the owner is unexcelled. An inspection of these departments is open to you.

In our stock you will find such famous makes as:

PIERCE-ARROW
DANIELS LOCOMOBILE
PACKARD
MERCER MACFARLAN
MARMON
REVERE OGREN
CADILLAC
DELAGE FIAT
STUTZ

Limousines, town cars, sedans, coupes, roadsters, sports, and tourings.

In addition to the above you will find a select assortment consisting of such popular makes as Hudson, Buick, Studebaker, Haynes, Willys, and Stearns-Knights, Paige, etc.

YOU OWE IT TO YOURSELF to see what we have to offer before you spend your money elsewhere whether for a new or used car. We invite inspection and comparison whether you purchase or not. You may feel assured of courteous treatment.

This is an age of specialization. See us—we conduct the most highly specialized business of its kind in the world. WE CAN SAVE YOU MONEY!

RENEWED Marmon 34's

Use the "Marmon Score Card" before you decide on the purchase of any car—new or used. This score card method of comparison does not comprise any speedway stunts or spectacular demonstrations but an honest to goodness test of performance of different cars. Heretofore the Marmon Score Card was used only on new Marmon cars. Renewed Marmon 34s are now subject to the same mechanical tests. They are so thoroughly rebuilt we do not hesitate to subject them to new car tests. This is your assurance that a Renewed Marmon offers you greater motor car value than any new car selling at a like price. Stop in and look over our offerings. The prices will surprise you.

PACKARD

FRANKLIN CHUMMY ROADSTER, SERIES 9-B. This car was used in a small town and consequently has had very little mileage. In fact, the original tires are still on the car and in good condition. The paint is rather dull, but otherwise the car is first class throughout. The equipment is most complete and the price only $750.

PAIGE 1920 SPORT, MODEL 6-55. We believe that this car represents an exceptionally fine value. Has just been repainted throughout, the motor is in good condition and the cord tires considerably above the average which are turned in on cars. The equipment throughout is most complete. We are offering this car as a special at $1,000.

BIDDLE 4 PASS SPORT. For the young man desiring racy lines, speed, and a dependable operating car we are offering an exceptional opportunity. The car is in excellent mechanical condition; has 5 practically new tires. Paint has hardly a scratch and equipment is very complete. We are very fortunate in being able to offer this car for only $1,250.

STUTZ SPEEDSTER, 1919 MODEL. This popular car has been given exceptional care. The tires on the wheels are practically new. Paint is in excellent condition. Extra equipment includes 2 spare tires, 6 wire wheels, tire covers, rear vision mirror, spotlight, motometer, etc. No mechanical work is necessary. The car represents a sound value at $1,250.

RENAULT 4 PASS SPORT. This is one of the latest importations and practically new. The body is custom built and of the desirable low hung 4 passenger type. We have revarnished the car, which was all that was necessary to be done. Any one desiring a car which is out of the ordinary and impossible to duplicate for less than $9,000 will certainly be interested in this car at our extremely low price of $4,000.

PACKARD TWIN-SIX ROADSTER. This is our latest 1921 model. We have made all necessary mechanical repairs and refinished the entire car in Dull Gray with Fleetwood Blue fenders and chassis. It is the handsomest Roadster we have ever turned out, and, of course, carries new car guarantee and service. We advise an early inspection, as cars of this type are seldom available, especially at the low price of $3,000.

PACKARD TWIN-SIX CABRIOLET. This is the latest and current model chassis, with a special custom built 3 passenger body by C. P. Kimball & Co. The car is equipped with new tires; has been thoroughly rebuilt throughout and carries our new car guarantee and service. The body is in such perfect condition that it could be sold for new. This car represents a great saving at our price of $4,000.

MARMON 34
4 PASSENGER SPORT ROADSTER.
$1,750
A Wonderful Bargain!

The car we are offering is the most popular and successful model in the entire Marmon line.

From an appearance standpoint it will appeal to one who prefers a car of distinctive and smart appearance and quiet refinement. Color scheme is in burgundy wine with lighter red wheels silver lamps, radiator and windshield, with new Rookey tan seat covers and top boot. The entire car presents the appearance of new. Excellent cord tires.

Mechanically the car runs with all the "pep" that it did when it left the factory and is unusually quiet and smooth in its action. There is no easier car to drive nor more economical among the high grade motors than a Marmon and it is famous for its superb riding qualities over country roads.

This is an unusual value and will not be here long at the very low figure we are offering it. We suggest prompt action. Standard new car guarantee.

The few thousand miles of careful driving this car has had in the hands of an expert has only served to improve it. The motor is so quiet that it is scarcely audible and so smooth and free from vibration that a tumbler of water may be balanced on the radiator cap without disturbing the contents of the glass.

The car is beautifully finished in Rolls-Royce blue with black trimmings and presents the appearance of new.

Equipment consists of bumper, sunshade, excellent set of cord tires with one spare, special road spot light, windshield, cleaner, etc.

Wonderful value in a wonderful car for only $985. Standard new car guarantee.

With only a "handful" of hogs the closing day of the week values advanced 10@25c, the average price moving up to $10.20, equaling Monday, the previous high day of the week. Shipping orders were liberal and some went over unfilled, due to limited offerings. Part of a load reached $10.60, with carload lots at $10.55.

Week's arrivals of hogs fell a few short of 115,000, being 35,300 below the previous week and 26,400 smaller than the ten year average. Shipments for the week, however, at 34,000, increased 3,000, compared with the previous week, indicating a healthy condition in the trade from the supply and demand standpoint.

Hogs Are Coming Heavy.

While hog supplies are decreasing in numbers the weights are increasing. The estimated average last week at 240 lbs proved as heavy as any week since last October and 9 lbs above the ten year average. It is expected the average will continue to increase while supplies will decrease materially.

Unevenness featured last week's cattle trade, yet the general average price of good beef steers was the same as the previous week at $7.95, standing 35c lower than two weeks ago. Top cattle sold last week at $9.35 the same as the previous week.

Sheep and lambs underwent but slight change last week, best lambs selling up to $16.00, against $15.85 the previous week. Of the 72,500 sheep and lambs received last week, 25,000 were billed direct to packers and 22,500 were taken on shipping account by the east and feeders.

Monday's receipts are estimated at 17,000 cattle, 40,000 hogs, and 17,000 sheep, as against 22,603 cattle, 47,583 hogs, and 30,461 sheep a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at 56,000 cattle, 125,000 hogs, and 70,000 sheep, as against 46,359 cattle, 124,211 hogs, and 96,707 sheep a year ago and 10,316 cattle, 15,243 hogs, and 24,616 sheep the corresponding week two years ago, when railroad strikes curtailed receipts.

Next Monday's probable receipts of hogs are estimated at 38,000 to 55,000. John T. Brown and Harry Pattison marked 55,000; E. R. Gentry, 53,000; H. H. Moore, 50,000; E. S. Waterbury, 48,000; Robert Ellis, 45,000; F. W. Waddell, 44,000; F. Gehrmann, 40,000, and J. M. Waters, 38,000.

THEY'LL TELL YOU WHERE TO BUILD THAT NEW HOME

Realty Men to Talk Daily at the Coliseum.

If you're thinking of owning a home, but can't make up your mind where to locate, go down to the Coliseum, where the Own Your Home exposition opened yesterday for a seven day run, and hunt up the Chicago Real Estate board booth. You'll probably locate it with your ears quicker than with your eyes, for the prize spellbinders of the realty world have been chosen to tell daily about the merits of the various sections of the city and suburbs.

For instance, yesterday golden tongued orators dwelt loud and eloquently on why you should live on the north side. Today the beauties and attractions of the south suburbs will be painted in glowing word pictures.

Northwest Side Tomorrow.

The northwest side will be depicted by the realtor orators tomorrow; on Tuesday the north shore will be described; on Wednesday comes the southwest side; on Thursday the west side; Friday the south side, and on Saturday, April 1, the closing day, visitors will be told about the west suburbs.

And at the Chicago real estate board dining room there'll be a daily ten minute sales talk during lunch time. Tomorrow Isadore Whiteson will discuss "Own Your Home" week. Joseph P. White will talk on "Sales Methods Exposed" on Tuesday. John J. Ready will tell about "Putting Pep Into the Salesmen" on Wednesday. George W. Hemingway will tell "How We Do It in Oak Park" on Thursday, and on Friday Frederick Benduhn will discuss "The Story Behind the Sale."

Predicts Record Breaker.

Saturday, April 1, is Chicago real estate board day at the Coliseum. According to Manager Robert Sexton all records for attendance will be broken on that date—if every Chicago realtor goes to the Coliseum.

Brokers' Notes

D. E. Mulvey & Co., who started eight years ago at Jeffery avenue and 71st street with one small office, yesterday announced the opening of four new offices, giving them a total of seven, including headquarters in the loop. M. E. Mitchell, formerly with Butler Bros., is manager of the office opened yesterday at Lawrence and Avers avenues; William P. Ellis is manager of the office opened a week ago at Division street and 45th avenue; W. F. Quinn manages the new office at Cicero and 52d avenues, and P. C. Nelson is manager of the new south shore office. O. M. Mackie is the new executive at the present north side office, Broadway and Foster avenue. The company now has sixty salesmen.

John A. Longfield, who has been with Cochran & McCluer for the last thirteen years, is now manager of the renting department for Knipp & Krugel, 4804 Broadway.

MORE SOUTH STATE IMPROVEMENTS. The H. E. Bucklen estate is rebuilding its property at the southeast corner of State and 7th from plans by George C. Nimmons & Co. A chain store cigar concern is leasing the 13x30 corner shop. According to Leo Heller of the South State Street Improvement association, the alterations will cost $30,000.

The more you tell the quicker you sell!

·THE · TRIBUNE'S · WANT · AD · SLOGAN·

MR. A———, an affable gentleman of considerable parts, owned several vacant lots, one of which he desired to turn into an automobile by the simple expedient of offering to exchange with some one who had an automobile and wanted a good vacant lot. He was using this Want Ad, a much too retiring, modest little Want Ad, even as Want Ads go:

WANTED—AUTO: EXCHANGE VACANT lot and cash. Randolph 000. Mr. ———.

This ad ran along for a week without bringing him his automobile. In all probability the auto would have shown up if he had kept the Want Ad running long enough. But Mr. A——— wanted it right away. So he asked a Tribune Adtaker about it—she rearranged and rewrote the Want Ad on the plan that "the more you tell, the quicker you sell." Here is the second Want Ad:

HAVE YOU AN AUTO?
I HAVE A VACANT LOT AND CASH TO TRADE FOR ONE. SHOW ME YOUR CAR. MR. A———, RANDOLPH 000.

On the evening of the day this Want Ad appeared, a man phoned Mr. A———; the exchange was arranged, and the next day Mr. A——— was riding around in his automobile! "The more you tell, the quicker you sell!"

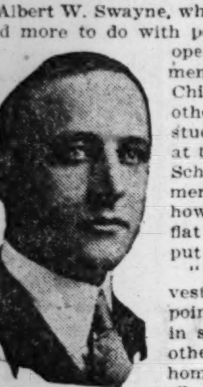
TELLS HOW CO-OP FLAT PROJECTS GET UNDER WAY

Expert Gives A B C of Own Your Own Apartment.

BY AL CHASE.



ALBERT W. SWAYNE.
[Mabel Sykes Photo.]

Albert W. Swayne, who probably has had more to do with popularizing coöperative apartment ownership in Chicago than any other realtor, told students of realty at the Y. M. C. A. School of Commerce on Tuesday how the own-your-flat projects are put in operation.

"From an investment standpoint, we feel safe in saying that no other form of home ownership affords as good return on the investment as an apartment in a coöperatively owned building," he said. "In addition to saving the profits accruing to the owner of a building under individual ownership, there is, by virtue of the plan, a saving in the cost of operation which in most instances will exceed 6 per cent per year of the full value of the property.

Items of Loss Eliminated.

"Many items of loss and expense which must be borne by the individual owner are eliminated entirely under the coöperative plan as we organize it; for example, managing and renting expense, vacancies, loss of rents, waste in decorating, advertising, abuse of building, etc. These items alone often exceed 25 per cent of the total rental value of the building.

"As a concrete example of an investment of a four room apartment in a building at 6040-50 Dorchester avenue, which we recently sold out on this plan, as compared with the rental of the same apartment over a period of five years, we submit the following figures:

RENTAL PLAN.
Rents, five years, at $75 per month...	$4,500
CO-OPERATIVE PLAN.
Initial purchase of stock........	$1,890
Estimated assessments, 5 years	2,587
Total outlay	4,477
Cash saving	$ 23
Book value of stock, end of five years	2,849
NET PROFIT UNDER CO-OPERATIVE PLAN	$2,872

Mr. Swayne then pointed out that next to the responsibility of the selling concern the vital point in the whole plan lies in the character of the people who become tenant-owners. He described how the building corporation is formed and a suitable building selected. The capital stock ordinarily is exactly equivalent to the equity to be purchased, which means it is fully paid up and invested in the building, which the company owns subject to fixed mortgages to be paid off by revenue derived from other sources.

Must Have Cash Reserve.

Mr. Swayne says a cash reserve of $2,000 or $3,000 should be created by means of a paid in surplus from the sale of stock at slightly above par—this to protect against emergency expenses.

"The entire capital stock is apportioned among the apartments and the relative value of each flat expressed in shares of stock," said Mr. Swayne. "The value of these shares for any flat represents the investment required to qualify for the coöperative plan. The apportionment is made in the bylaws so that it remains fixed.

"The owner of the required number of shares is then entitled to a special stockholder's lease on a flat which is issued by the corporation on approval of the directors. This is done to control the sale and transfer of stock and keep it out of undesirable hands. The lease also establishes the means of fixing the rent to be paid, which we choose to call assesments, and to provide methods of assignment and subletting of apartments. The only restrictions we've made on assignment are that the new party must be acceptable to the directors and buy the stockholder's shares. Subletting is limited to one year at a time and to approved parties.

"Instead of fixed rent the cost of operating the building and organization is divided up among the owners each year, using the number of shares or number of rooms, whichever is more equitable, as the basis for determining each individual's quota.

"In order to provide funds as needed an estimate is made by the directors at the beginning of each year of the amount necessary for the coming year. This estimate or budget includes all items of upkeep, such as fuel, taxes, janitor hire, repairs, etc., interest on mortgages, and required prepayments on principal of mortgages.

The total is apportioned and a so-called "assessment" levied on each apartment or lease for the proper portion, payable in equal monthly installments in advance. The matter of decorations is not included in the budget but is left to the individual, who can spend as much or little as he pleases.

May Drawn on Surplus.

"In the event the estimate falls short of actual needs, the directors may draw on the surplus fund, replenishing the fund out of the next year's assessments, or by resolution, make emergency assessment to make up the shortage, apportioned and payable in the same way as the regular assessments.

"The management of the building, as well as the other affairs of the corportion, is placed in the board of directors, elected annually by the stockholders. Officers serve without pay.

"You probably will ask how general may this movement become in Chicago, and from our ejperience we must say that it'll probably not be very general among apartment buildings as now built. Our greatest difficulty is to find buildings of twenty-four apartments or more adapted to our purpose. The organization expenses involved make the use of smaller buildings impracticable, as we've found the expense and time in handling a twenty-one apartment building practically the same as a thirty-six.

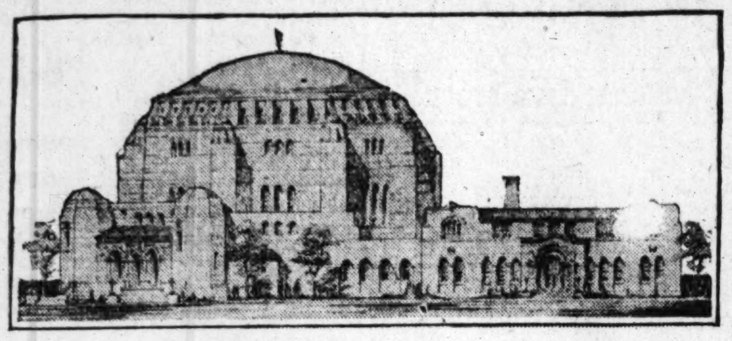
Five Room Flats Most Popular.

"Two and three room apartments can't be successfully handled as permanent homes; some fours and some sixes are salable, but the great demand is for five rcom flats, and the modern buildings now constructed run to smaller units.

"In New York, where coöperative ownership has attained its greatest prominence, and where last year over $400,000,000 worth of property changed hands on that basis, the buildings used are chiefly new structures constructed with coöperative ownership in view, and in our opinion the future operations in Chicago will largely lie along the same line.

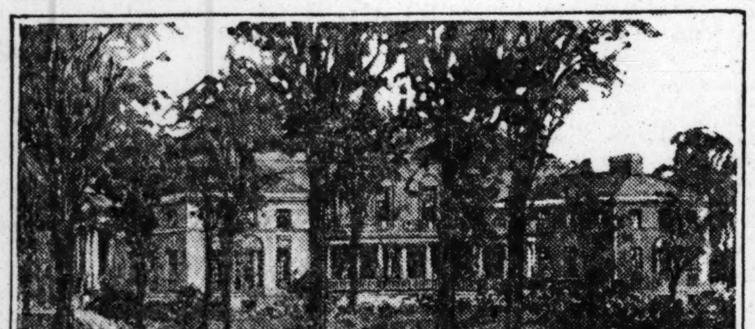
"But when the architect shall be found who can design a thirty-six apartment building where every flat shall be the SECOND FLOOR FRONT, the great unsolved problem of coöperative ownership shall have been solved."

New $600,000 Isaiah Temple



Above is a sketch of the new $600,000 Isaiah temple to be erected at the northeast corner of Greenwood avenue and Hyde Park boulevard from plans by Architect Alfred S. Alschuler in the early Byzantine style. The main auditorium will seat 1,600. It is flanked by a community house and school on the boulevard. Isaiah temple was the first Jewish congregation to locate in Hyde Park. It was founded in 1896 and held services at the Oakland club until three years later the synagogue at Vincennes and 45th was dedicated. This was outgrown, and the present property, the former Counselman residence, was bought, and will continue to be used till the new temple is ready. Nathan Herzog, president, says work will begin in the near future. Dr. Joseph Stolz has been rabbi since the congregation was formed. Other officers are: Adolph Kraus, temporary president; Barnett Faroll, vice president; A. B. Seelenfreund, secretary; Sig M. Lederer, treasurer; Louis M. Katz, chairman of the promotion committee, and Maurice Taussig of the building committee.

New Home of Oak Park Club



Holabird & Roche have designed the proposed new $300,000 home of the Oak Park club to be built at the southeast corner of Oak Park avenue and Ontario street, overlooking Scoville park, Oak Park's attractive civic center, which already has the public library, Y. M. C. A., postoffice, and Christian Science church facing it.

At the Two Realty Boards

If you want to get a line on your boss, your employer, or yourself, drop into the Cook County Real Estate board rooms on Tuesday at 2:30 and hear William Windsor, who has degrees of LL. B. and Ph. D. from Wisconsin and Ruskin universities and whose home town is Pittsburgh, give tests on character reading of the members present. He also will speak on "Temperamental Psychology as Applied to Business." Dr. Windsor is the greatest living authority on temperamental psychology, according to Miss Helen M. McCullough, manager of the realty board.

Business Manager J. Soule Warterfield after weary hours of figuring announces that it'll cost you just $278.75 to go to the coast and back on the national realty convention special, which leaves Chicago May 19 and gets back on June 8. A side trip to Alaska has been decided on by twenty realtors, with a prospect of more joining when they hear about it. Charles M. Nichols is back of this northland jaunt.

The board of governors of the renting division of the Chicago Real Estate board has passed resolutions recommending that all members give no painting or decorating contracts to any contractors except those who are following the Landis award.

$300,000 CLUB FOR OAK PARK CIVIC CENTER

Oak Park's rapidly developing civic center surrounding Scoville park is going to have one of its most important additions in the proposed $300,000 home of the Oak Park club, designed by Holabird & Roche, to be erected at the southeast corner of Oak Park avenue and Ontario street, across the street and south of the Christian Science church, and just north of the Y. M. C. A.

It will have a large swimming pool, locker room, exercise room, and six bowling alleys in the basement. A dining room seating 400, a large billiard room, men's lounge, a card room, and the kitchen and service room will be on the main floor. On the second floor will be an auditorium and ballroom seating 850 with a balcony and a completely equipped stage, the library, women's clubroom, and directors' room.

The present membership drive, according to W. H. Hodge, is rapidly nearing the 600 mark. A few weeks ago there were only 300 members. Work will start within a few weeks on the clubhouse. The old clubhouse at North boulevard and Park place burned in 1920.

Some Building Projects

Architects Monaco & Wright report that work will start on a thirty flat building on the west side of Sheffield avenue, half a block north of Waveland, in two weeks, to be completed in the late summer. It will cost $95,000 and contain two, three, and four room apartments. E. C. Peterson is owner.

The same architects drew plans for a third story addition to the Associated Silver company's two story building at the southwest corner of Sunnyside and Ravenswood avenues, and work is now under way, with completion set at May 1.

Further details on the reported plans for improvements at Halsted and 69th have been given out by Architect David Saul Klafter. The southwest corner will have a terra-cotta front two story store and office building 100x125, containing thirty offices, space for a restaurant and twelve stores, to cost $175,000. Several stores and half the offices already have been rented, according to the owner, Joseph Optner.

Mr. Klafter also has let contracts for another similar building for the same owner at 6930-36 South Halsted, to contain five stores and thirty-two offices, to cost $100,000.

Negotiations for a bank tenant are under way. Flats will rent from $75 to $125. Louis J. Rubin and A. D. Marks are owners.

News of the Architects

RALPH C. HARRIS.
[Moffett Photo.]

Byran H. Jillson, architect for Swift & Co. for thirteen years, has formed a partnership with Ralph C. Harris, secretary of the Illinois Society of Architects, who has been practicing independently for the last twelve years. Offices will be in the present suite of Mr. Harris in the State-Lake building.

C. Howard Crane of Detroit, who is associated with Kenneth Franzheim, Chicago architect, has at last after two years of obstacles, obtained his Illinois architect's license. Probably the most outstanding work of these two architects is the Roosevelt theater and the Selwyn and Harris theaters now building.

The buildings with two five room flats will sell for $12,850 and those with sixes for $13,650. Mr. Soeffing bought the property from the Sisters of Charity of the B. V. M. for a reported $48,000. Architect Pridmore Plans Art Room for Cort Theater

Architect J. E. O. Pridmore, who designed the Cort and many other playhouses, has drawn plans for a new social lounge and art room for the Cort theater as well as a new ladies' boudoir and men's smoking room. The mezzanine lounge will be retained but these new public rooms will remedy the present overtaxed condition. Contracts have been let and work will be started as soon as possible, U. J. Herrman announces.

RADIOPHONE IN EVERY APARTMENT IS LATEST WRINKLE

"Yes, madame, we have a radiophone in every apartment," probably will soon be the reply of realty men to the prospective flat dweller who wants to know if it's the absolutely latest and up to datest building he has on his list.

Schoenlank & Kirschner, uptown realtors, are training their renting forces to talk like Thomas A. Edisons about wireless and its advantages in the modern apartment.

"Charles Pegler and James Griggs are putting up the first flat building in Chicago to be equipped with a main radio aerial and outlet in each living room for radio equipment," said Herbert H. Schoenlank. "It's at 1349-55 Greenleaf avenue. Every apartment will have a radiophone and in addition the living and dining rooms will be arranged so that if one has guests they can dance to wireless jazz or listen to concerts or lectures. We've had several inquiries already from radio enthusiasts and believe it's going to be a big hit with the public. If it is, probably all flats will be equipped with wireless from now on."

Hugo J. Liedberg is architect of the radio flat building. There are twenty-four apartments, and the opening date is set for Sept. 1.

S. W. Straus & Co. have made a $500,000 construction loan to Carl Edward on the land and four story building being erected at the northwest corner of South Park and 63d, announced several months ago. W. Scott Armstrong is architect.
